HORNER SIGNS BILL TO FORCE TAX COLLECTION

Provides Receiver for Properties.

Vote on June 5

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 28 (Friday).—[Special.]—The greatest blow ever dealt tax dodgers, in the words of Mayor Kelly, was struck by the state senate at 12:30 a. m. today when it passed the Skarda tax receivership bill by a vote of 44 to 2. The bill, already having passed the house, was taken to Gov. Horner and he signed it at 1:28 a. m. in the presence of a number of Chicagoans, including the mayor.

The Skarda bill will make it possible for county treasurers in Illinois to take over properties on which taxes have been delinquent more than six months and operate them until sufficient income is produced to retire the tax indebtedness.

Mayor Kelly Present.

The extraordinary session of the senate was held in the presence of Mayor Kelly. He sat beside Lieut. Gov. Donovan on the rostrum.

The bill was put to third reading yesterday. Enough senators remained for the post-midnight session to insure 44 favorable votes. It needed only 34 under the emergency clause.

The two voting against the bill were Searcy and Woods, both Republicans.

Most of those who explained their votes admitted they were conferring extraordinary powers upon county treasurers, but they felt, they said, that the emergency was great and hoped that the power would not be misused.

Senator Searcy of Springfield denounced the bill as representing "public acknowledgment of what I fear is the beginning of a complete breakdown of the general property taxing system. The taxpayers should be put in a better mood. This bill will only make them madder."

Would Reassure Taxpayers.

After the vote this morning Treasurer McDonough of Cook county said:

"I want to assure the general assembly and tax paying public that the power vested in the county treasurer by this bill will not be misused. I want to repeat to small home owners what I have said to member of the legislature, that the authority given me by this bill will not be used against them, but will be directed against delinquent taxpayers who owe huge sums in back taxes and who have the financial ability to pay the greater part of them. Heretofore I have had no statutory authority to compell these payments.

"I want to say to the taxpayers that where it becomes necessary for the county treasurer to seek appointment as receiver the proceedings will be so conducted that there will be no additional costs for attorneys or receivers' fees.

"I intend to call a conference of the heads of the local governments to be held in my office Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of submitting to them a plan for collecting the greatest amount of taxes in the shortest space of time."

Chicagoans Ask Passage.

Mayor Kelly and Corporation Counsel Sexton of Chicago had appealed to the Illinois senate during the day to follow the lead of the house and pass the Skarda bill.

With the mayor came the largest delegation of Chicago officials seen here in many a day. President Orville J. Taylor of the board of education, State's Attorney Courtney, the majority and minority leaders of the city council, Ald. J. M. Arvey and Oscar F. Nelson, Chairman P. A. Nash of the Democratic county committee, County Treasurer McDonough, aldermen, sanitary district and school trustees were present. Most of them talked for the bill; all favored it.

Mayor Kelly's appeal was simple and direct. He appeared, he said, "as mayor of the city of Chicago begging of you in behalf of starving people to rush this legislation, particularly the Skarda bill.

"If it is passed," he said, his voice carrying clearly through the quiet,

NEW RAIL BILL CALLS FOR YEAR OF U. S. CONTROL

Co-ordinator Plan Is Proposed.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—A federal coördinator of transportation is provided for in a bill that is now on President Roosevelt's desk. Under this bill the railway coordinator has power to relieve the railroads from the operation of the anti-trust laws, the interstate commerce commission act, and state and federal laws for an emergency period of one year. This information was revealed today when a copy of the bill became available.

Under the emergency bill the railroads of the nation would be divided into three groups—an eastern, southern, and western—and each group ruled by a regional coördinating committee to consist of five members each. The railroads in each group would select the members of the committee representing that group. In selecting these committees the carriers would vote in proportion to their mileage.

Strikes at Duplication.

As enunciated in the act, the purposes of the measure are to encourage action by the carriers which will avoid unnecessary duplication of services: to control accessorial services, including air lines, bus lines, and trucks; to avoid wastes and preventable expenses; to promote financial reorganization of the capital structure of the carriers so as to reduce fixed charges, and to provide for the immediate study of other means of improving transportation.

Unless there is further delay and amendments are made to the bill, President Roosevelt probably will forward it to congress by Saturday or Monday.

The bill preserves collective bargaining by the railway unions and declares that it shall not be construed so as to amend or modify in any way the railway labor act or contracts entered into under the act.

Employés Get Hearings.

Seeking to further protect labor another provision of the act states that the coördinator shall provide means whereby central committees selected by railway labor oganizations in each of the groups "shall be advised of any contemplated orders requiring changes in services or operation which will affect the interests of the employés and he shall confer freely with such committee before issuing any such order."

The Association of Railway Labor Executives will meet tomorrow to consider the bill and decide upon its policy. In railroad labor circles tonight preliminary discussion indicated dissatisfaction with some features of the bill. It was said that the bill gave no assurances against wholesale discharges of employés in effecting economies. The labor contention is that, while the unions will not object to economies in railroad operation, they will insist that the human element should receive the utmost consideration before decisions affecting the men's livelihood are taken. They would limit the labor economies to the normal turnover of deaths, resignations, or related causes.

Unions May Ask Change.

The railway unions probably will seek to strengthen that part of the bill dealing with recognition of the unions so as to eliminate if possible recognition of company unions by the carriers.

Wide power is given in the bill to the three regional committees to initiate economies voluntarily. If they are unable to agree voluntarily they are directed to ask the coördinator to act. The coördinator is empowered to issue and enforce orders in furtherance of the act, and these orders are to remain in force until vacated, suspended, or set aside by the interstate commerce commission.

"Any order so issued by the coordinator may provide for the creation and administration of such just pooling arrangements or for such compensation as he may deem necessary or desirable and in furtherance of the purposes of this act," the bill states.

Full Information Required.

Provision is made for the furnishing of full information to the coördinator by the committees, the carriers and the I. C. C., in order to enable the coördinator to make a complete investigation of any aspect of the railroad situation. This section of the bill is strengthened by the provision that if a regional committee fails to act on any matter brought to its attention by the coördinator, the latter may issue an order "giving appropriate direc-

Foshay Juror Escapes Jail by Ending Life

St. Paul, Minn., April 27.—[Special.]—Mrs. Genevieve A. Clark of Minneapolis will not serve the six months' term for contempt of court imposed on her as a result of her service as a juror in the trial of W. B. Foshay, utility promoter, and six associates on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

The bodies of Mrs. Clark, of her husband, Daniel D. Clark, real estate dealer, and their two children were found tonight in an automobile about fifteen miles south of St. Paul, in Scott county. Death apparently was due to carbon monoxide poisoning and authorities expressed the opinion the husband and wife had committed suicide.

A hose had been attached to the exhaust pipe and conducted into the car, all the windows of which were closed.

Only Woman on Jury.

The trial of Foshay was held in 1931. Mrs. Clark was the only woman selected on the jury and in the deliberations she was the only one who held out for acquittal, eleven jurymen holding that Foshay was guilty on seventeen counts of an indictment for fraud. A mistrial resulted. Later Foshay and an associate were retried and convicted.

Investigation by the government showed that Mrs. Clark had failed to inform the court when she was being questioned for jury service that she was once an employé of Foshay. The latter had a spectacular career in the northwest and sold millions of dollars of stocks through his promotion schemes.

Mrs. Clark was sentenced to the jail term for contempt in the federal court in December, 1931. An appeal was taken and it was not until last Friday that the Supreme court of the United States upheld the sentence.

Relatives Ask Police Aid.

A federal bench warrant for Mrs. Clark was issued on Monday when she failed to appear to start serving the term in prison. On Tuesday relatives of the Clarks, anxious because they could not be found, asked the aid of the police in a search for them. A farmhand tonight told Scott county investigators that the car containing the bodies had been parked on the lonely road where it was found since Wednesday at noon.

YOUNG MR. HORA DOESN'T WANT LUMPS ON HIM

"I want to give myself up," said a young man last night to Leo Anderson, secretary to Deputy Chief of Detectives William Blaul. "My name is Fred Hora. I live at 4711 North Campbell avenue. This afternoon I was fined $50 by Judge Joseph McGarry in the South State street court for disorderly conduct. I didn't pay the fine and escaped from the court, but when I got home my father told me he'd put lumps all over my body if I didn't hurry right down to the detective bureau."

He was locked up, although the police said the Municipal court bailiff's office had not reported the escape. Hora, who is six feet tall, said he escaped by climbing through a transom of the detention room at the court, which is on the eighth floor of the police building at 11th and State streets.

Await Report on Woodward in Congress

(Pictures on Back Page.)

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special]—Impeachment proceedings against Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward of Chicago will be instituted in the house of representatives by Representative Adolph Sabath [Dem., Ill.], if the Chicago Bar association report reproving the judge for his actions in receivership matters warrants such action. Mr. Sabath said tonight that he had wired to Chicago for a copy of the report. The congressman said he had received numerous complaints against the conduct of Judge Woodward.

FEES TOTAL $256,400

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward was the subject of a Chicago Bar association report on receivership practices made public yesterday. The report, prepared by a special committee of the association, stressed frequent appointments by the judge of the law firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson, of which his son, Harold C. Woodward, was an employé, as counsel in receivership and bankruptcy cases.

Fees allowed the firm in ten receivership cases and four bankruptcy cases totaled $256,400, of which $178,150 was allowed by Judge Woodward, $60,750 by Judge James H. Wilkerson and $17,500 by Judge Walter C. Lindley.

List Fees and Judges.

The fees allotted the law firm and the judges by whom they were allowed, as listed in the Bar association report are:

Farmers Twist Neck in Noose; He's Defiant

Le Mars, Ia., April 27.—[Special.—In the power of a mob of radical farmers, with a noose around his neck and with a dozen stalwart men waiting to hang him high upon an electric light pole a half mile out of Le Mars, a white haired judge of the District court, saved his life this afternoon by a display of courageous dignity and an appeal to Providence.

Undaunted, the judge, C. C. Bradley, more than 60 years old and a veteran of the Iowa bench, faced his tormentors. A hundred of them had invaded his courtroom as he was dispensing justice, had seized, slapped and choked him and then, with the apparent intention of giving a demonstration of lynch law, a dozen or so had hustled him outside of town in a truck.

Smear Grease on Jurist's Face.

They then had crowned him with a smeary hub cap from the truck. They had wiped grease upon his face. Into the grease they had rubbed the black dirt of Iowa, the good black dirt that makes the land that bears the mortgages that have driven Iowa agriculturists to the desperate methods of revolutionists. They had tied a handkerchief over his eyes.

Next the masked leader of the mob had affixed the noose and had given Judge Bradley a command.

"Swear," he said, "that you never will sign another foreclosure action against an Iowa farm."

"I cannot swear that," replied the judge.

Refuses to Swear, Rope Tightens.

The rope tightened around the jurist's neck.

"Swear."

"I cannot." Again Judge Bradley refused to swear.

The stalwarts on the rope leaned back. The body of the judge rose, just for an instant, from the ground. The hands of the hangmen loosened. Judge Bradley collapsed. Then he revived. Again he was ordered to swear he would not sign foreclosures. Again he refused. Then the mob removed his trousers and filled them with dirt.

"Then pray," cried the leader of the mob: "pray for farmers."

"Gladly," said the judge. "Gladly."

Tin Crown on Head, He Prays.

And with his tin crown upon his head, and still blindfolded, Judge Bradley knelt in the roadway next to the pole that might have been his gibbet, and prayed.

"O, Lord, I pray Thee, do justice to all men," he said in a clear voice.

Observers reported that the simple prayer marked a change in the whole affair. Five masked men who had held the rope rushed to an automobile and sped away. Others took the blindfold from the judge, and one farmer offered him a ride to town. The judge declined and trudged away on foot. He was picked up a few hundred yards away by the Rev. J. J. Depree, passing in a car.

Prefers Not to Discuss Attack.

At his home a little later the judge said that he was all right, that he was not hurt, and that he preferred not to discuss the matter. He indicated that he did not wish to prosecute the farmers.

The disorders among the farmers began at Primghar, Ia., 50 miles northeast of Le Mars, shortly after noon. About 500 of the radicals gath-

DENY U. S. PLANS TO GRANT NEW DEBTS HOLIDAY

Roosevelt Seeks to Separate Issues.

Gold Power Granted

Power for President to reduce gold content of dollar written into administration's inflation bill by senate vote of 53 to 35, with reduction limited to 50 per cent. Eleven Democrats vote against grant of power, including Senator Carter Glass, former secretary of the treasury, who charges in speech devaluation of gold dollar would mean "repudiation," "dishonor," and be "immoral." (Details on page 3.)

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—The United States will not grant a moratorium on the war debts payments due June 15, it was stated tonight by a spokesman of the Roosevelt administration.

America will cling to the hope, it was declared, that even if the debt issue is left raging and even if France and other nations continue in default the greater purposes of the world economic conference, aimed at the restoration of world trade and world prosperity, can still be accomplished.

President Roosevelt was portrayed as intent upon divorcing the debt issue completely from the issues of tariff revision, monetary stabilization, and other trade restoratives included in the world economic program.

French Default Expected.

And so, clarifying the maze of rumors beclouding Washington ever since the arrival of the French advocates of cancellation, the Roosevelt administration has made it plain that:

France is expected to default on the $41,000,000 falling due on June 15, although there is reason to believe she may strive for whatever measure of good will might be gained by paying the $19,000,000 due since last December.

England is expected to meet her payment of $76,000,000, but in silver instead of gold, under a proposal now pending in congress and indorsed today by President Roosevelt.

France Asks Leniency.

Rumors that Mr. Roosevelt had promised to ask congress to postpone the French June payment if she would meet the December were officially denied. Instead it was authoritatively stated that France had come to America's shores half submissive and half aggressive, to plead that the United States should not press her too hard if she did default on the June payment.

Tomorrow morning official statements will be made by the White House and by Edouard Herriot, delegate of France to these international conversations with President Roosevelt.

M. Herriot revealed tonight in a general press conference that he expects a tariff truce to be agreed upon under which, pending the world economic conference, the nations will not engage in a trade war based upon uncertainty of money values.

It also is expected that within a short time, and also prior to the conference, England, France, and the United States will come to an agreement on a temporary stabilization of the pound, the dollar, and the franc.

No Agreement on Debt.

The Roosevelt-Herriot public statements will hold that no agreement with respect to the debt was reached or broached. The United States has not even agreed to treat France's approaching default as pardonable, as the French desired.

But while the Roosevelt administration will take such a stand, it is believed that the President, in advance of the world economic conference, will present to congress a plan for meeting the debt controversy.

He will not propose, it is now believed, that he be given full authority to barter with the debtor nations and make settlements he considers wise. But he may ask, according to informed Democratic leaders, that congress name a committee of both houses to sit with him and his administrative leaders to study the whole debt question. Pending a completion of this study he may propose that he be given authority, not to suspend any debt payments, but to receive them conditionally, granting the nations which pay the right to have those payments reckoned into whatever final settlement might be agreed on.

While the Roosevelt-MacDonald official communique declared that no agreement had been reached on the debt question, it was considered probable that Mr. MacDonald had expressed the view that England could meet the June payment better in silver than in gold. India, owing England great sums, has large stores of silver for which there is no market at present.

May Accept More Silver.

The proposal of accepting payments in silver is included in the pending inflation bill, and today Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who has sat in on the various meetings with British and French experts, announced that the administration supported an amendment increasing the amount which might be received in silver from 100 million dollars to 200 millions.

The proposal is to accept the silver on a valuation of 50 cents to the ounce, which is some 30 per cent above the present market value of about 33 cents per ounce. If England could obtain a quantity of silver, at the present market price, sufficient to meet her payment, she would save some 30 per cent under what would be required if the payment were to be made in gold.

France has no such source of silver, and would be forced to buy it if she considered meeting the June payment.

Expect Silver to Go Up.

The move is also calculated to raise the value of silver on the world market, which it is believed would result in a general economic improvement. But it is reckoned that no such sum as 200 million dollars in silver could be raised, by all the debtor nations combined, at a price within 50 cents an ounce, so that in the long run the United States would not suffer the indicated 30 per cent loss.

It was made plain today on behalf of the administration that in his conversations with foreign delegates President Roosevelt is not playing the debts question against tariff and monetary issues and he does not expect, conversely, that the other nations will insist upon playing debt payments against the general economic solutions.

The attitude of the President, it was declared, is one of remaining silent on the debts, if it appears that they will not be paid, but on the other hand, of pressing with full vigor for a settlement of the problems held to be at the base of the world depression. It was asserted emphatically that each of the questions must be settled independently of each other.

Seeks to Allay Fears.

Senator Pittman, whose abandonment of the experts' sessions today to go to the capitol was taken as a movement by the administration to forestall a deluge of denunciatory oratory in congress over the debt rumors, also sought to allay the senators' fears that the United States was being plunged into a pact to defend European nations in case of war over there.

The senator asserted that the United States would never enter into a consultative pact with European nations carrying an agreement that this country would be bound to perform any specific action in case of war.

"This nation," he said, "will side with the other nations in attempts to effect disarmament, and will join in movements to that end. But we will not enter into agreement where our policy may be determined by a vote of a number of foreign conferees."

Awaits Roosevelt Offer Before Acting.

PARIS, April 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's ability to swing congress into line regarding war debts and disarmament was the chief concern today of the French press, in reporting Premier Daladier's preparations for paying the defaulted French debt installment to America.

Developments in Washington generally impressed newspapers and official circles alike. Great attention was accorded the possibility that the $19,261,432 installment may be paid when Edouard Herriot returns from his talks in Washington.

The initiative in paying the installment now depends on what Herriot can produce from the White House conversations which will satisfy parliament that a moratorium will be granted for the duration of the world economic conference.

Gold Supply Decreases.

Financial quarters today attributed a recent decrease in gold held by the Bank of France to British purchases and discounted the idea of private hoarding. The gold coverage for the week ended April 21 increased, however, from 77.57 per cent to 77.69 per cent. This was attributed to diminished circulation. The financial paper, L'Information, said that "the technical situation of the franc thus appears to be more solid than ever."

A Franco-British financial agreement said to involve a temporary loan to France of a portion of the francs in the British equalization fund is still hanging fire, it was reliably reported.

Some opposition to the scheme developed today in parliamentary circles, which fear that French financial independence will be lost by the agreement.

Predict Currency War.

The French press, meanwhile, predicted a currency war unless an agreement can be reached with Great Britain and America.

"America is asking Europe to choose between international cooperation and a tariff war," one financial writer said, "and she is leaving it to be understood that unless a reasonable solution is found, a currency war could reinforce the tariff war."

The French government has been strongly impressed by President Roosevelt's interest in a consultative pact for the security of peace. An official spokesman said it was a "distinct evolution in American policy" of the greatest importance. He said the attitude on the consultative plan and friendliness over the debt situation have created a new feeling.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichsbank, who is en route to the United States to participate in President Roosevelt's economic discussions, today told Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France, that Germany would maintain the gold standard. It was Dr. Schacht's first visit to Paris in an official capacity since he walked out on a Young plan conference in 1929. He spent three hours with Moret.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—Representative Walter M. Pierce [Dem., Ore.] was removed to the Naval hospital tonight after becoming ill at his office. His condition was described as in no way critical. Dr. George W. Calver, capitol physician, who was called to the house office building and ordered the former governor of Oregon to the hospital after an examination, explained it was considered best that he not go home immediately.

CUBA DECREES RESTRICTION ON GOLD SHIPMENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, April 27.—Drastic restriction of Cuban gold shipments abroad was ordered today by Octavio Averhoff, secretary of the treasury.

Although the administration has not decreed a gold embargo, it is understood to be ready to enforce such a measure through presidential action should shipments to foreign countries continue.

"The administration will not hesitate to adopt steps to prevent gold hoarding or its exodus," Averhoff said. "Strict vigilance of gold monetary stocks is being enforced, and if necessary a gold embargo will be decreed to prevent depletion of Cuba's reserves."

Fire Wipes Out Half Block at Enfield, Ill.

Enfield, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—Fire destroyed eight business buildings at 4 o'clock this morning, causing damage estimated at $30,000. Flames wiped out half a block of the business section.

BRITAIN LINES UP 3 NATIONS WITH TRADE TREATIES

Restrictions Are Lowered to Aid Commerce.

LONDON, April 27.—(AP)—Trade agreements with Denmark, Agentina, and Germany were announced today by the British government to enlarge Great Britain's foreign markets.

Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, and Julio A. Roca, vice president of Argentina and head of a commercial delegation to Europe, initialed a commercial pact in which "all points of principle" were agreed upon.

Subsequent negotiations in Buenos Aires will deal with tariffs, but authentic reports said the understanding involves a loan by a British financial house aggregating $38,000,000 to run for twenty years.

Germany Raises Coal Quota.

Under the Anglo-German reciprocal trade and tariff concessions, the United Kingdom granted tariff changes in a limited field in return for an increase of the quota for British coal exports to Germany from 100,000 tons a month to 180,000 tons. This will be increased in proportion to the increase in German consumption of coal.

The United Kingdom granted Germany tariff concessions on certain musical instruments, clocks, optical instruments, toys, imitation jewelry, certain acids, and a few other similar products.

The Danish market for British industrial products will be increased by the Anglo-Danish agreement in return for larger quotas for Danish agricultural products in Great Britain. Both chambers of the Danish parliament ratified the treaty today.

Aim to Thaw Credits.

Runciman gave no details about the arrangements with Argentina except to say that the "cotton textile industry has been considered in this case."

Definite details will not be divulged. It is expected, until the formal ratification, but it was learned that the agreement has two principal parts, one involving exchange, which provides for the thawing of frozen pesos in Argentina so that English exporters can get money for goods sold and British owners of railroad and other stocks in Argentina can get their dividends.

Entailed in this is a grant by Baring Brothers of a £10,000,000 loan for twenty years at four per cent interest, to be issued at par, with amortization to begin after five years. The loan was considered more in the light of a credit.

In return for exchange concessions, Britain agrees to a meat deal by which Argentine producers may export virtually up to the level prevailing before the British imperial agreements were concluded at Ottawa last year.

DOUGLAS PROMISES BALANCED BUDGET, CURBED INFLATION

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—L. W. Douglas, director of the federal budget, promised that the national budget would be balanced, that the credit of the federal government would be kept unimpaired and that uncontrolled inflation would be prevented in an address tonight. He spoke at a dinner of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers association in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

"This task of balancing the budget is in process of accomplishment," he said: "I am sorry I can't say that it has been accomplished, but I can say that it will be accomplished, and when I say that I mean it.

"There are many ways in which this balancing of federal expenditures and receipts can be expressed, such as employment and happy and contented homes. There could be nothing more unfair to the people as a whole, to the war veterans, to the federal employés, to holders of insurance policies, and all others, than budgetary or uncontrolled inflation, and for that reason the credit of your government and my government must be kept unimpaired."

WORLD IS TOLD U. S. WILL ACT TO PREVENT WARS

GENEVA, April 27.—(AP)—The opinion was expressed in disarmament conference circles tonight that, in view of recent developments in the United States, any nation electing to start a war will have no chance for success if America throws her economic and financial forces against a wave of war sentiment.

Norman H. Davis, the American ambassador at large, assured the conference steering committee that the United States means to act to increase international security against war, thus ending a movement to adjourn the conversations pending definite announcements as to what the various nations will do on vital questions.

The delegates await precise declarations by Mr. Davis as to just what the United States will do to strengthen the peace machinery.

The committee on effectives today dealt with the question of the percentage of military value to be given police forces, and decided that the German police should be dealt with on a national basis instead of by provinces.

The French and little entente representatives held that in this way it could be determined whether the German police body has a training similar to that of a regular army and could be given a higher value in computing arms strength.

M. J. Dorsey Gives Bond in Security Life Case

Machir J. Dorsey, indicted president of the defunct Security Life Insurance company, appeared in the Criminal court yesterday and posted $5,000 bond before Chief Justice John Prystalski. He is one of nine indicted earlier in the week on charges of conspiracy to defraud stockholders of the Security Life Insurance company and its affiliates of more than $1,000,000 by means of inflated mortgages. Edwin Hult, head of an alleged dummy investment company bearing his name, is the only defendant who has not appeared to give bond.

U. S. Seeks Revocation of Sovetsky's Citizenship

A petition asking revocation of the citizenship papers of John Sovetsky known as the "million dollar fence," was filed yesterday in the United States District court. Sovetsky, who came from Poland, is serving a 10 year sentence in Leavenworth for receiving goods stolen from an interstate shipment. In the petition the government charged that Sovetsky, who received his final citizenship papers in 1929, made false statements concerning his police record. The petition said that Sovetsky had sworn to an affidavit that he was of good moral character.

PHILIP SULTAN, FORMER LAWYER, FOUND DROWNED

The body of Philip Sultan, 917 Melrose street, a disbarred lawyer who headed a real estate concern with offices at 1 North La Salle street, was found in the lake yesterday near the Navy pier. He was 38 years old and had been missing since March 14.

In 1923 Sultan was arrested on charges of withholding money belonging to his clients. Disbarment proceedings were begun and he informed the state Supreme court that he was willing to be disbarred.

Recently he has had financial difficulties and five warrants were obtained for his arrest on charges of larceny by bailee. He gave bond, but when his case was called on March 15 he did not appear and the bonds were forfeited.

BOSTON'S SACRED CODFISH STOLEN; SOUGHT IN VAIN

Boston, Mass., April 27.—[Special.]—Massachusetts today mourns the loss of its sacred codfish, emblem of the earliest industry, which hung untouched by human hands in the assembly room of the General court for thirty years. Harvard students are suspected. Three youths were seen in the statehouse shortly before the press was notified anonymously that the codfish, carved from wood and coated with silver, was gone.

They to add further grief to overworked public officials a telephone message to the office of Mayor James M. Curley said, "Tell the mayor that when the sacred codfish is returned it will be wrapped in the municipal flag now flying in front of the city hall. Try and catch us when we cop the flag."

Boy, 17, Confesses Seven Burglaries in Wilmette

Harold Wagner, 17 years old, 2058 Thornwood avenue, Wilmette, who was arrested yesterday on suspicion, confessed that he had committed seven burglaries in the suburb in less than three months. He led the police to a vacant lot, where he dug up jewelry valued at about $900, which he had concealed under a stump. Wagner's best haul was in the home of Walter W. Stegman, 2135 Kenilworth avenue, Wilmette, where he obtained $19 and jewelry valued at $750 on March 9.

Gunmen Invade Hospital, Take $150 from Cashier

Four gunmen took $150 yesterday afternoon in a robbery of the Frances Willard hospital, 645 South Central avenue. While three of the bandits stood guard in the lobby, the fourth forced Miss Alma Rasmussen, 425 South Central avenue, the cashier, to hand over the money in the cash box

POWER ON GOLD CONTENT VOTED FOR ROOSEVELT

Inflation Bill Amendment Wins in Senate.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Power for the President to reduce the gold content of the dollar was written into the administration's inflation bill today by a senate vote of 53 to 35. With it goes power for President Roosevelt to diminish the gold in the dollar in accordance with the terms of any international agreement looking to a stabilization of world exchange. The sole limitation is that the President may not reduce the weight of the present gold dollar by more than 50 per cent.

The administration's latest victory in congress was won on a motion by Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.], leader of the anti-inflationist forces which would have struck out the gold clause of the Thomas amendment to the farm bill, but would have left in the provision added yesterday giving the President authority to remonetize silver at a ratio he sees fit.

Hits at Last Hope.

It was a victory that crushed the efforts of the anti-inflationists, who had pinned their last hope on striking the gold clause from the bill.

Yet it was a victory that had to share the spotlight of the day's session with new developments in the program for international negotiations and with a speech by Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] in opposition to the inflation amendment.

And though a triumph second only in importance to a final vote passing the entire inflation measure, it was also a signal for the beginning of another bitter fight against inclusion of the amendment by Senator Arthur Robinson [Rep., Ind.] to require two and a quarter billions of the three billions of greenbacks authorized by the bill to be used to pay the veterans' bonus.

When the final vote came on the Reed motion to eliminate the gold clause it found 11 Democrats voting against the administration.

Foremost among them was Senator Glass.

Glass Speaks on Opposition.

With the courage that won him the boyhood nickname of "Pluck" Glass, the diminutive Virginian propped himself on legs weary with the marches of 75 belligerent years.

Out of the corner of his mouth, as is his habit, he spoke to a senate that hung upon his words as men listen only when respect is overmastered by affectionate emotion.

"I regret to disagree with my colleagues," were the words they heard. "It is painful to disagree with the occupant of the White House, whom I love and respect, and who has exhibited unparalleled courage in trying to bring the government within its budgetary requirements.

"But whether it be a commonplace or whether it be sensational, I am one Democrat who is going to vote against the inflation amendment, though every one of the other ninety-five senators vote for it. I may have regret, but shall never make apologies for acting upon my convictions and conscience."

Denies Break with President.

He said the report had gone out that he had broken with the President. He had to correct that. He had not broken.

But it was he who wrote the pledge in the Democratic platform that the party would preserve a sound currency at all hazards.

"And to me," he said, "this suggestion that we may devalue the gold dollar 50 per cent means national repudiation. To me it means dishonor. In my conception of it, it is immoral."

With short, uncertain steps he paced back and forth behind his desk as he picked the bill to pieces under the eyes of the crowded galleries.

The open market sections of the bill, he said, were "vicious." It would, if carried out, he said, mean making the federal reserve system the tool of the treasury, the stuffing of the reserve banks' portfolios with three billion dollars more of government bonds and a wiping out of federal reserve credit to accommodate trade.

Attacks Devaluation.

He said he would surprise, and he did surprise his hearers by asserting that the greenback section was the least objectionable feature of the bill. Then he came to the devaluation of the gold dollar. The United States has not been forced off the gold standard as Great Britain was, he explained. Withdrawal of the 700 millions of foreign gold in the United States, he said, would still leave an ample supply to maintain gold payments at home and abroad.

"All the legalistic arguments which the lawyers of the senate have made here," Senator Glass declared, "have not dislodged from my mind the irrevocable conviction that this proposal is immoral and that it means not only a contravention of my party's platform in that respect but of the promises of party spokesmen during the campaign.

"There never was any necessity for a gold embargo. There is no necessity for making statutory criminals of citizens of the United States who may please to take their property in the shape of gold or currency out of banks and use it for their own purposes as they may please.

No Need to Desert Gold.

"If there were need to go off the gold standard, very well; I would say let us go off the gold standard, but there has been no need for that. If there were need for currency expansion I would say let us expand, though I fail to comprehend how much better off one is with $2 which will purchase no more than the one dollar which he had yesterday.

"The history of inflation has been recited. Bacon, the wisest philosopher since Christ, the author of the inductive system from which we have drawn all of our inventions, valued experience. Edmund Burke, the greatest rhetorician of all times, was logician enough to magnify experience. Patrick Henry, the great advocate of human liberty, said that his feet were lighted by the lamp of experience. Yet here, today, we are flying right in the face of experience, rejecting it all.

"My colleagues talk about serving the public. What public? The men who work for a wage, the neediest of all classes of the public; the clerks and stenographers and the professional men, constituting, in the aggregate, half, yea, more than half, of our laboring population, will be the people to suffer under this unbridled expansion.

Says Rein Is Loose.

"That is what it is, because the rein is so loose that the steed will never stop until he goes over the precipice and kills his rider at the bottom thereof."

The hands that have so often doubled into combatative fists clutched at his desk for support. The voice that has growled and snapped in scores of legislative battles trembled with emotion.

"Mr. President," said the senator from Virginia to the chair, "I find that I must desist."

Then in a final fling of defiance he spoke of his respect for his colleagues, for the President, and finished:

"I may have regret, but shall never make apologies for acting upon my own conviction and conscience."

DR. MACCRACKEN TO BE AIR RACE MEDICAL CHIEF

Dr. William P. MacCracken, senior medical examiner for the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce in this area, yesterday was appointed medical director of the American Air Races, which are to be held at Chicago airport July 1, 2, 3, and 4 under the sponsorship of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Announcement of the appointment was made by Capt. M. M. Corpening, president of the Chicago Air Race corporation, which is producing the event.

DR. MAC CRACKEN.

This will be the second major air meet conducted by the Air Race corporation at which Dr. MacCracken has served in that capacity, Capt. Corpening said. He was medical director of the air races in 1930. Dr. MacCracken announced that his chief assistants will be Dr. A. A. Anderson and Dr. R. R. Ferguson, also department of commerce medical examiners.

"Complete medical and sanitary measures will be taken to serve adequately the quarter of a million people who are expected to attend the American Air Races, which are expected to be the outstanding aviation event of the year," Dr. MacCracken said.

NEGRO YOUTHS IN SCOTTSBORO CASE MUTINY

Birmingham, Ala., April 27.—(AP)—The Scottsboro case defendants mutinied in jail here today after arming themselves with plumbing fixtures and now they face confinement in day cells and bread and water rations as punishment for insubordination.

The nine Negroes refused to return to their sleeping quarters after spending the day in day cells. They ripped pieces of plumbing fixtures from their cells and defied the wardens.

They went on strike after complaining they had been mistreated by one of the wardens. The sheriff assured them of proper treatment, but they said they were afraid they would be "beaten up." Sheriff Hawkins made no attempt to force them to their sleeping quarters, but warned they would be put on bread and water rations unless they obeyed orders.

When the boys declined to go to their sleeping quarters the sheriff locked them in the day cells. The day quarters are large and airy, but have no bunks.

There was no violence of any kind. The prisoners made no effort to use the pipes, and the officers did not resort to force.

Army Officer's Wife Shot; Suicide, Police Declare

San Francisco, April 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Katharine Spiller, 33, wife of Maj. Edwin Spiller, U. S. A., was found shot to death in her home at Fort Winfield Scott here today and police said she had committed suicide. She left a note praising her husband.

Three in North

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 27.—Three advance planes, to be used in connection with the Italian air fleet, which will shortly hop from Italy on a flight across the Atlantic, en route to A Century of Progress exposition in Chicago arrived here today aboard the S. S. Rosalind from New York. They are in charge of an Italian officer and flying expert.

The supply steamer Senef is ready here to carry one plane and fuel oils to Cartwright, Labrador, as soon as the ice condition permits entry into the northern Labrador passage. Another plane will be assembled at Shoal Harbor, Trinity Bay, and the third at Harbor Grace.

FLEEING ROBBER SHOT TO DEATH BY POLICEMAN

Ned Jerome, 18 years old, 758 South Campbell avenue, fleeing after he and a companion had robbed a confectionery store owner, was shot and fatally wounded by Policeman James Wake at Madison and Whipple streets last night. He died soon afterward in the county hospital.

Policeman Wake, who was off duty, was walking to church with his wife when he saw the two youths running. Jerome was unarmed, but his confederate was carrying a pistol in his right hand.

When the policeman, drawing his own weapon, ordered the pair to halt the man with the pistol started firing at him. Wake returned the fire and Jerome was struck in the back and right leg. The other robber escaped. At the hospital Jerome was identified by Fred Kuehn, 3008 West Madison street, the robbery victim.

During the exchange of shots in the street, Bert Elander, 9 years old, 3010 West Washington boulevard, was grazed on the right foot by a bullet. The hurt was trivial and the boy was allowed to go home.

Begin Probating Will of Late Mayor Cermak

Proceedings to probate the will of the late Mayor Cermak were started yesterday before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Taylor. Attorney General Otto Kerner, attorney for the estate, presented Edward J. Kukac, one of the witnesses to the document. Joseph W. Serhant, the former mayor's real estate partner, a second witness, is expected to testify today. The will, provisions of which were made public several weeks ago, leaves the bulk of a $250,000 estate to three daughters of the late mayor.

THREATEN MAY BONUS MARCH; AGREE TO DELAY

B. E. F. Leaders Pay Visit to White House; Calmed.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Leaders of the bonus expeditionary force which was driven from Washington at guns' point last summer returned today to the White House with a threat that unless the bonus is paid at once to all unemployed veterans they will lead a new and larger march on the capitol in May.

But an hour's conference with Louis McHenry Howe, personal secretary to President Roosevelt, calmed their belligerence and brought a promise that the B. E. F. command will lay aside its plans for the new bonus march for at least two weeks. During that time, they were promised, the President will have had opportunity to study their troubles.

Will Not Force Caucus.

Meanwhile in congress the recognized leaders of the house bonus bloc announced that senate consideration of the proposal for inflation through the payment of bonus assuaged them temporarily. Representative Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.] said after a conference with Speaker Rainey and Majority Leader Byrns that his plans for forcing a Democratic caucus on the bonus issue had been abandoned.

The stand of acknowledged house bonus leaders was offset by the action of Representative Ernest Lundeen [Farmer-Labor, Minn.], who filed a petition to discharge the ways and means committee from considering the Patman bonus bill and bring the measure to a vote.

Mr. Lundeen invited the veterans of the country to come to Washington.

"I want the veterans to know that there are members of congress who are glad to see them in Washington whenever they think best to visit our capitol city," said the Minnesotan.

Visit to White House.

At the White House it was H. B. Foulkrod of Philadelphia, legislative officer of the B. E. F., who told Mr. Howe that 250,000 veterans would be brought here in May if the bonus is not paid.

In addition to the bonus payment, Mr. Foulkrod demanded the ousting of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, and of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff; replacement of married women in the government service by veterans; and the ousting of capitol police, giving the posts to veterans.

MELLON CALLS FIAT MONEY PROPOSAL A PERILOUS EXPEDIENT

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury and ambassador to Great Britain, today said that proposals to issue fiat money and cut the gold content of the dollar were fraught with disastrous consequences, but he denied any part in a conspiracy to kill pending inflationary legislation.

Mellon was accused by Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.] of joining with Ogden L. Mills, Mellon's successor as secretary of the treasury, and Senator Reed [Rep., Pa.] to defeat the Thomas amendment to the farm relief bill. He denied even discussing the subject with Mills or Reed, but added an open statement of opposition to the pending legislation.

Mellon gave his approval to the proposed open market operations of the federal reserve banks, which form the first step in the inflationary program, and to the gold embargo. He said he considered them justifiable under existing conditions and hoped that they would have a beneficial effect.

"I do not want to be understood," Mellon declared, "as indorsing in any way currency inflation or the proposed silver legislation or proposal to issue fiat money or to reduce the gold content of the dollar."

ROBERT GORE TO BE GOVERNOR OF PUERTO RICO

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will name Robert Gore of Chicago and Florida governor of Puerto Rico. A publisher of daily papers in Florida, he was closely identified with the Democratic national campaign.

He now is in Washington and his early nomination is in prospect. Gore had been mentioned for commissioner of internal revenue. That post still is vacant, with former Representative Guy T. Helvering of Kansas as the probable choice.

The name of W. D. Jameson, former member of the house from Iowa, is heard as a likely appointee for commissioner of patents.

12 YEAR OLD BOY KILLED BY AUTO; SEEK IDENTITY

A boy about 12 years old was fatally injured last night at 15th street and Blue Island avenue by an automobile driven by Harvey Anderson, 4830 Barry avenue. He died at the county hospital without being identified. Police are seeking his relatives.

This death increased the traffic toll in Cook county since the first of the year to 274.

STATESMEN NOT SITUATED TO SEE WORLD AS IT IS

Washington Not Typical; Will Starve Last of All.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special]—You should be lenient with the statesmen in Washington if they seem not to appreciate the condition of the people who have been looking to them for assistance in their troubles, because conditions in Washington are such that a statesman, judging the world by what he sees of it, is likely to be deceived.

It is only by a considerable stretch of the imagination that a statesman living in the national capital can picture a real want of food, clothing or shelter, except, perhaps, among the shiftless element who are always in trouble anyway and full of sympathy for themselves.

Whether the impoverished population, rural and urban, has any legitimate right to succor from the federal government is a debatable subject, although the Democrats, old defenders of the rights and responsibilities of the separate states, rather oddly concede that they have this right today.

Capital Most Prosperous City.

Notwithstanding a series of mishaps to the local banks which wiped out the little accumulations of many of the frugal residents, Washington remains the most comfortable and prosperous city in the United States. A man is subject to his surroundings, and a statesman, living in the capital, sees nothing which conforms to the cartoonist's standard version of poverty—the haggard face, the chipped plaster in the one room tenement and the gaunt, bird-legged child sharing a crust with a lean and wild-eyed cat.

The most beautiful and expensive homes in the United States confront Washington's numerous circles, which were inserted in the street plan of the city not only for esthetic reasons but also, I am told, with the forehanded purpose of riot-proofing the vital spots. These homes are not made of clapboard and neither are they of the old fashioned mock stone kind which in New York were turned into speakeasies row on row or wiped out to make room for duplex apartments and plush hotels with European names.

Suggest Best Part of Paris.

They are stone houses, some of them marble palaces, and they suggest scenes in the aristocratic neighborhoods of Paris. Some of them are used as embassies, but many others, which would seem to need the backing of some fairly robust foreign office, turn out to be just homes in which people live for varying periods of the year.

Apartment rents are much higher than those now prevailing in Chicago and somewhat higher than New York landlords expect nowadays, and, moreover, collections are good or were good until the bank moratorium and the failures which threw some of the tenants out of their stride.

In the first class hotels transients pay $5 for a punk and musty room, $6 for a better one, and $7 for a room which a New York innkeeper would be glad to let you have for $5 a night, asking, or $4.50 under pressure. More or less permanent guests can do proportionately better, but there seems to be very little haggling over such matters.

The flow of business is brisk, cash money is abundant and the depression is no such vital, personal concern here as it is in other places.

Constant Stream of Tourists.

Then, contributing further to the statesman's pardonable nonappreciation of the true state of the people, there is the constant procession of tourists and conventioneers who certainly would not be spending money on railroad hauls and hotel fare if they were really up against the old fashioned meaning of poverty. The tourists come, they peer, they gaze, they bend an ear to the wisdom of the people's choices in the halls of congress, they buy souvenir canes and souvenir castiron paper weights roughly representing the White House or the capitol, and they are on their way, succeeded, however, by more sightseers.

The conventioneers convene and orate and resolute, taking time out, however, for teas, luncheons, and banquets, and their right to do so cannot be brought into question unless their clothes are shabby and their demeanor sullen, in which case the police force meets them at the city line and tells them to go away. They do no harm and the hotel and railroad people will testify to the good they do.

American citizens are born joiners, and the most obscure interest in common, such as freckles or an aversion to parsley, may become the tie that binds 500,000 citizens together in a sacred brotherhood, whose affairs require an annual meeting of 3,000 delegates in Washington, D. C.

A meal costs $2.50 in any of the best hotels, and as the conventioneers rather lean to the best there is in the way of comfort and fare, a statesman, living amid these misleading evidences, may be pardoned for regarding the poverty which he hears so much about as an exaggerated figure of speech.

The building trades are still at work erecting government edifices, including a magnificent hothouse, at high wages, payable out of the government's deficit, and Washington, D. C., will starve last of all.

LIBBY HOLMAN MAY BE AWARDED HALF A MILLION

First Child's Guardian Fights Compromise.

Concord, N. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Libby Holman Reynolds, former Broadway torch singer, will get "more than half a million dollars" from the estate of her late husband, Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir, in addition to the sum to be settled upon their son.

This announcement was made here today by the singer's attorney, Benet Polikoff, who has represented her in the settlement proceedings.

The baby's probable inheritance was estimated in a statement issued a few days ago at around $2,000,000. At the time of this announcement it was understood that the settlement virtually had been agreed upon.

Bank Is Co-Guardian.

However, the Cabarrus Bank and Trust company, co-guardian of Anne Cannon Reynolds, daughter of the young tobacco heir by a former marriage, in supplementary papers filed in court here questioned the authority of any tribunal in the state of North Carolina or elsewhere to sanction the proposed settlement which also would award $2,000,000 to the girl and leave the balance estimated at $15,000,000 to be used in the establishment of a philanthropic foundation.

Over the signature of the president, the bank defined its attitude toward the settlement as outlined in a letter from W. N. Hendren, attorney for the Reynolds tobacco family, as follows:

"We therefore fail to understand upon what theory Smith Reynolds' share of his father's and mother's trust estates, which we contend now belongs jointly to Anne Cannon Reynolds and the infant son of Libby Holman [Renyolds' second wife], can be partitioned and parceled out at the will of any court, or the legal representatives of these infants, and we are utterly at a loss to understand how a North Carolina court, or any court for the matter of that, has jurisdiction in this matter to ratify and confirm the proposed partition of this estate in the manner proposed by Mr. Hendren."

Pre-Divorce Agreement.

It is the bank's contention that the only point at issue is the validity of the pre-divorce agreement made under date of Aug. 4, 1932, whereby Reynolds set up a $500,000 trust fund for his daughter and one of like amount for his then wife, Anne. If that agreement should be held invalid, the bank contends its ward is entitled to at least half of the estate.

As to the will which Smith Reynolds made in New York bequeathing $50,000 to his first wife and child, the bank contends that is null and void in North Carolina.

Turkey Plans $40,000,000 Program for Railroads

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 27.—(AP)—The Turkish government today decided to spend $40,000,000 for 372 miles of new railroads linking the wild eastern provinces with the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. Certain sections of the new construction will be costly because the territory is mountainous.

BRITAIN HONORS JUDGE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 27.—The twenty-eight judges of the high court in London assembly today to hear an eulogy delivered in honor of Justice Sir Henry A. McCardie, famous bachelor judge. He died yesterday from a bullet wound in his head, apparently self-inflicted. The eulogy was delivered by Lord Chief Justice Hewart in McCardie's court.

The gathering included leading barristers and many fashionably dressed women. The public gallery was crowded. Identical services were held for the judge in all English courts.

Sir Henry, who was noted for his liberal views in marriage problems, was known as the lonellest man in London. He was described as the greatest living authority on common law.

An inquest will be held tomorrow. The question is whether the death will be ascribed as suicide while of unsound mind, or felo-de-se, which means the act was a crime and that the body cannot be buried in consecrated ground.

ILLINOIS WILL VOTE ON DRY REPEAL JUNE 5

Governor Signs Bill as Senate Acts.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 28 [Friday].—[Special.]—The state senate at 12:13 a. m. today passed the Schnackenberg-Sinnett house bill ordering the Illinois prohibition repeal conventon to assemble on July 10.

At 1:43 a. m. the measure was signed by Gov. Horner in the presence of a delegation of interested Chicagoans and downstate legislators, making it certain that the election of delegates to the convention will be held on June 6.

Governor Uses Four Pens.

Four pens were used by the governor in signing the measure. These were given to Mrs. William H. Mitchell, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Senator Harold G. Ward [Dem., Chicago], and Representative Matt Franz [Dem., Chicago], all active in the fight to repeal the dry laws. Also present were Mayor Kelly and Corporation Counsel Sexton of Chicago, Speaker of the House Michael Roe [Dem., Vandalia], and several downstate legislators.

The bill, which was passed Tuesday by the house, went through the senate on a vote of 45 to 1. It is expected that the work of slatemaking and the circulating of nominating petitions will begin at once.

Midnight Session Necessary.

The midnight session was necessary in order to meet the constitutional requirement that for passage every bill must be read in each house on three legislative days.

No excitement marked the final step of legislative enactment. The result of the roll call had been forecast when, by unanimous consent, fifteen senators who were compelled to leave Springfield before midnight had their votes recorded in the affirmative. Only 30 actually were present.

The bill provides for the election of 50 delegates by the state at large and the proposal now is that this number on the wet slate be chosen by congressional districts, one Democrat and one Republican, both of indubitable wetness, from each of the state's 25 congressional districts.

How Ballot Will Read.

This slate will appear in the first column on the special ballot under the heading "For Ratification," and the dry slate, if there is one in the process of formation, as is reported, will appear in the adjoining column under the heading of "Against Ratification." As used here the words refer to the ratification of the proposed 21st amendment repealing the 18th.

If there are no other candidates except those listed on the two slates—and it apparently will be difficult for an independent, either wet or dry, to gather the number of signatures required—there will be a circle at the head of each column so that the voter may vote for either bloc by marking a single cross in the circle at the head of the column.

In a third column will appear the "No preference expressed" candidates if there are any. Before the name of each candidate in all three columns will be the customary square to permit voting for individuals.

It is further proposed that the 20 delegates from Cook county's ten districts be chosen by the Cook county central committees of the two parties and that the other thirty from the fifteen downstate districts be named by the state central committees. This angle has been discussed between the Democrats of the two sections of the state and is said to be acceptable to both.

Haste in Passing Measure.

The haste about passing the bill this week was caused by the desire of its backers to allow the longest possible period for the collection of the 25,000 signatures required on nominating petitions. The names of the fifty candidates on the wet slate will appear on one petition and it is believed the Democratic and Republican organizations can complete the big petition several days before May 11, the last day for filing.

Plans to unite all wet forces behind the pro-ratification slate of the convention delegates were announced here last night.

P. A. Nash, Democratic national committeeman and chairman of the Cook county Democratic central committee, and Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Donovan, chairman of the party's state committee, conferred and at the close of their talk said they would invite the Republicans of the state to join with them in making up a slate consisting of an equal number of representatives of each party.

BILL FOR STATE AUTO REGISTER IS UP TO GOVERNOR

Springfield, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—The state senate today completed legislative enactment of the bill introduced by Representative Frank Ryan requiring Illinois automobile owners to obtain certificates of title from the secretary of state after Jan 1, 1934.

It requires the secretary of state to maintain an index of engine and body numbers for use in the detection of efforts to register stolen cars. The certificate of title may be transferred in the event of the sale of the vehicle.

The bill also requires the licensing of dealers in used cars, trailers and semi-trailers or their parts. All fees are to be paid into a special auto theft fund. It was backed by Secretary of State Hughes. It now goes to Gov. Horner for approval.

SUICIDE WIDOW

MRS. AUGUSTA SCHNEIDER.

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury which investigated the death of Paul Schneider, 41 years old, a manual training teacher in the Washburne Continuation school, 655 West 14th street. He shot himself yesterday morning in the basement of his home at 5944 South Campbell avenue.

Financial and physical troubles were blamed for Schneider's act by his widow, Mrs. Augusta Schneider, and Dr. S. W. Becker, the family physician. Schneider owned the flat building in which they lived, but had worried over failure to receive his pay from the school board, and over possible foreclosure of the mortgage on his home, his widow testified.

Dr. Becker testified that Schneider had been suffering for three years from locomotor ataxia, and was crippled as a result, although he was a large and powerful man. Schneider came to him three weeks ago, told him of his troubles, and complained that he was so nervous that he was unable to sleep, Dr. Davis said.

CAPTURES DRIVER OF STOLEN AUTO AFTER COLLISION

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen 76; recovered, 84; stripped, 15 (from police records for 24 hour ending at midnight Wednesday).

Two automobiles collided last night at 61st and Halsted streets and the aggrieved party happened to be a strong man, Albert Lorber, 626 West 55th street. He seized the driver of the other car and held him until police arrived, whereupon it was discovered that two men occupying the car had just stolen it from Mrs. Hattie Johnson, 5922 Indiana avenue, by jumping on the running board and forcing her out.

John Bindell, 25 years old, 6353 Sangamon street, was the man held. His companion escaped. Bindell's brother, George, is in the county jail on a charge of robbery.

Joseph Bellino, 18 years old, 151⁸ Elburn avenue, was sentenced yesterday by Judge John Gutknecht to serve a year in the bridewell for attempted larceny. Bellino was arrested as he tried to steal the automobile of Vincent Ryan, 666⁰ South California avenue.

PUSH ECONOMY PLANS FOR CITY, SCHOOL BUDGETS

Urge Tax Collection Bills in Springfield.

While Mayor Kelly and leaders of the school board and city council were in Springfield yesterday, urging adoption of the six tax collection bills sponsored by the mayor as a means of getting money for overdue public pay rolls, preparations went ahead for economy operations next week on the city and school budgets.

These operations are expected to get under way in earnest early in the week. The city budget is yet to be drawn up. That of the schools has been passed, but the school tax levies have not been approved by the city council. A majority of the school trustees have pledged themselves to cut their budget. Mayor Kelly announced before his departure for Springfield on Wednesday evening.

Agree to Trim Millions.

"I'm against closing the schools," he said at that time, "but I believe the school board should cut expenses to the amount equivalent to what they would save by closing. Neither am I in favor of cutting salaries. The trustees have satisfied me they can reduce the budget sufficiently to offset closing of the schools. They have agreed to cut at least $8,000,000, and possibly $11,000,000."

Mayor Kelly stated previously that he believed all governments should adjust their expenditures to the tax revenue which they may reasonably hope to receive.

A scheduled meeting between leaders of demonstrating school teachers and leading Chicago bankers fell through yesterday because the teachers' leaders expressed fear that their followers would accuse them of breaking faith if they took lunch with the bankers in the Union League club. The teachers sought a later conference, but it was postponed until next week because Melvin A. Traylor, one of the bankers whom they were to meet, had to take a 2 o'clock train to New York.

Seek Change in R. F. C. Act.

The United States Conference of Mayors, which has its headquarters in Chicago, announced yesterday that its executive committee would meet Wednesday at Washington with the senate committee on banking to seek an amendment to the Reconstruction Finance corporation act permitting that corporation to make loans directly to municipalities and school boards.

Efforts to obtain an R. F. C. loan for Chicago teachers' salaries have failed because the corporation is now prohibited from doing this, and because banks refused to accept the contingent liability which they would have to assume if they took school tax warrants and posted them as security for R. F. C. loans.

Illinois House Committee on Communist Activities

Springfield, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—In conformity with a resolution passed last week on the motion of Roland V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago], Speaker Roe today named a committee of five members of the house to investigate the activities of communist organizations. He selected Chicagoans exclusively — George Garry Noonan, John M. Bolton, and Harry L. Williams, Democrats, and Arthur E. Fischer and Libonati, Republicans.

COUNTY G. O. P. WILL LAY PLANS TODAY FOR JUDICIARY CAMPAIGN

The Republican judiciary campaign is to be planned today at a meeting to be held at the Hotel Sherman at 2 o'clock. The county committee will confer then with the candidates on the Republican bench ticket. The plan is to start activities next week with addresses by the nominees to the various ward organizations, and after these are over general meetings are to be held.

Democratic headquarters was deserted yesterday, the party chiefs being in Springfield. The only piece of news related to the third ticket which was filed this week. Replying to reports that the Democrats are preparing to attack the validity of the third ticket petitions, Pat Nash, Illinois Democratic leader, issued a statement from Springfield that the Democrats would not file objections to the third ticket. "Four or five tickets would be just as satisfactory to us," said Mr. Nash. "The more the merrier."

ARREST COUPLE CHARGED WITH SCALDING CHILD

Cecil Kitz, 51 years old, and his wife, Fannie, 49 years old, of Milwaukee, were arrested last night by Policeman Edward Harder of the Hyde Park station on a charge of assault with intent t murder. The complainant in the case is Roy Jacoby, 4959 Lake Park avenue.

Jacoby alleged that his 12 year old son, Robert, was seized by the couple in front of 5003 Lake Park avenue, where they were visiting, on Oct. 31, and that they poured scalding water on him. The lad at the time was engaged in Halloween merrymaking. Kitz and his wife were recognized last night by Jacoby.

ROB MAYWOOD GROCERY.

Two bandits held up Mrs. Albert Keith yesterday in her husband's grocery at 1700 Harrison street, Maywood, and robbed her of $95.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL TO FORCE TAX COLLECTION

sunlit chamber, "we will see a rush of property owners paying their taxes. I beg of you in the name of every citizen of Chicago that you remain tonight and pass this bill. In Chicago we are having uprisings in the streets.

"We are not afraid of these uprisings, but we want the cooperation of the senate in dealing with them. So I ask you, first as mayor and second as my personal friends, that you aid us."

Has Unanimous Council O. K.

Ald. Nelson was introduced by Lieut. Gov. Donovan. He said that the bill was endorsed unanimously by the city council and was in no sense a partisan measure. It would be impossible, he added, to build the city's corporate budget if the bill failed. School Trustee Joseph P. Savage followed Nelson. He said that passage would mean much for the school board employés and teachers.

President Taylor of the board of education gave a hearty second to Mayor Kelly's appeal. He added the prediction that if that legislation was passed millions of tax dollars would be collected and the bankers of Chicago would come to the aid of the city. Much of his talk, however, dealt with the consequences of closing the schools at this time—a step which has been suggested. Half a million school children would be turned upon the streets, he said, and 15,000 teachers would be thrown out of work.

State's Attorney Courtney and Ald. John A. Massen also were among the speakers. Then, at the request of Senator Martin R. Carlson [Rep., Moline], Mr. Sexton took the rostrum to explain the Skarda bill. One statement drew much attention.

"As a sample of the kind of property which could be taken over in receivership by the county treasurer in the event the Skarda bill passes," Mr. Sexton said, "let me tell you of one hotel in Chicago. The owners owe $540,000 in back taxes and they have put this amount aside in a bank, but they won't pay unless they are forced to. This bill would bring that money in in a hurry."

Under questioning from the floor, Mr. Sexton gave an opinion that extensive repairs on buildings in tax receiverships would not be allowed by the courts, thus allaying fears that the receivers would prolong their control over delinquent properties by spending income for unneeded equipment or repairs.

Senator Charles J. Kribs [Dem., Prairie du Rocher] wanted to know if the bill would apply to the small home owner who lived in his home. It would not, Sexton said, and he proceeded to explain that delinquent tax bills of less than $300 formed only "3 or 4 per cent" of the total unpaid.

SUFFERS MEMORY LAPSE AT 90.

Mrs. Catherine Guizleman, 90 years old, 1905 West 90th street, suffered a lapse of memory yesterday and was taken to the Hyde Park police station, where her granddaughter's husband, Edwin Podewell, found her and took her home.

Daylight Time Voted for Kane Co. Workers

The Kane county board of supervisors voted yesterday to inaugurate daylight saving time for county employés when Chicago readjusts its clocks at 2 a. m. Sunday. Nearly all the cities in the Fox River valley also have adopted daylight saving. The Kane county action came after the board elected a new chairman, Marcus W. Damisch.

AWAIT REPORT ON WOODWARD IN CONGRESS

Bar Reproves Judge for Receivership Conduct.

misconstruction by those uninformed as to the details of any particular judicial action, no judge, state or federal, should appoint as receiver, trustee, counsel, or otherwise, any close relative or any member of any firm which such relative may be connected," said the report.

Occasions Unfavorable Comment.

"If it be conceded that both Judge Woodward and Mr. Eckert (Walter H. Eckert, a member of the law firm) may in each case have acted in the utmost good faith and with the best of intentions, nevertheless the appointments of the firm under the circumstances tend to occasion unfavorable comment. The circumstances under which the firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson were appointed attorneys for receivers in so many important cases presented a situation which, as shown, gave rise to criticism.

"The fact that Judge Woodward may have had confidence in Mr. Eckert and was therefore pleased to appoint his firm in these cases, and the fact that the services may have been well rendered and no charge made of lack of efficiency in handling the receivership matters committed to their care, could not erase the appearance of impropriety or justify the practice.

"The practice of making the appointments and the practice of accepting them are condemned by the committee."

Covers Two Year Period.

The report covers the period from October, 1930, to September, 1932. In the period Judge Woodward appointed counsel for receivers in twenty-five cases. In nine of these Loucks, Eckert & Peterson were named attorneys for the receiver and in one case they represented the co-receiver.

Young Woodward, a former football star at the University of Illinois, was graduated from Northwestern university school of law in 1926. He is now 31 years old. His employment by the law firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson began in October, 1926, two and one-half years before his father's appointment to the bench.

The report listed the son's earnings with the law firm as follows:

1928	2,400	.....
1929	2,400	.....
1930	3,000*	2,000
1931	13,000*	5,000
1932	13,000	†.....

*Plus. †Unknown.

Young Woodward now has a practice, the report says, "relatively large for one of his age and experience, principally in bankruptcy matters. So far as the committee is advised Mr. Woodward was not personally appointed as counsel in any case by his father and in no case were fees allowed him by his father. Mr. Woodward testified that whenever any matter which he was handling came directly before his father, Mr. Eckert appeared in his place."

Share Office Expenses.

The report states that members of the law firm made an arrangement in 1931 under which Vernon R. Loucks, Charles O. Loucks, and A. R. Peterson shared office expenses but did not participate in the fees referred to and were not consulted with respect to the firm's employment in the receivership cases and did not contribute to the salary paid young Woodward, who received more than any other lawyer employé in the firm.

The firm was dissolved Jan. 1, 1933. Mr. Eckert, who is first vice president of the bar association and chairman of the publicity committee of the American Bar association, formed a new firm with A. R. Peterson, known as Eckert & Peterson. Young Woodward is associated with the new firm.

Mr. Eckert has been first vice president of the bar association for almost two years. He is the first to have held the post for that period. Charles P. Megan has been president during the period, and is also the first to have held the post for more than one year. Ordinarily the first vice president succeeds to the presidency by the system of rotation adopted by the association.

At Work More than a Year.

The committee drafting the report has been at work more than a year. It is headed by Attorney Carl R. Latham and is composed of 17 members of the association.

Mr. Eckert told the committee that young Woodward's services were invaluable to the firm; that he could handle business of any kind with efficiency and dispatch, and that he was well worth the compensation paid him.

Mr. Eckert also said that he was not conscious of having accepted any improper employment, that he had known the receivers and had business relations with them before his appointment and that Judge Woodward was actuated only by the highest motives and was not influenced by his son's connection with the firm.

Gives Details of First Case.

The report gives in detail the first case of importance in which the law firm was appointed by Judge Woodward. In this case, it was said, Mr. Eckert was suggested to the receiver by Judge Woodward. The report says:

"Mr. Eckert stated to the committee that he was in the judge's court when the judge called him into chambers and told him of the Prince & Whitely bankruptcy proceedings; that the judge said the matter was giving him much concern; that the complainants had asked for the appointment [for receiver] of an individual concerning whom the judge had no information; that he was unfamiliar with bankruptcy matters and was anxious to avoid making any mistake; that at Judge Woodward's request for a suggestion he suggested the Chicago Title and Trust company; that Judge Woodward said he knew Gen. Davis and thereupon sent for him; that Gen. Davis came immediately to the judge's chambers.

Requests Him to Remain.

"Mr. Eckert further stated that upon the arrival of Gen. Davis, he, Mr. Eckert, was about to leave when Judge Woodward requested him to remain; that Judge Woodward, after discussing the case with Gen. Davis and appointing the Chicago Title & Trust company as receiver, said he would be happy if the receiver would employ Mr. Eckert as attorney for the receiver; that Gen. Davis said he would be delighted to do so; that Mr. Eckert told Gen. Davis that because he happened to be present at the conference he did not want Gen. Davis to feel that he was under any obligation to employ him; that up to that moment he, Mr. Eckert, had no idea he would be employed in the case."

Young Woodward also testified before the committee. He said he did not directly participate in any of the fees except two cases; in one he received $2,160 and in the second he received part of $750 allowed.

Appears Before Bar Board.

Judge Woodward did not appear before the committee but did appear before the board of managers of the association. He is reported to have told the board of managers that he had great confidence in the integrity and ability of Mr. Eckert and for that reason had been glad to make the appointments. He added that it had not occurred to him there was any impropriety in making the appointments.

"Every judge should so discharge his office as to be above any possible suspicion that favoritism plays any part whatsoever in his court," says the Bar association report. "A judge's official actions should not only be free of impropriety but in the words of the canons of judicial ethics of the American Bar association they should be free from 'the appearance of impropriety.'

"Quoting further from the same authority, 'He should n. suffer his conduct to justify the impression that any person can improperly influence him or unduly enjoy his favor or that he is affected by the kinship, rank, position or influence of any party or other person.' The canons further provide that he should also avoid nepotism and undue favoritism in his appointments."

Judge Is Asked to Comment.

Judge Woodward was sitting in the Federal District court at Freeport when he was informed of the report. He was asked to comment on reports from Washington, D. C., that the action of the Bar association might be made a basis for impeachment proceedings.

"I do not intend to get into a public controversy by making any comment at this time," he said. "I understand perfectly what is back of this and it will all come out at the proper time.

"My official actions are a matter of public record in the office of the clerk of the United States District court. These records are open to every one. I never received a complaint concerning the activities of any receiver I have appointed nor against any counsel selected by any receiver so appointed."

Mr. Eckert's comment was that he was chiefly interested in the phases of the report which admit that the work of the law firm has been efficiently performed and the charges reasonable. He said he regretted the report did not inform the public of the large expense to which the firm was put in handling the litigation.

Thousands of Documents.

"We appeared in courts hundreds of times prepared thousands of legal documents and made many trips out of town," he said. "Our primary concern has been to see that the estates are efficiently and economically administered. The report indicates this was accomplished.

"Never before has there been any criticism leveled at a law firm merely because some one in its employ was related to a judge on the bench, although there are many instances where relationship exists between the bench and counsel in Cook county. Further, I might say the firm never took a controversial matter before Judge Woodward."

Judge Woodward was appointed to the bench on March 19, 1929. He had practiced law for many years at Ottawa, Ill., and was president of the Illinois constitutional convention of 1920, which failed to win support of its program.

MacChesney Accused of Fee Splitting at Receiver Quiz

Attorney Nathan William MacChesney was accused yesterday of splitting fees with attorneys for the bondholders' protective committee of Leight & Co., investment bankers, by Paul Loeber, trustee for the Leight Trust, successor to Leight & Co.

The charge was made before the investigating committee of the Illinois house of representatives as it resumed its inquiry into receiverships and foreclosures in Cook county. A throng of spectators attended the hearing which was held in the council chambers of the city hall.

Mr. MacChesney appeared before the investigating committee later in the day to deny the charge. Loeber's testimony was also attacked by Charles E. Fox and M. A. Cushman, members of the bondholders' committee.

Charges Evasion of Summons.

At the hearing Assistant Attorney General George S. Lavin charged that Herman Straus, who is trustee for several bond issues floated by the defunct Straus Brothers Investment company, is evading a subpoena issued for him. Attorney R. L. Freeman, who was present, replied that Straus is not evading service and that Lavin is seeking to "blacken" Straus.

Circulars of two investment houses, who affairs have come before the investigating committee, were turned over to Assistant United States Attorney Warren Canaday, who is attending the hearings. Canaday is a mail fraud expert. It was implied that the circulars may be used in pressing charges.

Loeber was the first witness of the day. He was called to complete testimony given last Saturday. He declared that Attorney MacChesney played a dual rôle as attorney for the trustees and also took fees from attorneys for the protective committee.

No Longer Trustee's Lawyer.

"MacChesney is no longer attorney for the trustees," Loeber said. "We learned that he received 25 per cent of the fees paid to law firms representing the bondholders' committee. He made a deal and some of the foreclosures were given to him. I told him he couldn't represent us any longer."

Mr. MacChesney went before the committee two hours later. He asked to see a transcript of Loeber's testimony relating to him. Informed that the transcript was not ready, he was given permission to take the stand with the condition that he be allowed to return after a study of the transcript if he wished.

"I was not discharged as attorney for the trustees," he began. "Loeber sent me some such message, but the other trustees, Charles Fox and Albert W. Swayne did not do so. I split no fees, but was paid for my part in the reorganization of properties under an agreement entered into by the law firms and the bondholders' committee."

Calls Fees Reasonable.

Mr. Fox followed Loeber on the stand. He declared it was impossible for him and Swayne to function as trustees of the trust because Loeber refused to call them to meetings. He said he did act on the bondholders' committee. The fees, he said, were reasonable. He charged that Loeber had attempted on numerous occasions to block reorganizations for his own interests, declaring Loeber was not interested in the bondholders. Cushman supported this testimony.

The circulars turned over to Prosecutor Canaday were presented by witnesses questioned by Lavin. Bertram E. Connelly, a school teacher, 6328 Sangamon street, produced circulars issued by Greenebaum Sons Investment company on the Eitel Central black. The circulars listed as assets $800,000 worth of furnishings in the Bismarck hotel and Palace theater, which he later found constituted a lien against the property, Connelly said.

The other bond purchaser was Nick Dudash, 914 Marianna street, a janitor. He produced a booket issued by an affiliate of the former National Bank of the Republic. He said he understood from the circular that the assets of the bank were behind issues sponsored by the bank.

NEW RAIL BILL CALLS FOR YEAR OF U. S. CONTROL

U. S. Co-ordinator, Three Groups Provided.

tions to the carriers with respect of such matter, as he shall find to be consistent with the public interest."

Under the act the interstate commerce commission shall not approve a Reconstruction Finance corporation loan or permit a carrier to make a bond issue unless it finds "that the financial structure of the carrier is such that there is reasonable prospect that such carrier can without reorganization survive the existing economic depression and provide for its capital needs thereafter."

Appeals Are Provided.

Appeal by any carrier, shipper, or employé who may be dissatisfied with an order of the coördinator is provided by a clause permitting the filing of a petition to the interstate commerce commission. The commission may suspend an order at its discretion, but if it does so it shall expedite the hearings and decision on that order as much as possible.

Refusal of any officer or employé of any carrier to comply with the terms of any order of the coördinator or of the commission will be a misdemeanor, and conviction will carry a fine of $1,000 to $20,000 for each offense, and each day during which the order is not complied with shall constitute a separate offense.

Wide discretion is given to the coordinator to investigate and consider means not provided in the bill, of improving transportation conditions throughout the country, including the ability of the carriers to improve their properties "and furnish service and charge rates which will promote the commerce and industry of the country, and including also the stability of railroad labor employment and other improvement of railroad labor conditions."

Recommendations Sought.

From time to time the coördinator is expected to submit recommendations for legislation to the interstate commerce commission.

Arrangement for the expenses of the coördinator are provided for by a fund to which each of the carriers shall contribute at the rate of one dollar for every mile of road operated by it on Dec. 31, 1932.

Extension of the act for more than a year may be effected by proclamation of the President.

HOTEL BILTMORE SEEKS TO FORCE SLASH IN TAXES

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—Stating that more than half of the rooms in the Hotel Biltmore and the Hotel Commodore were not rented during the ten months ending Oct. 31 last, the Bowman Biltmore hotels corporation, lessee of the building and land, today applied to the Supreme court for writs of certiorari requiring the board of taxes and assessors to show cause why the assessed valuation on the properties should not be reduced.

Justice Alfred Frankenthaler granted the writs and set June 5 as the date for a hearing on the claims of the corporation.

House Bolts Roosevelt Twice on Home Mortgage Measure

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Permitted for the first time this session to amend an important piece of legislation on the floor, the house of representatives today promptly overrode its leadership and effected two farreaching changes in the Roosevelt home mortgage refinancing bill.

The measure provides for a two billion dollar government bond issue with which a "federal home owners' loan corporation" would take over at a lower rate of interest the mortgages now held by private companies on small urban dwellings.

Wolcott's Plan Wins.

House leaders permitted the bill to come up for consideration under the regular rules of the house, so that members had full opportunity to amend the measure as they saw fit. Every other major bill in the administration program has been protected in the house by a special rule limiting debate and cutting off the right of amendment.

Granted this sudden freedom the house over protests of its leaders, adopted an amendment by Representative Jesse P. Wolcott [Rep., Mich.] under which the newly created federal home loan corporation would be empowered to purchase outright a small home owners' equity in his property for not more than 30 per cent of its valuation.

Receives Second Jolt.

Mr. Wolcott pointed out that the basic theory of the bill was premised on the agreement of private mortgagors to turn the mortgages they hold over to the government in return for government bonds. Should such a mortgage holder refuse to do so and proceed to foreclose, the home owner would have no recourse under the bill, he declared. His amendment, Mr. Wolcott stated, would enable the government to purchase the home owner's equity and assume the obligations.

A moment later, the house again overrode the Democratic leadership to adopt an amendment by which the rate of interest on mortgages taken over by the government will be left virtually to the discretion of the new federal home loan corporation. As originally drawn, the bill fixed the rate at 5 per cent. Adoption of the amendment, however, changed the language to read "Not exceeding 5 per cent" so that the rate can be lowered.

Ignores Leader's Plea.

It was at this point that the smouldering revolt against ironclad leadership blazed into words. In response to a plea by Majority Leader Joseph W. Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] for the house to stand by the administration in the matter of interest rates, Representative Frank Hancock [Dem., N. C.] declared:

"I am tried of being led by a ring in my nose. I'm all for the administration and I'm even willing to be called a rubber stamp. But by God, I can't see why we have to embalm our minds."

The house roared its approval.

SONS KILL AGED FATHER ON ALTAR TO 'SAVE SISTER'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, April 27.—Abad and Sabas Vizcaino, brothers, today murdered their 75 year old father in witchcraft rites at their home in Rancho Veloz, Santa Clara province. The men, aged 26 and 35, committed the deed "to save their sister, Maria, 18, from dying of tuberculosis."

The brothers returned from their day's work in the cane fields and found their sister near death. They went to their father's room, seized him, and rushed him outdoors. Invoking the "goddess Chango," they shouted: "We are the representatives of the only true deity; Chango orders you to shed your blood to save our sister. Father, you must die!"

The men beat their father unconscious with clubs, slashed his throat, gouged out his eyes, and drank his blood. They then hacked his body to pieces, extracting more blood, which they sprinkled over their sister. The murderers destroyed the altar to Chango and fled. Soldiers are in pursuit.

(Five girls were killed in witchcraft ceremonies near Havana a month ago. Twenty-eight Negroes were arrested. Ten of them were lynched by a mob.)

Oklahoma Votes July 11 for Legalizing of Beer

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 27.—(AP)—Two bills signed by Gov. William H. Murray today completed legislative arrangements for a special election July 11 on a bill to legalize sale of 3.2 per cent beer in Oklahoma. A bill providing for a public election fund and authorizing the state treasurer to receive contributions to pay the cost of the election was signed by the governor, as was one reducing the cost of elections.

MOFFETT FAMILY TO CARRY ON IN AIR, WIDOW SAYS

Tells Children's Flying Plans in Visit Here.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A vigorous woman garbed in black sat in a Midlothian home yesterday and talked with enthusiasm about flying and the flying plans of all of her five children. She was the widow of Rear Admiral William Adger Moffett, chief of the navy's bureau of aeronautics, who lost his life in the crash of the dirigible Akron on April 4.

At 8:45 o'clock this morning she will climb into a United Air Lines plane at the Chicago airport and head toward Los Angeles. Accompanying her on her flight here from Washington and continuing west with her is her son, Ensign William Moffett, 22 years old, stationed in the Aleutian islands, Alaska, with the naval air service. They arrived here Wednesday night on a United Air Lines plane and have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Meigs in Midlothian.

Children Fly West.

Mrs. Moffett's other four children flew by twos through Chicago and westward earlier this week following the recent burial of their father in Arlington cemetery, Washington.

"Of course we always fly," Mrs. Moffett said in response to a question.

"It's much safer up there than down here on earth," she continued deliberately. "I have no fear of the air, none whatever."

"What do you think of the future of lighter than air craft?" she was asked.

"That is something I can't speak of," she said. "It was a sacred subject in our family. Daddy always—the admiral always had the greatest confidence in it. O, I hope they won't abandon it—they mustn't."

Intends to Ride in Macon.

Then she continued, remaining as she did throughout the interview with dry eyes and perfect poise: "I christened the Macon and was to be on its test flight. But that was the day the admiral was buried. I'm going to go up in it when I get back to Washington."

Mrs. Moffett did not want to leave her home in Washington, but her children insisted that she come west, since they had to return west, she said. She plans to return to Washington by June 1, when her son, Lieut. George Moffett of the army, now stationed in San Diego on the aircraft carrier Lexington, will be transferred to the naval air station at Anacostia, near Washington.

"He will be a test pilot there," said Mrs. Moffett.

Her daughter, Mrs. Janet Moffett Moore, and Lieut. Moffett flew west together. Mrs. Moore's home is on Catalina island, where her husband, Elliott McFarland Moore, a retired naval lieutenant, also in the air service, now operates the Catalina air line.

Her two youngest children, Beverly, 14 years old, and Charles, 17, flew through Chicago on their way to Los Angeles on Wednesday.

"Charles had just taken his entrance exams for the Naval academy when Daddy—when the accident occurred, "Mrs. Moffett said. "Of course, he'll be a flyer, too. "My oldest daughter has flown some, and Beverly says she's determined to be a flyer—but I'm not going to think of that right now."

Mrs. Moffett wore a gold naval pin, which was found on the uniform of the admiral when his body was recovered by a coast guard cutter 40 miles northeast of Atlantic City and 10 miles south of the spot where the Akron sank. She also wore his class ring, which he was wearing when death overtook him. His underslung pipe, which he always held unlighted in his mouth on board a dirigible, was in his pocket when his body was found, she said.

YOUTHS POST RED BILLS; FAMILIES ON RELIEF ROLLS

Three youths whose families are all on the relief rolls were arrested last night as they were posting handbills of a communist organization on the walls of buildings at Division street and Ashland avenue.

The bills condemned "enforced labor" in the reforestation camps authorized by the government, which were referred to as "training for war." Those arrested are John Donaldson and Edward Rejba, 2123 Potomac avenue, and Theodore Przytulski, 1427 North Wood street.

Oswald, the Octopus, Will Have Banquet on Crabs

San Francisco, Cal., April 27.—(AP)—Oswald, the octopus, which shattered longevity records for his kind in fresh water surroundings at Chicago, is going to have a banquet. A. Seale, superintendent of the municipal aquarium here, sent six fat bay crabs to Chicago by air for Oswald to feast on today.

FOUR INDICTED ON CHARGES OF TRADE BOYCOTT

Officials of Employers and Union Named.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Bennie Macklin and William Coleman robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in the penitentiary by Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

Two officials of the Associated Sheet Metal Employers and the president and a business agent of the Sheet Metal Workers' union, local 73, were reported named yesterday by the Cook county grand jury in true bills charging them with conspiracy to boycott trade. Bond was set at $5,000 for each defendant.

Those reported named are George Krutchkoff, president of the employers' association, and Fred Ponchot, secretary; James Close, president of the union, and Charles West, union business agent.

Part of Courtney's Drive.

The action of the grand jury marked another step in the drive of State's Attorney Courtney to break up all racketeering organizations preying on legitimate business. Evidence for the grand jury action was gathered on Wednesday in raids on the offices of the employers' association at 350 North Clark street and the union headquarters at 620 South Ashland avenue. Books and records were seized and Close and West were arrested in the raids. Ponchot and Krutchkoff appeared at the Criminal court building and posted bond yesterday shortly after the true bills were reported.

Sixteen Chicago contractors are said to have answered the state's attorney's plea to help the law enforcing agencies by testifying before the grand jury.

Contractors Refuse to Join.

The jurors are said to have been told that several contractors, who were not members of the employers' association, were approached last December by officials of the sheet metal union and told to "get in right with the downtown office [the associated employers]." The contractors, according to the alleged testimony, refused to join because of the $1,000 initiation fee and the 3 per cent "dues" demanded on each contract.

A strike was called, the witnesses are said to have testified, when they failed to join the association, and the contractors were forced to fall in line to carry on their business.

The alleged collusion between the union and employers' association is said to have served to fix prices on contracts and to give jobs to the favored members of the association. Failure to obey edicts of the employers' association was said to have brought strikes and boycotts.

Letter Reveals Methods.

The methods used by the employers' association in collecting "dues" was shown in a letter seized in one of the raids. The letter said:

"This is to call your attention to the fact that your report of business during the month of March is due to be filed. If no orders are received, a report so stating should be sent in.

"In submitting your report you are to list the name of building or owner and location of job with amount to be received for such work. Items amounting to $25 or less each can be grouped together and listed as one item. Check in payment of the dues should accompany your report, the same being for 3 per cent on total of all work closed. In all cases this remittance must be in the business manager's hands by the 15th of the month."

REPAIRS FOR AKRON INCOMPLETE IN LAST FLIGHT, WILEY ADMITS

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—A belief that the entire wreckage of the Akron had been located and testimony that certain structural reinforcements in the airship had not been completed before its last flight were given today to the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

Lieutenant Commander J. L. Fisher, mooring officer at Lakehurst, is convinced the Akron's hulk had been located and, given the time and reasonably good weather, the entire wreckage can be recovered.

Evidence that certain reënforcements on the Akron had not been made before its last flight was given by Lieutenant Commander H. V. Wiley, sole surviving officer. He testified, at his own request, to correct his previous testimony.

"I knew of these reënforcements," Wiley said, "and had seen like ones being made on the Akron. As they were not of an urgent nature, I had concluded that they had been attended to."

Wiley said he had spent some 5,000 hours in airships, while some of the German war time Zeppelin captains of his acquaintance had much less.

SNOW ISOLATES BRITISH CLIMBERS OF MT. EVEREST

DARJEELING, Bengal, India, April 27.—(AP)—The British Mount Everest expedition under Hugh Ruttledge seeking to be the first ever to scale the peak of the world's highest mountain, was reported temporarily isolated today by heavy snowfalls.

Communications were severed and it was impossible to deliver stores and equipment. The mountain climbers were believed to be six camps above their Rongbuk valley base, with two more camps to be established before they begin the ascent proper.

The Ruttledge expedition already was well on its way when members of the Houston British expedition succeeded recently in conquering Mount Everest for the first time by air.

INDICT NEW YORK GANG LEADER AS U.S. TAX DODGER

Two Aids Also Named by Federal Jury.

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—"Waxy Gordon," one of the last of New York's big-time racketeers of the boom days, was indicted this afternoon by the federal grand jury, charged with income tax violation.

Gordon, whose real name is Irving Wexler, owes the government $382,973 in taxes, according to the indictment, on incomes for 1930 and 1931, which totaled $1,516,690.

Louis Cohen and Samuel Gurock, two supposed lieutenants, were indicted with him, charged with conspiring with their leader to evade the tax, and also named is Max Greenberg, who was shot and killed recently in an Elizabeth, N. J., hotel.

There are four counts in the indictment, charging conspiracy and evasion of tax.

In 1930, it is charged, Gordon had a net income of $1,427,531 and in 1931 of $189,159. The government assesses the tax for 1930 at $347,565 and for 1931 at $35,408.

Gordon lived in a ten room apartment which cost $6,000 a year; he owned a summer home at Bradley Beach, N. J., and had three expensive cars, he paid $10 a piece for suits of underwear and $225 each for suits cut by Al Capone's New York tailor. But in 1931 he paid only $10.76 federal income tax, and the following year, after long delay, $2,605.

ABOLISH 27 JOBS AT THE SOUTHERN ILLINOIS PRISON

Carbondale, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—In line with the program of economy being carried out by the Gov. Horner administration, Joe E. Regan, warden of the Southern Illinois penitentiary, announced today that 27 jobs at the prison were to be abolished immediately, a saving of $182,000 a year or for the 1933-'35 biennium of $372,000.

The reduction in the prison force followed a survey at the penitentiary, which is located at Menard, by efficency experts.

Among the positions abolished were those of five industrial superintendents and five clerks and stenographers.

THE FAIR RISES, AN EDUCATION IN OLD AND NEW

It Will Show Machine Age and What Went Before.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Henry Adams, in the course of his famous "education," came to Chicago in 1893, and what he saw here astonished him. He had learned at last, he said, that America had a goal and this was it. He found a definite unitary sense of things in Chicago in the classical architecture and the gentle landscapes of that day. Education popped out at him from every corner until he had to sit down on the steps in dismay, ashamed of how little he knew.

So it will be with a new Adams who comes to A Century of Progress exposition this summer. The lovely classical order of the old exposition will be revived only in the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park. In its place will be a new and at first a bizarre architecture, born of new materials of the machine age, fashioned toward the future when man will command beauty and comfort.

Climate, new decorations will come at his will. The gentle, sophisticated Victorian Adams might find here the answer to his question concerning the machine and capitalism—how long and how far? Forty years later it is oriented, definite again, and Chicago is the scene.

Grotesque Mayan Temple Rises.

Visitors to the fair grounds are astonished at the daily transformations there, the emergence of form and color, the new world that it opens. It is necessary to place the old in perspective, and one may begin with the oldest. This is the Mayan temple, now rising in grotesque carvings. The Serpent is here as in the Garden of Eden, made of stone, hiding in the courts of the old nunnery of Uxmal to whisper to the Tree of Knowledge.

Little is known of the ancient American civilization which this typifies. But the Mayans were building great palaces and temples of stone rubble and cement long before the Spaniards came. And these were days of no idle men and women, for the king owned all the gold and all the labor, and the lot of each man and woman was fixed for life by royal decree. They were never hungry, and they never talked of individualism, and their god was visibly on his throne before them.

Many Types of Indians to Encamp.

Across the way from the Mayan temple groups of Indians will be in camp. We come into historic America, with the northwest coast villagers and their carved totem poles, one of the woodland groups living in wigwams, the hunters of the plains, the herders of the southwest, and the cliff dwellers. Contracts have just been signed with various groups, and plans for the landscaping and realistic staging of their life are being made.

Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, head of the anthropological exhibits, will also display effigy mounds, fortresses, and earth pyramids of the lower Mississippi, where he has spent years of research with his University of Chicago group. The most interesting of these exhibits, perhaps, will be the oldest known inhabitant of Illinois, the "Black Sand" man found near Spoon river, buried by his camp fire of somewhere around 5,000 years ago.

CHORUS OF 1,200 MEETS DIRECTOR OF JEWISH FETE

Isaac Van Grove, director of the pageant "Romance of a People," which will be portrayed July 3, at Soldiers' field as the main event of Jewish day at A Century of Progress, last night faced a throng of 1,200 singers at the Hotel La Salle. It was the initial meeting of the chorus members for the fête. The cast of actors, dancers and singers will total 3,000. The stage to be utilized will be one of the largest ever built.

Four governors are among the sponsors for the pageant. They are Horner of Illinois, Seligman of New Mexico, Lehmann of New York, and Meyer of Oregon. Judge Harry Fisher is chairman of the celebration, Meyer W. Weisgal, executive director, and Rabbi Solomon Goldman chairman of the pageant committee. Director Van Grove, formerly conductor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, outlined in a talk last night the prospective contribution of the chorus members to the pageant, which will portray the history of the Jewish race from the time of Abraham to the present day.

NAVY'S EXHIBIT FOR WORLD FAIR REACHES CHICAGO

The United States navy's exhibit for A Century of Progress arrived from Washington in six carloads yesterday. Installation in the Federal building at the exposition grounds will begin within the next week. Included in the exhibit, which is in charge of Capt. Frank H. Roberts, U. S. N., will be six models of obsolete warships and six of modern design. Above the exhibit will be a frieze of twelve paintings by Hilda Goldblatt, Chicago marine artist.

Pennsy Road Names Train for Century of Progress

The Pennsylvania railroad has given A Century of Progress exposition recognition by changing the name of one of its New York-Chicago trains from "Mercantile Express" to "Progress Limited." The train will continue to arrive in Chicago at 5:30 p. m., central standard time.

Earl Visits Chicago

EARL OF WARWICK.

Of things American, Hollywood's fairest rank second to Chicago's fair in the interests of the 22 year old Guy Fulk Greville, seventh earl of Warwick, he indicated last night as he dropped into the Chicago airport via American Airways from St. Louis. The earl is due to leave tomorrow morning by air for New York. His day here will be spent inspecting the grounds of A Century of Progress, about which he says, "I've heard of it everywhere."

Deeply tanned by the suns of Florida and more recently of California, where he has spent much of his time since he arrived in this country last January, the tall, slender, blackhaired young Englishman was met by his hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Manning and Merrill C. Meigs.

Of his reputed romantic attachment for Sally Blane, young film beauty, this scion of one of England's oldest families said mildly, "O, I don't think that's true." He said he understood Miss Blane is soon to sail for England to make pictures there.

"Has she an invitation to visit you?" he was asked. "All Americans have an invitation to visit me," was his reply.

COL. McCORMICK CALLS COLLEGES OF EAST RADICAL

Set Example of Excess in Spending, Too.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—Harvard and Yale were specifically accused today by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, of setting an extravagant example, by their "baronial and palatial halls." State (tax supported) institutions of higher learning throughout the country follow those models.

Col. McCormick, who spoke at a luncheon held in his honor by the Advertising Club of New York, named these two universities as sources—with others along the Atlantic seaboard—of "the pink doctrines" being taught in schools and colleges throughout the country.

The major portion of his address, like the one he delivered at a luncheon of the Bond Club of New York on Wednesday, was devoted to a discussion of the evils of excessive taxation, to which he ascribed the current economic difficulties, and to a plea to business men to take an active part in politics and fight "the subvertists, those who wish to destroy the economic system of the country in which we have grown to prosperity and in which we still lead."

The reference to the universities came when the publisher said that while in his boyhood radicalism was supposed to originate in the west, "the fact of the matter is that the seat of radicalism, socialism, and communism is in the city in which we all are today.

East Most Radical.

"The fact is that the pink doctrines which I find taught in the high schools and colleges throughout this country originate in the old established institutions of learning along the Atlantic coast.

"The excessive extravagance in habits and buildings at tax supported institutions," he continued, "is merely imitated after the baronial and palatial halls of Harvard and Yale."

Asked, after the luncheon, about his reference to "extravagance" in connection with these two institutions, Col. McCormick said that "I perhaps should have included Princeton," and he explained his point as to "extravagance" by saying that while years ago a college student used to live in rather monastic surroundings, "today he lives in buildings that rival the Waldorf-Astoria in luxury." Now, he said, because Harvard, Yale, and others have great Gothic buildings, "Michigan and other institutions feel that they must have the same."

Col. McCormick replied in the affirmative when he was asked whether he had also meant to include Harvard and Yale in his charges against the "old established institutions of learning."

Those at Speakers' Table.

Grover A. Whalen, president of the Advertising club, presided, and Don U. Bridge, advertising director of the New York Times, was chairman. Those at the speakers' table included Gilbert T. Hodges of the executive board of the Sun; Frank G. Sayre of the Pennsylvania company; Bernarr Macfadden, publisher of Liberty magazine; M. Preston Goodfellow, publisher of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle; Ogden Reid, publisher of the Herald Tribune; Capt. Joseph M. Patterson, publisher of the Daily News; Frank E. Gannett, president of the Gannett newspapers; James Wright Brown, owner of Editor and Publisher; Maurice B. Sohl, attorney, and Lee E. Olwell, publisher of the Evening Journal. Adolph Ochs, publisher of the Times, sent a telegram of regret that he could not attend.

Col. McCormick's address was broadcast over networks of the National Broadcasting company and the Columbia Broadcasting system.

Mr. Whalen, in concluding the meeting, said it was vital that the business man become "tax conscious." He described the retail sales tax in this state as "a great burden" on the retail industry. He said that economic experts say that such taxes should not be levied by states, and, if used at all, should be a federal matter. He promised the club's coöperation in any campaign of business men that Col. McCormick might start along the lines of his address.

Police Dump Into Lake 2,000 Seized Weapons

More than 2,000 weapons taken from criminals by Chicago police during the last year were dumped into the lake yesterday afternoon. The weapons were loaded on the tug Britten, taken five miles out in the lake, and dumped into the water. About 1,000 pistols and revolvers, 300 shotguns, knives, clubs, blackjacks, and rifles were included in the collection.

TOBEY
Michigan Avenue at Lake St.

BREWERS MAY SEEK TO UPSET BEER ORDINANCE

Threaten Court Fight; Retailers Protest.

Police Commissioner Allman issued a general order yesterday calling for strict enforcement of two amendments to the beer ordinance as passed by the city council Wednesday night and signed by Mayor Kelly. The beer trade will be given ten days to become adjusted to the new regulations before penalties will be invoked, it was said at the city hall.

At the same time officials of the state finance department announced that state licenses for retailing beer and permits for the manufacture or the importing of the brew are to be placed on sale this morning on the ground floor at 33 North La Salle street.

Publication of the amendment to the city beer ordinance requiring the etching or blowing of the brewer's name into all beer bottles and the stamping of the exact alcoholic content, date of manufacture, and date of bottling on all labels brought a groan of protest from the brewers yesterday. There were indications that the amendment, which provides fines of $25 to $200 for each violation, might be resisted in the courts.

Call Expense Unnecessary.

"The amendment is unnecessary and ridiculous," said H. F. Ernst, head of the Prima brewery and president of the Illinois State Brewers' association. "To compel us to etch the name into each bottle would be a very expensive process and to demand that the name be blown in by the manufacturer would oblige us to junk the millions of bottles we have bought and try to get more from the already overworked factories.

"What good purpose can this amendment serve? The consumer is assured right now that any bottle carrying the label of a given brewer contains the beer of that brewer. Federal inspectors see to that."

Local managers for several out of town breweries indicated that if the ordinance were upheld they might withdraw from the Chicago market rather than incur the expense of trade marking all bottles merely to meet Chicago requirements.

Mr. Ernst was equally critical of the requirement for stamping the alcoholic content and date of manufacture and bottling. "No two chemists would agree to the .01 percentage on any bottle, and besides the alcoholic content varies in each bottle, even from the same beer vat," he added.

Holds U. S. Inspection Sufficient.

"There has been some public talk about green beer and beer of low alcoholic content, which talk probably inspired these amendments. I can assure the city council that every brewer desires to keep the alcoholic content as high as possible within the law. If any brewer is turning out an inferior product, let him be punished, but don't compel the whole industry to pay the penalty."

To compel the brewers to stamp the date of manufacture and of bottling on each bottle would boost labor costs to a point where a higher wholesale price would be necessary, Mr. Ernst maintained.

Retailers were also complaining yesterday that at the rate the federal, state and municipal governments are piling taxes on the beverage, it may soon be impossible to sell beer at a reasonable price.

The new city beer ordinance amendment prorates the $150 license good until July 1 to cover only the period the licensee has been selling beer, but requires all drug stores, groceries, and delicatessens to pay the license.

Superior Judge McGoorty to Leave Hospital Today

Superior Judge John P. McGoorty will be able to return to his home from the American hospital today, his physician, Dr. Max Thorek announced yesterday. Judge McGoorty has been in the hospital for two weeks, following an operation for an intestinal disorder.

NEBRASKA ASSEMBLY PUTS DRY ACT REPEAL BILL UP TO GOVERNOR

Lincoln, Neb., April 27.—(AP)—The state senate today passed Gov. C. W. Bryan's bill providing for a state convention in December, 1934, to consider repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The vote was 28 to 0. The house has passed the measure and it now goes to the governor for his signature.

It provides for the election in November next year of a nonpartisan ballot of 100 delegates instructed to vote the sentiment of their districts.

After passing the measure the senate began work on the bill to legalize 3.2 per cent beer. This bill also has been passed by the house.

Texas to Vote on Beer Aug. 26.

Austin, Tex., April 27.—(AP)—The Texas senate today joined the house in voting to submit the question of legalization of 3.2 per cent beer to the people on next Aug. 26. The proposed constitutional amendment now returns to the house for concurrence in a minor senate amendment.

INDIANA COURT MOVES TO PUNISH RACKET IN BEER

Evansville, Ind., April 27.—[Special.]—Investigation into monopolistic features of the new state beer law was ordered here today by the county Circuit court, while six fraternal organizations united to demand cheaper beer, which is generally selling at 20 cents a pint bottle.

Judge John H. Spencer ordered W. K. Denton, the prosecutor, to determine whether there had been violation of laws against restraint of trade in the action of the beer importers and wholesalers in holding up the price of the brew. The judge acted when he was informed that Philip Blessinger, a wholesaler, had been threatened with curtailment of his supply of outstate beer if he reduced the price on a consignment of beer from Fort Wayne, which he had bought directly from the brewery.

Judge Spencer advised the prosecutor that "importers have no legal control over beer manufacturers in Indiana, cannot legally compel wholesalers to hold up the prices of beer, and cannot force them to handle certain brands," and that any effort to establish a monopoly was a proper cause for prosecution.

The Germania Maennerchor, Knights of Columbus, Moose, Owls, Central Turnverein, and Eagles pledged support to a movement to force the price of beer down in Evansville.

MICHIGAN BEER BILL APPROVED BY GOVERNOR

Lansing, Mich., April 27.—[Special.]—Gov. William A. Comstock today stifled his objections to the beer bill passed by the legislature Wednesday and attached his signature to the measure.

The act, immediately effective, legalizes possession and transportation of 3.2 beer and wine but actual sales probably will not be possible until some time next week. The law sets up elaborate machinery for state control of manufacture, distribution, and sale of the beer.

Gov. Comstock, after having threatened to veto the bill Wednesday if the house approved the measure in the form it passed the senate, modified his opinion directly after the house concurred in the senate changes.

SELLS BEER TO TEST KANSAS PROHIBITION LAW

Lawrence, Kas., April 27.—(AP)—Frank McDonald, president of the Young Democrats of Kansas and former athletic director of the Haskell Indian institute here, was charged today with possession and sale of liquor in connection with a sale of 3.2 beer at a camp near here last Monday in a purported effort to obtain a test of the Kansas prohibitory laws.

The information also names C. R. Green, a youth who participated in the alleged beer party, which was attended by more than 20 persons.

Assistant Attorney General Everett Steerman said he had acted under instructions of Roland Boynton, attorney general, in filing the charges against McDonald.

A GOOD BOOZE BUSINESS QUITS COUNTY BUILDING

Drys Seize 3 After Call from Whealan's Office.

Two men who were doing a thriving business in colored spirits at 50 cents the half pint and a third man who accompanied them were seized by prohibition agents yesterday in the corridor on the first floor of the county building. They identified themselves as Fred Arnold, 26 years old, and Lawrence Holcomb, 59 years old, both of 3126½ North Spaulding avenue, and John Cronin, 31 years old, 1046 North Keystone avenue.

The information that led to the arrest was received by Chief Enforcement Officer Al Aman in an anonymous telephone call from the office of Emmett Whealan, president of the county board.

"Employes in the building are wandering away," the caller said. "They return in a very merry mood with liquor on their breath. Some of them do not return. I believe there is whisky in the building."

Two Agents Sent to Scene.

Two agents were dispatched to the county building and found the bootlegging trio in the first floor corridor. Two county highway policemen in full uniform approached the alleged bootleggers before the dry agents could make the arrest.

"Ah," said the leader of the agents, halting his companion, "it is a state case."

The policemen, however, tucked a pint each in uniform pockets, paid their dollar, and hurried back to their law enforcement duties. Their names were not taken. The agents searched the three merchants and found 10 pint bottles full of colored spirits concealed on the persons of Arnold and Holcomb.

Taken before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker, Arnold was held in bond of $2,000. Bond of $1,000 was set for Holcomb and Cronin was released in his own recognizance. The hearing was continued until May 1.

The Proprietor Explains.

Arnold, who has been arrested four times for prohibition violations, explained that he was the proprietor of the business.

"I hired Holcomb to sell the booze while I acted as the overseer," he told Assistant United States Attorney Alfred W. Bosworth. "I paid him 52 cents a day, his room, board, and laundry, although he never took advantage of the laundry. The 2 cents was for sales tax. I wanted to be legal."

"How about Cronin?" Arnold was asked.

"He just came along to keep us company," Arnold said.

METAL WORKER DIES AFTER FALL.

Albert Le Clair, 36 years old, 5145 Potomac avenue, a metal worker, died yesterday in the West Suburban hospital of injuries suffered Wednesday when he fell from the second floor of a building he was repairing at 318 North Lorel avenue.

IOWA FARMERS TIE ROPE AROUND NECK OF JUDGE

String Him Up, but He Still Defies Them.

ered there and attacked deputy sheriffs during a sale of farm property. They seized the attorney for the foreclosure, forced him to kiss an American flag and swear he would not bring any more foreclosure actions. About 150 of the farmers then came to Le Mars.

The first went to the home of Clarence Becker, who has been declared the owner of a contested property. He was taken to the ball park and threatened with hanging. Sheriff R. E. Rippey persuaded them to let Becker go and they went to Judge Bradley's courtroom and seized him. He was seized and choked on the bench and later on the courthouse lawn before being taken out of town.

Iowa recently passed a law declaring a moratorium on farm mortgage sales, and a case in which the constitutionality of the law was pleaded was to have come before Judge Bradley today.

Governor Assails Sheriff.

Des Moines, Ia., April 27.—[Special.]—Gov. Clyde L. Herring, not yet officially informed of the mistreatment of Judge C. C. Bradley, said that the situation at Le Mars is aggravated because Sheriff R. E. Rippey is a "weak sister and hasn't nerve enough to uphold the law."

Commenting on reports that Rippey could not be found throughout the abduction of the judge, the governor declared: "He never can be when matters of this kind arise."

Gov. Herring declared the state would reinforce peace officers at Le Mars whenever an appeal was made by the sheriff.

Will Wait an Appeal.

"We will do whatever is necessary to preserve law and order when an appeal is made by the sheriff. Our duty is to wait an appeal.

"The difficulty in matters of this kind usually can be traced to local peace officers who haven't the nerve to enforce the law.

"I have had Rippey up here to talk over the situation. He has never asked for state aid, but when he does he will get it.

"The trouble is that weak sisters haven't the nerve to uphold the law. That's the trouble as far as Rippey is concerned."

Irish Dail Gets Final Notice on Motion to Abolish Oath

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, April 27.—(AP)—President Eamon de Valera gave final notice in the dail eireann today of a motion necessary for the removal of the oath of allegiance to the British crown. The dail votes on the motion next Wednesday. With passage a foregone conclusion, the assent of the governor general is expected the same day.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

BUREAUCRATIC REPRESSION.

Three attempts upon the freedom of the press have been made in this session of congress and have not yet been disposed of. One is in the blue sky law affecting the advertisement of securities, another in an amendment of the pure food and drug act, a third in a measure emanating from the state department to penalize disclosure of state secrets.

The last named has been radically cut down. In its first form it sweepingly and severely penalized both the employé of executive departments guilty of giving information to the press without special permission and the newspapers publishing the information. In this form it ignored the right of the public to know what is going on in its government without official censorship. A prompt protest has resulted in confining restraint to employés who obtain from another having custody of or access to any official diplomatic code or any matter prepared in such code or purporting to have been prepared in code who shall willfully without authorization or competent authority publish or furnish to another such code or matter, or any matter which was obtained while in process of transmission between any foreign government and its diplomatic mission in the United States. Such offender is subject to a fine of not more than $10,000, or may be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.

There is, we think, no reasonable objection to the protection of diplomatic interchange, though we feel that the penalty prescribed is excessive. It places the offense with the most serious felonies and by its unnecessary severity opens the way to abuse.

The proposed provisions in the securities bill and the pure food and drug act would impose upon newspapers of more than local circulation a restraint which would be in effect practical suppression. Advertising would have to conform for general circulation to the most severe laws enacted in any of the states covered by the newspaper accepting it and the interpretation of many courts. Any misjudgment would threaten prosecution and penalty. The imposition of so complicated and unpredictable a system of censorship would be an intolerable burden upon the conduct of any newspaper of general circulation. The effort to protect the public from unlawful flotations or sale of products will defeat itself by such immoderate and ill-considered extensions of bureaucratic power.

All three measures are illustrations of the bureaucratic ambition for power. They reveal the need for alert defense of the public right to information and the reasonable freedom of private enterprise. In recent years there has been a notable recrudescence of attacks upon the freedom of publicity and liberty of the press. Repressive legislation by political bosses in Minnesota had to be taken to the federal Supreme court for the assertion of constitutional right. In Ohio and South Dakota we have had phenomena of the same kind. Now in the federal congress we have these new instances of an unrestrained will to suppress publicity, of course under the guise of protection for public interests. There is no more vital public interest than its right to information. A free government and a free society cannot exist without the maintenance of that right. The errors and excesses of improper publicity do not call for or justify heedless restraints. It is a duty of congress to examine every censorship proposal with care and with watchful regard for the public interest in publicity and the principle of free press.

THE RETREAT FROM BEDLAM.

Joe Grein, the city sealer, has a smile on his face, although one corner of it is sour. Mr. Grein in private life has been a vender of home brew materials and equipment in addition to other commodities. Federal prohibition agents visited his place of business with trucks and carted off 18 loads of his property, $35,000 in value. The material was put in a warehouse and kept there many months.

Meanwhile congress, searching for new revenues, levied a tax upon the very materials which the government was keeping Mr. Grein from selling and for the sale of which it was proposing to prosecute him. Now the federal court in this district has ordered the federal marshal to return Mr. Grein's property and to pay all the costs of the case, which it is estimated will amount to about $10,000. Mr. Grein has his goods back, having been deprived of their use and profit and having suffered such additional loss as may have occurred to their quality in the warehouse.

His smile is derived from the government's acknowledgment that the action of its agents was irresponsible and inexcusable. The sour curve is caused by the fact that he pockets a loss. He has agreed not to sue the responsible agents, but he says that the agreement will not prevent him from filing charges against them with the federal civil service commission.

Mr. Grein should go further than this. He should file a claim with the federal Court of Claims for damage done goods which congress had the temerity and audacity to tax and which federal agents had the audacity to take from him. There are a number of distinguished cases which will puzzle the future historian to discover what manner of men could have been responsible for the government acts involved in them. The Lithuanian janitor who served six months in jail for making up a batch of beer out of these taxed ingredients will afford one of these instances for interested but skeptical research. Fred Palm's continuance in the penitentiary after Michigan has voted the repeal of the 18th amendment will offer another. Mr. Grein will have a niche in the same hall of government bedlam, but he is entitled to more satisfaction than that.

MAYOR KELLY'S SOUND PROGRAM.

Mayor Kelly has made two important pronouncements of policy in the last few days. If he is able to carry these two plans into effect he will have started the local governments of Chicago on the road back to financial solvency.

He has let it be known, in the first place, that expenditures of the city and the school board this year should not exceed the revenues actually to be received. That means, of course, a sharp reduction in outlay. In recent years it has been the custom to accept an estimate of income made up of hopes and hot air as well as reasonable expectations, with the result that each year saw the deficits growing. Mayor Kelly's determination to alter this procedure is all to the good. It holds out the promise of reductions in individual tax bills and therefore it offers hope of decreased delinquencies. It must be obvious by this time that tax bills in this community have risen to the point where the law of diminishing returns is operative. Only by reducing the charges can the total income of the governments be increased. The costs of government must be scaled down if ownership is again to become attractive, if property values are to rise, and if the tax-paying ability of property owners is to be restored.

The other policy announced by Mayor Kelly was directed toward tax delinquency. The delinquents have hitherto been handled with kid gloves, he said, "but now we'll have to get rough. Taxes must be paid."

It is to be hoped that the mayor speaks not only his own determination but that of the Democratic organization which is responsible for the tax assessing and collecting machinery at every point.

Mayor Kelly may encounter among his colleagues a disposition to continue the easy-going policies which have characterized the collection of taxes in this community for the last four or five years. Politicians do not like to irritate their constituents. No doubt a vigorous prosecution of the tax claims will make some enemies among the delinquent property owners and their lawyers who have contingent fees at stake.

Leniency, however, has been carried too far. Almost half of last year's taxes and about as large a proportion of this year's are delinquent. We cannot have government in this community financed by half the taxpayers. We cannot let half the taxpayers get away with nonpayment and expect the rest to go on meeting their bills. The solvency of government in this community requires the adoption of the two policies which Mayor Kelly has outlined. The taxes must be brought down to the level of the ability of the property owners to pay and taxes must be collected.

THIS MADE IT THE GENUINE TRA LA.

When it snowed Tuesday and Wednesday mornings the people of this region knew for certain that at last it was spring. Seeing the bloodroot open its white blossoms, the trillium raise its closed bud, the hermit thrush kicking up last year's brown leaves, and the blackbirds bobbing in the oaks would contain no certain evidence that spring was dancing through the woods with blossoms in her hair. Not even the spread of blue through the bluebells, the opening of the white adder's tongue, or the suggestions of impending bloom in the wild plums would give any conviction that the picture was real. Doubts are ingrained in the hardy citizen inured to this sturdy climate. He can't be fooled by any April tricks. Ordinarily he'll believe in spring when it is midsummer, and his is an experience which builds a sturdy folk, asking no favors and taking no chances. But when one day has a temperature which makes the feet drag and adds a ton net weight to the wearing apparel and the next day slams down snowflakes half the size of an oak leaf, we know that spring is here. No fooling.

Editorial of the Day

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

[Peoria Transcript.]

Once more an attempt will be made to reduce the cost of printing the Congressional Record—this time, perhaps, with more chance of success than formerly.

Representative Cannon, Democrat, of Wisconsin, has offered a bill in the lower house to reduce the present free distribution of the Record from 31,000 copies to 5,000. This, he estimates, will save the taxpayers of the nation at least $4,000 a day.

At present members of the senate are entitled to 88 copies of the publication for free distribution, while members of the house get 60. Under the Cannon plan senators would get seven copies and house members six.

This is not the only argument in support of the Cannon bill, however. Its author thinks that by this method he would save both time and more money by cutting down speeches. If members of the house and senate were denied the privilege of distributing their speeches free to 30,000 voters, Cannon believes, the legislative mills would move more rapidly. He offers as proof of this the fact that when the farm bill came up for consideration by the house that body resolved not to permit amendments. Nevertheless, two full days were spent in talking about the measure while the country awaited action. This talk, Cannon thinks, was indulged in by members solely because they wanted to get their opinions to their constituents.

We are not sure the Cannon arguments are incontrovertible, but the $4,000 a day saving is impressive. Copies of the Congressional Record probably will always be secured by newspapers and others who have a justifiable reason for studying them. But, obviously, it is a waste of government money to send copies to business men who happen to have made contributions to the campaign fund of a successful congressional candidate only to have the business men toss them into the waste basket along with advertising letters and propaganda booklets.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE REPORT that daylight saving time, which comes in Sunday, was to be inflated so that, for instance, a quarter after nine would be twenty-five minutes to eleven and that on cloudy days if it's half past eight it will be fourteen minutes after twelve (south of Van Buren and east of the river) seems to be unfounded. Daylight saving time is confusing enough, anyhow, without inflating the darned thing.

A LADY has been appointed director of the mint; which proves the girls do not always carry their money in their stocking. But we'll have to wait until the U. S. gets some money to really prove this.

THE FINDING of the Hope Diamond in a pawnbroker's shop in Washington arouses strange feelings of distrust and apprehension out in the regions far remote from the center of government. We wish somebody down there would root around some more in that pawnshop and see if by any chance at all the Smithsonian institution, the Washington monument or the great golden dome of the capitol has been hocked.

NIGHT IS A GYPSY.

Weak unto swooning with odor of clover,
With moonlight too heavy, too rich to be borne,
Night is a gypsy, and dawn is her lover,
Pelting the heavens with glowing white roses,
She softens the earth of reality's glare;
Then, in its place, what a land she discloses,
A world of sheer beauty that all men might share!

O Night born of Winter in love with the Spring,
Wild consort of winds and of swift running seas,
What magic is yours, what enchantment you bring
As you banish the land of realities!

Let earth always seem as you now make it seem:
The beautiful real, and the real . . . but a dream.

SHERRY KING.

THESE DAYS ARE SO FULL of contrasts! The U. S. will pour millions of dollars into Muscle Shoals to manufacture nitrates so that the farmer can spread 'em on his land and raise bigger crops. And, likewise, the U. S. says instead of raising bigger crops he must raise smaller crops. And the brewers say that beer lends zest to the appetite and cheer to the heart and awakens the better nature in man. But the Nazis fill themselves full of beer and then go out and kick the pants off the Jews and the Socialists. Oh, well, things are just naturally hard to understand right now.

AND THE DEMOCRATS are all for inflation, but they wish Franklin Delano while he's about it would inflate a few of the faithful or as many as possible into first, second and third class postmaster jobs. Inflation begins with money, but it needn't stay there.

WE ACCEPT THE AMENDMENT.

Sir: You say that you would not give one page from Carlyle's "History of the French Revolution" for all that the bright young people of today write in the next five centuries. That, sir, remains to be seen. But for all that they have written in the past decade, not one paragraph of that grand book. Yet, sir, in drawing up a list for those unfortunates who cannot buy the very latest and best literature you have sadly slighted our great American authors. Then, in the spirit of "Buy American," and for those patrons of underendowed libraries who will be forced to do without the new and shining authors—at least until prosperity returns—may I commend some old and dusty tomes that enjoyed, in their day, some distinction and might, even now, serve to pass the time until that new, glorious day when all will be able to buy the very latest work? Then, sir, for adventure, why not "Moby Dick" or "Two Years Before the Mast"; for meditation, Thoreau's "Walden"; for humor, Mark Twain's epic, "Roughing It"; for history, humor—or for style alone—"A Knickerbocker History of New York," and for stark tragedy and deep shrouded mystery read Mr. Poe's unfinished "Adventure of A. Gordon Pym"?

EL CABALLERO VIEJO.

FOR SALE OF TRADE [Adv.]—A small book for which owner paid sixty cents, published by the United States government printing office and entitled "Government Positions Not Under the Civil Service." Book not in perfect condition but still legible. Will sell for punched dime or street car transfer or trade for hot dog sandwich. Address "Disgusted," 3rd bench north of Jackson monument, Lafayette square, Washington, D. C.

THE BLACK CAT.

I walk about from place to place
And ponder on my life;
They burned my mistress at the stake
For witching the preacher's wife.
She was bad, my mistress was.
She curdled the goodwife's milk.
And her hair was the color of old chablis,
And her skin was like china silk.
I took her to the Sabbath hill
When the moon was pointed in.
And there the horned fiend lay with her,
For Satan loved her more than sin.
We had a garden full of herbs
That we weeded in the dawn.
We made a cabalistic sign
And conjured up the Devil's spawn.
We gave the doctor's dog the mange,
We gave the farmers' cattle fits,
We spoiled the white hens' new-laid eggs,
And we burned the meat upon the spits.
The harm we did was wonderful—
Before they soaked us both in pitch.
Now I lick my paws by the cottage fire,
Who was familiar to a witch.

THE ALKALI HABIT.

THE abuse of medicines is a source of great harm to health. When it comes to taking medicine some people are quick on the trigger. If they don't feel just right they take a dose of medicine. It matters little what the feeling is or what the medicine is. If it is medicine there is some magic about it.

They lose sight of the fact that nature, left to herself, will usually bring a man safely into port. I presume cathartics and laxatives lead the list of medicines taken without due provocation, but soda is right up near the front. It is taken to combat indigestion and a lot of other symptoms and, lately, some go so far as to take it to prevent colds and some other disorders that they know not but they fear.

Here is a letter from a man who says he takes a teaspoonful twice a day and he wants to know how long he can keep it up without harm. As he had a page of symptoms it is possible that he had taken too much soda when he took his first dose.

Some of us are very much afraid of acidosis. Probably it is not known that alkalosis is about as prevalent as acidosis. Furthermore, some who think they have the latter have the former.

Dr. Portis gives the following as symptoms which should cause those taking alkalis to suspect that they have alkalosis, or are on the brink of it: "The first thing is that your patient tells you he is developing a distaste for his alkali. You want to be on your guard, for that patient is having an alkalosis. If a patient whose urine has been acid suddenly has an alkaline urine be on your guard."

This advice was given during the course of an address to a medical society by Dr. Portis. Among other symptoms of alkalosis he gave are: A sour nausea, constant headaches, vertigo; then comes slight edema or dropsy, a lowering of mentality, and, after that, delirium.

Among the persons who do not stand alkalis well are the old, those with certain types of Bright's disease, and some of the troubles in certain parts of the upper digestive tract.

If physicians must be on guard to protect their patients from too much alkali, how about the persons who keep the soda can handy and who take a dose on suspicion? How about those who have the soda habit?

STOPPING CIGARETS.

S. D. writes: 1. What is sodium rhodonate?

2. Can it be taken without a doctor's orders?

3. I have been trying for the last year to give up cigarets, but will power does not stop the craving. Neither does diet, though it helps some.

REPLY.

1. It is about the same as sodium thiocyanate.

2. Yes, but taking it without knowing whether it is needed and with no direction is generally a waste of energy.

3. I judge what you need is determination and fixedness of purpose. These are constituents of character. If you still smoke all you mean is that it has occurred to you occasionally that possibly it would be better not to smoke. If you have not smoked for a year and you still have trouble in controlling your desire you need training. Diet has nothing to do with the case.

PARAFFIN EAR PLUGS.

G. I. E. writes: As I have been unable to sleep well, owing to the place where I live being noisy, and as I have always been easily awakened by even slight noises, I have lately been stuffing my ears before going to bed with paraffin wax. This has enabled me to get more sleep than usual, but have been afraid it might injure the ear. Some one mentioned that it might harm the ear owing to a change in air pressure or something like that. Is there danger of injury, and, if so, what?

REPLY.

There is no danger from change in air pressure since the air pressure in your room changes but little. If you were flying or deep diving that would be another story. If there is danger it is that some paraffin would get loose and would need to be fished out. There are ear plugs not open to this objection.

LEGAL INTEREST.

Chicago, April 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise what the legal rate of interest is on household loans? I mean loans made by the various advertising corporations.

M. M. M.

The maximum that can be stipulated for by contract is 7 per cent per annum in ordinary cases. In absence of agreement as to interest, 5 per cent is allowed after due on notes or other instruments in writing; on money received to use of another and retained without owner's knowledge; on money withheld by an unreasonable and vexatious delay, and on judgment. Pawnbrokers may charge 3 per cent per month, and licensees of state board of trade and commerce may charge 3½ per cent per month on loans of $300 or less. An agreement to pay more than the legal rate is usurious, and only the principal may be collected. Under 1929 statute the 7 per cent limit does not apply to collateral loans exceeding $5,000.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ARREST WARRANTS.

Chicago, April 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a billiard hall. Once in a while the police come in and question everybody in the place. 1. Can they make arrests without a warrant? 2. Can I demand that they do not bother my customers? 3. Is there a law forbidding the operation of coin operated amusement machines?

M. C. S.

1. Chapter 38, Revised Statutes, section 657, is as follows: "An arrest may be made by an officer or by a private person without warrant for a criminal offense committed or attempted in his presence, and by an officer when a criminal offense has in fact been committed and he has reasonable ground for believing that the person to be arrested has committed it."

2. We see no way to stop them from asking questions. We could advise to better advantage if you had told us what they apparently suspect.

3. No, but there is a law against gambling, including gambling machines.

40 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 28, 1893.

CHICAGO.—Members of the executive committee threw down the gage of battle yesterday in the passing of a harmless looking report which lets down the bar for future action in the matter of Sunday opening of the World's Fair. They have repudiated the contract made with congress in accepting the souvenir half dollars on the ground that a second act of congress made stipulations in direct opposition to the terms of the first contract, retaining in the United States treasury 1,141,760 Columbian half dollars to the face value of $570,880, until the World's Columbian Exposition should file bonds in that sum to repay the appropriation of $570,880 made for jurors' awards and kindred expenses.

Five hundred badges for the national and local officers and directors of the World's Fair and the chiefs of departments have been made and will be ready for delivery shortly. The badges are of gold, silver, and bronze, according to the rank of the officials for whom they are intended. The design is the same in every case—the Columbian Exposition coat of arms.

Representatives of the various churches of Chicago met at the Grand Pacific hotel last evening to take action with regard to the compulsory closing of saloons in the city on Sunday. Incidentally, the gathering passed a resolution protesting against any attempt to throw the fair gates open on the Sabbath.

The Viking ship, which is to be exhibited at the World's Fair in Chicago, will sail from Bergen on May 1.

Various firms throughout the city have named certain days on which their employés are to be given half or whole day holidays to visit the fair. The labor unions are negotiating for their members.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 28, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Wilson's selective conscription bill, drawn by the general army staff, will be passed by both houses of congress before adjournment tonight. When the house adjourned shortly before midnight an agreement had been reached to have a vote immediately after convening today on an amendment which would restore the measure in the form in which it came from the war department, eliminating the volunteer section substituted by the military committee. Final passage then will follow.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE.—The German airmen had one of the greatest surprises of their lives late yesterday. The day had been heavily overcast until nearly 6 o'clock in the evening, when the clouds suddenly thinned and the sun broke through. A few German machines had been sighted well back of their lines during the obscured period, but when the sun shone out several enemy squadrons, which had been housed all day, came out to stretch their wings in the sky. They had scarcely taken the air when the British machines pounced upon them, and in the fighting which ensued several German machines were seen to crash. Eight others were driven down completely out of control and are believed to have been destroyed.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The house of representatives yesterday refused to authorize Col. Roosevelt to raise an American volunteer division for service in Europe. By a vote of 170 to 106 it declined to amend the pending army bill to permit the colonel's plan. The senate probably will take similar action today.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While recruiting for the regular army took another slump yesterday compared with the day before, Illinois still led the country for the month with a total of 3,541 men. Pennsylvania was second with 3,153, New York third with 2,926, and Indiana fourth with 2,617.

IN REPLY TO PROF. LESSING.

Chicago, April 24.—The communication from Berlin from Mr. Lessing should have been particularly amusing to Chicago readers, acquainted as we are with all varieties of political whitewash.

To say that the anti-Semitic activities of the Nazis are directed only against the Galician Jews is to make a statement contrary to well authenticated facts, since what amounts to the disenfranchisement of all German Jews has been officially substantiated by Nazi news sources.

Further, to say, as did Mr. Lessing, that anti-Semitic violence consisted mainly of window breaking is to call practically every American foreign correspondent, including THE TRIBUNE'S estimable Sigrid Schultz, a liar, a fool, and blind.

It will take more than long distance whitewash to make Hitlerism palatable to the American people when internationally acclaimed men of the caliber of Architect Gropius, Scientist Einstein, Nobel Prize Winners Franck and Mann, and so on through an imposing list of greats are literally expatriated because of their Semitic ancestry. A political system founded on racial hatred and blind nationalism rests on a foundation of blood and tears.

ARCHIE OBOLER.

Chicago, April 24.—May I be permitted to reply to Prof. Lessing's diatribe against the eastern Jews? These Jews, chiefly Polish and Rumanian, were recruited during the German occupation of those invaded countries for the purpose of replacing Germans in the munitions plants who had been called to the colors. Among the inducements offered these bedeviled people was the vision of Germany—"advanced, civilized, and cultured"—freedom from oppression and pogroms. These Jews, believing a new era had dawned for them, toiled mightily to supply Germany's needs until the end of the war. With the end of the war came unemployment, and inasmuch as Germany gave preference to her own people in their industries there was nothing these Jews could do except become petty business men. In this they incurred the hatred of the German business men, and in the era of inflation and speculation that followed some of them learned and used the methods made famous by Insull, Krueger, et al.

Germany as long had organized anti-Semitic groups, and these groups did not hesitate to blame all their post-war ills on the Jews. Here comes the most shameful chapter in the history of the German Jews. They trampled each other in the rush to disclaim all connection with the eastern Jews, even going so far to claim that the eastern Jews were not really Jews at all, but descended from Kahzars and Turks, and that German Jews were the only true Jews. All this in a desperate effort to turn the tide of criticism from themselves to the hapless easterners. How much all this has availed them is now quite evident to any one who cares to read the newspapers, but to thousands of Jewish people the world over German Jewry's plight seems like retribution to a group of Jews who adopted a snooty attitude to their eastern brothers for no other reason than that the easterners were a poverty stricken group of manual workers without university education, while they felt themselves secure among the professional and industrial classes.

The rest of the professor's plea for Hitler hardly merits a reply in the light of the information available, so I for one will not attempt it.

J. MITCHELLA.

Chicago, April 20.—I should like to state that the letter of Otto E. Lessing, who is, happily, a former professor at the University of Illinois, is a poor attempt at Nazi whitewashing.

Mr. Lessing says that "upon the close of the war Germany was literally overrun by hosts of Galician and Balkan Jews of the lowest type," and adds that it is a euphemism to call them human beings. Herr Lessing might trouble himself to look into the records and find that the post-war Jewish population is actually smaller than that of pre-war days. The professor, furthermore, does not explain his harsh declaration that Galician Jews are unfit to associate with "civilized" persons—meaning, perhaps, Hitlerites. It seems that the Galician Jews' crime lies in being born Jewish and poor—a capital offense from the Nazi viewpoint.

Herr Lessing says the Nazis discriminate between Galician Jews and "good German citizens of the Jewish faith." But that does not explain the wholesale disbarment of Jewish lawyers and dismissals of Jewish doctors from hospitals. Nor does it explain the present vicious economic annihilation of the Jews in Germany.

As for the "few isolated cases of terrorism," Mr. Lessing is well protected in his rather doubtful statement by efficient Nazi suppression of news.

LEO SMOLLAR.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

Chicago, April 23.—I wish to congratulate THE TRIBUNE for its fine articles on the southern Illinois fruit belt. If other states can benefit from newspaper publicity, there is no reason why our own shouldn't also. If the quality of the fruit approaches the goodness of the people of that section I know, it can't be beat. The only thing that lacks is a festival and a queen to rush to Chicago in an airplane with a peach pie.

Few Chicagoans realize the beauty and value of our state, and articles as written by Mr. James O'Donnell Bennett are instructive as well as interesting.

We shouldn't forget the surrounding states are the ones that were so emphatically opposed to Chicago's water consumption. If we can give them a dig by eating Illinois apples and peaches, I'm for it.

MICHAEL D. SPERLICH.

AN ART PUZZLE SOLVED

HARRIS' COOLING LOVE DESCRIBED BY MRS. CLARK

Traces Romance to N. Y., Where It Ended.

Mrs. Dorothy Funk Clark yesterday traced her romance with Norman Harris, son of the chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, from Madison, Wis., to Reno, Nev., and thence to New York City, where it abruptly ended. A flood of love letters and telegrams were introduced into a deposition which she is making.

Harris is being sued by James G. Clark of Mount Kisco, N. Y., Mrs. Clark's former husband, for alienation of her affections. The suit is pending in the federal court here. Mrs. Clark's testimony yesterday and on Tuesday was taken by her former husband's attorney, Lloyd Whitman. The deposition is to be introduced at the trial next September.

Tells of Last Letter.

As yesterday's hearing closed Mrs. Clark gave a dramatic recital of her final communications with Harris and related in detail a telephone conversation which preceded by a few days the letter she said she received on Jan. 22, 1932, telling her that "all is over."

"Norman had established me in a New York hotel after I obtained my divorce on Oct. 20, 1931, and then had returned to Chicago," Mrs. Clark said. "I had been hearing from him almost every day by letter and three times a week by telephone. I remember distinctly his last call.

"When the phone rang I answered and asked: 'Darling, how are you?' He replied that he had bad news for me. He said that Mr. Olds, his attorney, had told him of some alleged misconduct by me in January, 1931.

Wants to Face Accusers.

"I told him, 'But, darling, don't you know it is a lie?' He replied that he didn't want to believe what he had heard. I told him that I would come back to Chicago and face my accusers, but he said not to do it. He said he would come to New York to see me. Then I got that letter and that was all."

The letter, the last of more than 100 missives, half of which were telegrams, was then introduced. It read: "Dorothy, I received your letter yesterday and I believe that to go ahead we would have to have absolute confidence in each other. Unfortunately, I no longer have that confidence, and therefore know, as I said over the telephone, that it is best to stop now.

"I know that talking the matter over will do no good, as it is not a matter of proving who said what, but a basic matter of belief and confidence. That is gone and accordingly my decision is not a spur of the moment thought but one I have wondered over from all angles and know that we can do nothing but go our separate ways."

Among the letters to be read was one from Harris addressed to Mrs. Clark at her Madison home soon after Clark had learned of his wife's love affair with Harris. After relating details of a financial settlement which was being arranged it stated:

"But enough of talking about material things; they are a . . . necessary evil, but, having taken care of it, it is much nicer to think about you and the fact that we as individuals mean more to each other than anything else. Just why you are so nice and why we get along together so well is not a question I can answer correctly, but I do know it is true without any reservations, and I also know that our understanding will grow as time goes on and not flatten out or decrease."

Files Suit for Divorce.

Soon after receiving this letter Mrs. Clark said she left her husband and went to Reno, where she filed suit for divorce. Another letter from Harris, which was sent to Reno by air mail on Oct. 14, 1931, said:

"If you don't come east there may be some delay in my getting away and we would both go crazy. So the middle of next week may see you headed for 'Little Old New York,' and we can start out from there after the war is over. It really doesn't matter to me where we go as long as we are together."

The following day Mrs. Clark, still at Reno, received the following message, she said: "I'm so excited about you're coming back that I can't think about anything else, but will try to get down to earth and get as much accomplished as possible. I love you, love you, love you indefinitely——"

Five telegrams which Mrs. Clark received from Harris while on a train bound from Reno to New York were introduced. A series of letters written by Harris from Chicago after he had seen Mrs. Clark in New York were also read. They related that he was making arrangements to divorce Mrs. Harris, with whom he still lives in Winnetka.

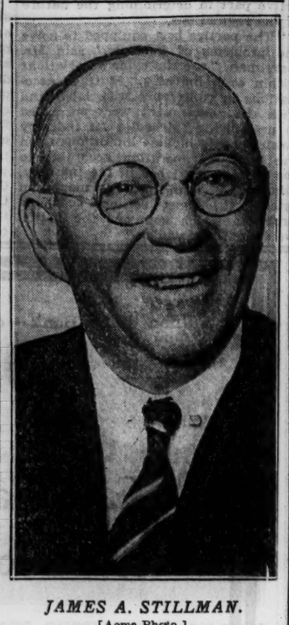
"Fine Fervor Seeping Away."

As he read the last letter Attorney Whitman commented: "It is evident that the fine fervor of those first letters is seeping away."

Attorney Jay Fred Reeve, counsel for Harris, raised only minor objections to the letters as they were introduced. He asked that the hearing be continued until this morning, when he will cross-examine Mrs. Clark. The hearing yesterday took place in the office of Attorney Whitman at 111 West Washington street.

A $300,000 suit for breach of contract brought in the Circuit court by Clark against Harris was dismissed last year by Judge Caverly, who termed it a version of the "old badger game." Clark had charged that Harris, after being discovered in Clark's home, had agreed to provide $500 a month for Clark and set up a trust fund for the Clark children.

QUIZZED BY U. S.



JAMES A. STILLMAN.
[Acme Photo.]

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—James A. Stillman, former president of the National City bank, was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Thomas E. Dewey this afternoon, presumably in the investigation of the activities of Charles E. Mitchell, his successor as head of the bank. He did not appear before the federal grand jury.

It is understood that Mr. Stillman was questioned about the incomes of the National City bank and the National City company, and that this information will have a bearing on the case against Mr. Mitchell, who is under indictment for evasion of his 1929 and 1930 income tax.

Another witness who was understood to have appeared this afternoon was Harry W. Forbes of the law firm of Sherman & Sterling, counsel to the bank. Mr. Forbes yesterday requested a judicial opinion on the propriety of answering a question asked him before the grand jury concerning the alleged fictitious sale of 18,300 shares of bank stock by Mr. Mitchell to his wife.

HARRINGTON IS NAMED SANITARY BOARD ENGINEER

Trustees of the sanitary district yesterday unanimously elected Philip Harrington as chief engineer to fill the post vacated by Mayor Kelly. Harrington had been Mr. Kelly's first assistant and will round out 27 years of service to the district in July.

Mr. Harrington is 47 years old. Born in Worcester, Mass., he moved to Chicago with his parents and was graduated from Armour institute in 1906. He then worked for the sanitary district at $50 a month and has worked in all the divisions of the engineering department. Mr. Harrington is married, has two daughters, and lives in Wilmette.

"I realize I am stepping into a big pair of shoes," said the new chief engineer. "The sanitary district is going through the greatest crisis in its history, but I feel certain that our program will be successful."

Trustee Ross A. Woodhull, who presided in the absence of President Thomas J. Bowler, announced that the 900 employés of the district will receive pay checks today for the last half of January. The pay roll, amounting to $109,000, includes $30,000 from a sale of tax warrants to the district's pension fund and collection of back taxes for 1928 and 1929, for which no warrants are outstanding.

INDICTED AS DEPUTY'S SLAYER.

Bloomington, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—Walter Brown, 24, Normal, Ill., was indicted for the murder of Deputy Sheriff of McLean county, Charles E. Adams, who was fatally shot when the deputy tried to serve warrants for robbery and contributing to delinquency.

HITLER BECOMES SUPREME HEAD OF STEEL HELMETS

Army of War Veterans Is Merged with Nazis.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 27.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today became supreme commander of 1,500,000 well trained members of the Steel Helmet war veterans' organization. The political army of the Nationalist party was placed in the chancellor's control by Franz Seldte, minister of labor and Steel Helmet chieftain, who announced that he had joined the Nazi party.

The merger of Hitler's Nazi storm troopers with the Steel Helmets followed the forced retirement yesterday of Col. Theodor Duesterberg, "second leader" of the Steel Helmets. Duesterberg was compelled to resign because his maternal grandfather was a Jew. He had opposed the union of these two powerful semi-military organizations, and his ouster paved the way for the consolidation.

Other Steel Helmet leaders, who opposed the fusion, were ousted today.

Becomes Hitler's Ally.

Seldte announced his adherence to the National Socialists in an address tonight and said he would "liberate the comrades who cannot follow me from the oath of obedience." Seldte, a Nationalist, has been under fire in National Socialist quarters where it was held that Hitler's cabinet should be 100 per cent Nazi.

The ousting of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, minister of economics and agriculture and leader of the Nationalist party, and Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath is expected to follow.

Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right hand man in the cabinet and also premier of Prussia, tightened his grip on that state today. A "secret state police department" was established to fight bolshevism and all other movements threatening security of the state. All Prussian police were placed under the control of the new department.

Protests Articles in British Paper.

Meanwhile, the government announced that it will protest against a current series of articles in the Manchester Guardian, which is published in Manchester, England. The articles deal with the fire in the reichstag building Feb. 27. In substance they suggest that the Nazis themselves were responsible for the conflagration.

The articles are said to intimate that the Nazis sought to create a communist scare and thereby strengthen their political position. The fire occurred several days before the reischtag elections, which were won by Hitler's forces.

Appoints Flyer His Aid.

Rudolf Hess, world war flyer, was appointed Hitler's general representative in Nazi party matters today. Hess is 37 years old. He was wounded at Verdun. The chancellor met him on a battlefield. Later Hess became Hitler's adjutant and private secretary.

Hermann Kapler, president of the German Evangelical church commission, today announced that Chancellor Hitler had promised him that the church's treaty rights would be fully respected. The church commission began the drafting of a new constitution in accordance with the "new German spirit."

The critical financial position of the Berlin municipality was revealed today when it was announced that the estimated deficit for the current financial year is $32,500,000. To this must be added a deficit of $43,000,000 carried forward from recent years. The city's indebtedness has increased from $39,000,000 to $333,000,000 in eight years. Payment of salaries and wages is possible only through taking up monthly loans of about $5,000,000.

HELD ILLEGALLY AS INSANE, SAYS OFFICIAL'S WIFE

Mrs. Carrie Manning, 52 years old, applied to Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday for a writ of habeas corpus to release her from a private sanitarium. She charged that her husband, Samuel Manning, secretary of the board of health, had had her declared insane to get possession of property of hers valued at $50,000.

Mrs. Manning has been in the Pinel sanitarium, 726 Diversey parkway. The head of that institution, Dr. Alexander S. Hershfield, was named with Manning in the habeas corpus petition. Mrs. Manning appeared in court yesterday in the custody of two nurses and her attorney, Frank J. Link, charged that she had been placed under a sedative.

Judge Trude appointed Dr. Selma Colby and Dr. Elizabeth Carroll to examine Mrs. Manning and to make a report on her sanity to him on Monday.

CUBA JAILS MAN FOR PROTECTING SISTER'S HONOR

Objected to Insults of Machado Agents.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, April 27.—Robert Mendoza, prominent Havana attorney, today assailed the military courts set up by President Machado to deal with political prisoners. He charged that they have established the doctrine that no man who is opposed to the government has the right to protect a woman's honor or to seek to prevent her from being subjected to deliberate public insults.

Mendoza was released from Atares fortress today after serving fifteen days for attempting to defy this doctrine. The released prisoner on April 12 met his sister, Miss Milagros Mendoza, 19, at the docks upon her return from a visit with their mother, Mrs. Mariana Mendoza, wealthy society matron who has been living in voluntary exile in Miami, Fla.

Search Girl's Baggage.

Mendoza and his sister were en route to their home in an automobile when, he said, they were overtaken and ordered to stop by three members of La Porra, the government "strong arm" organization. The Mendozas next were ordered to stand on the sidewalk while the three men opened the girl's five suitcases. They explained they were seeking weapons and seditious literature.

Finding nothing of this character, they removed Miss Mendoza's garments from the suitcases and spread them over the sidewalk. According to Mendoza, the trio wisecracked and told vile jokes as they withdrew various pieces of lingerie. Meanwhile, many people were passing by on their way to lunch.

Seized for Making Protest.

"Could you not avoid subjecting my sister to uncalled for humiliation?" pleaded Mendoza. "It is unfair. She is a lady, not a street walker."

"Shut up!" retorted the Porra men. "You think you're smart, don't you? Get into the car and we'll show you who's boss around here."

The order was obeyed. Subsequently Mendoza was arraigned before a military court. He said he was given no opportunity to plead his case. He was sentenced to fifteen days in prison and fined $100.

SOUTH ALASKA HIT BY QUAKES; FELT EACH HOUR

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, April 27.—(AP)—Southern Alaska continued today to be rocked by earth shocks following several jolts here and at Seward and other points yesterday afternoon which were described as "the worst in thirty years."

Shocks of varying intensity were felt here throughout last night. The first one stopped clocks at 4:55 p. m. yesterday. The shocks have been felt approximately every hour since then Damage here was small because of the lack of large buildings. Stores reported considerable loss in goods thrown from shelves. Numerous windows were broken.

138 Houses Destroyed on Isle.

ATHENS, Greece, April 27.—(AP)—The recent earthquake which caused heavy casualties on the island of Cos also did considerable property damage on the island of Nisyros, also a member of the Dodecanese group near Asia Minor in the Aegean. A total of 138 houses was destroyed on Isyros, it was learned today. Messages from Turkey said three villages were destroyed in the Dagda district, where shocks continue to be felt.

Reports of Bad Weather Halt Lindberghs in Arizona

Kingman, Ariz., April 27.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, flying to the Pacific coast, landed here at 7:40 p. m. mountain standard time tonight and said they would spend the night in Kingman, leaving for Los Angeles, their destination, tomorrow. The colonel decided to remain here after receiving reports of bad weather ahead.

AN APPLE KING TELLS HOW HIS KINGDOM GREW

Orchards and Children His Pride.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hardin, Ill., April 27.—[Special.]—"You ought to go over to Calhoun county and see the apple king, Chris Ringhausen," said fruit growers in Marion county on the north, on down to a point twenty miles from the Kentucky border.

And each man would add, "Give him my best regards."

So, faring over to the long, narrow peninsula which lies between the largest river in North America and the largest river in Illinois, I spent an amiable and instructive hour with the venerable Christopher.

Starts as Farm Hand.

Starting as a farm hand at a wage of $15 a month, Christopher Ringhausen saved his money and kept buying a bit of orchard here and a bit on the top of yonder cliff until the time came when he was growing more apples for the Chicago and St. Louis markets than any other individual orchardist in the middle west.

Until two years ago this coming July, when the great 3,000 foot bridge at Hardin was dedicated, Calhoun county—without a railroad, without telegraph, without a daily newspaper, and without a factory—was so isolated from the rest of the world that it was called "the kingdom of Calhoun."

What more natural than that Mr. Ringhausen, being the greatest apple grower in a miraculously fruitful region of 256 square miles—for such is the area of this county—should be crowned with the title of Apple King, which he bore with a whimsical smile.

Keeps Cheerful Outlook.

Today at the age of seventy-three he is still whimsical—and cheerful. Despite the carking anxiety which goes with the gamble of fruit growing he has but one detestation—debt—and he said:

"When I was a young man I'd run a mile to pay a man a quarter I owed him, and I still would. So my credit was always good. I've always wanted my word to be as good as my bond. Whenever I say anything, that means business!"

Forty-five years ago Chris Ringhausen began raising apples and children, and he has been highly successful in both activities. As for the apples—there came one year when he took $84,000 worth of fruit off his orchards. "But," he added with the scrupulosity that marked all his statements, "there were some peaches in with those apples."

Six Sons and Two Daughters.

As for the children, he has six sons—all orchardists—two daughters, and seventeen grandchildren. Some of the grandchildren were tumbling around him as he sat in the swing seat on the front porch of his brick villa on the main street of Hardin. Their tumbling and shouting seemed to increase in him a cheerfulness that was almost gayety.

What with his name and his kingship I had expected to meet a stalwart, portly old German. Instead of that type, he is a slender, rather frail looking man with a high voice and lively gestures; more of a Yankee type.

"How is your health, Mr. Ringhausen?" I asked.

"Pretty good! Pretty good, but I'm slippin'"—those last words with a gay laugh, as if the joke were rather on Nature in general than on him personally.

2,000 Acres of Orchards.

What with his orchards, and his six sons' orchards, and the orchards of his brother Louis, and the orchards of Brother Louis' six sons, the fourteen Ringhausens own about 2,000 acres in "the Kingdom of Calhoun" and nearby counties. Hence Christopher, who really founded commercial apple growing in Calhoun, is a historic figure.

He touched fondly on his six apple growing sons, saying:

"That was my object in life—my goal, as you might say—to buy an apple orchard for every one of my sons, and when I ran out of sons I quit buyin' orchards.

"Didn't buy any for my two daughters, because you couldn't tell who they'd marry; might be a lawyer or a doctor that wouldn't want an apple orchard or know how to run one if he did.

"I started in with eight acres of growin' apple trees, and when I made that first purchase people laughed at me, and my father—he was a blacksmith—he said, 'You're crazy! You'll never pay for this orchard.' One year—must have been about forty-five years ago—I bought a hundred acres for $3,100, and father said I was gettin' crazier and crazier.

One Crop Pays for It.

"But a day came when I took $3,500 worth of apples off those hundred acres in one season. That paid for that orchard, plus $400, and my father—he began buyin' orchards himself."

"Have you ever had any terribly bad years, Mr. Ringhausen?"

"I figure that in my life I've grown 46 crops of apples and out of them all I had only two total failures and two or three partial ones.

"But you never can tell—never! In 1931 I lost $15,000 and my six sons lost $2,000 each. That was the year of the excess crop. I'd be better off today if I didn't own an orchard. Over-plantin' is the curse of this industry.

"What helped me was that I got to be a good estimator. I could walk down two rows and estimate the number of barrels of apples on the trees as I moved along. So I always sold my crop in a lump, as it hung on the trees. Then the apples were promptly the buyer's and he had to pick, pack, and ship. You see, I sold him the worry along with the trees. I could quit thinkin' about a hail storm that might wipe me out in the next twelve hours."

Young Folks Restless.

The king lamented that it is very hard to keep the young people in the county. Their goal is St. Louis, and to make a career there is their ideal.

While the veteran is talking, Calhoun's great task of raising nearly half a million barrels of apples out of the one million eight hundred thousand barrels, which probably will be this season's total Illinois marketed crop, is getting into exhilarating swing.

Going out, all day long, to the 25,000 acres of apple orchards in this county of tumbled hills and ravines are the big cans of liquid sulphur for spraying from Midland, Mich., and bags of sulphate of ammonia, a fertilizer, from Cleveland, O.

Sightseers Come In.

And the sightseers are coming in! The show of blossoms will be in its glory next Sunday, if the present weather holds, but already some factories down St. Louis way are sending employés in trucks to behold beauty that makes the heart sing.

Now on the scene is a delegation making arrangements for the feeding of 150 business men who are coming from Belleville, below East St. Louis, on Sunday. On that day the Calhoun highways will be full of tourists lunching, and supping alongside the orchards, and what they will see will be what gentle Letitia Landon saw a century ago in her beloved orchards of Herefordshire—

The apple blossoms' shower of pearl,
Though blent with rosier hue,
As beautiful as woman's blush,

Benton Harbor's Candidate for Queen is Brunette, 19

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 27.—[Special.]—Michigan's fruit belt, they inform visitors dolefully hereabout, won't have much of a peach crop this year. Then they trot out the galaxy of delectable demoiselles from which Miss Benton Harbor of 1933 was selected on the stage of the Liberty theater here.

While girls like Bernice Krieger, 19, brunette, and her home town's nominee for queen of the famous Blossom Festival, remain to decorate the landscape in these parts fortune still smiles on southwestern Michigan.

Twenty-five Vie for Honors.

Twenty-five modishly gowned girls promenaded across the stage at the outset of the competition. All during the years the tradition of the Fruit Blossom Festival has been growing the standard of pulchritude has never been higher. But from the first flash of her sparkling, dark eyes, and the first tilt of her head as she crossed the set, Bernice was marked for one of the ultimate survivors.

Her most dangerous competitor was a blonde of almost identical age and stature. Eventually, at the last, eleven ballots found the two confronting each other, alone in the center of the stage, as vivid a pair of pretty girls as ever disputed a title. The runner-up was Marjorie Anderson, whose golden hair swept back in loose waves to her neck, and whose gauzy gown of peach color set off her type of beauty as definitely as Bernice's jonquil crepe gown with its coquettish ruffled cape and tiny muff.

Choose Queen Wednesday.

Next Wednesday night on the same stage, Miss Benton Harbor will make her bid for the crown of blossom queen, against the representative beauties of thirty-one other communities in this territory

The winner will rule over the annual fête celebrating the flowering of the fruit orchards, destined this year to be a "white crop," since the shell pink of peach blossoms will be missing by reason of a killing frost. By tomorrow night the last of these girls will have been named in their individual towns. May 7 is the opening date of the festival.

Prospects for a splendid crop of apples, pears, cherries and plums are excellent, according to F. L. Granger, prominent fruit distributor of Benton Harbor. Average temperatures for the spring season have not varied much over a period of twenty-five years, he commented, and the belated arrival of warm weather has not appreciably affected the trees.

The annual mustache race among the seniors at the University of Chicago started yesterday with 65 entrants. Herb Petersen, campus barber and judge of the race, examined the contestants and pronounced them on even terms. The senior with the most luxuriant mustache at the end of two weeks will be awarded a shaving mug. Campus tradition demands that contestants who falter and shave during the contest be ducked in the university botany pond.

DOCTOR'S WIDOW USES HIS METHOD TO KILL HERSELF

Mrs. Elizabeth Windmeuller, 30 years old, of McHenry, was found dead in her automobile yesterday with a hose running from the motor exhaust into the closed body of the car. Ira Trumbull, a milk truckman, found the automobile parked on a side road three miles northeast of Woodstock in McHenry county.

A coroner's jury decided Mrs. Windmeuller ended her life while temporarily insane. She left three notes addressed to her mother and sister, with whom she lived.

Mrs. Windmeuller was the widow of Dr. Emil Windmeuller, former coroner of McHenry county, who ended his life in the same manner two years ago in Los Angeles. A brother, John J. Karls, told the coroner's jury his sister had been despondent over her husband's death, and spoke several times of killing herself as he had.

INDUSTRY JOINS LABOR'S FIGHT ON PERKINS BILL

Woll Warns of Revolt if Measure Passes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—[Special.]—Spokesmen for organized labor and organized business joined today in opposing the administration's program to establish a government dictatorship over hours, wages and production of industry.

As spokesman for the working man, Matthew Woll of the American Federation of Labor told the house labor committee that the so-called 30 hour week bill drawn by Secretary Frances Perkins would return the wage earners of the nation to a condition of serfdom.

For the industrialists, President Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, cautioned the committee against the rigidity of the Perkins bill and the probability that it would stifle industry.

"There can be and is no question," said Mr. Woll, "that organized labor has consistently and persistently disapproved and opposed the fixing of wage standards for adult male workers in private industry, either by states or by the nation.

Warns of Revolt.

"If this right of the wage earners is willingly surrendered, the wage earners may as well understand that they have again become serfs, not under domination of employers as such but under the nation and that therefore their sole means of redress is to attempt to gain the power of government.

"If that be the purpose of this proposed legislation I know of no more efficient means of furthering the socialization of all industries and of denying every vestige of right for labor to determine its destiny as wage earners through their economic power.

"Labor might well in that event consider massing its power and influence on the political and revolutionary field."

Mr. Harriman declared himself and the organized business interests he represents in hearty accord with the purposes of the Perkins bill. But government regulatory machinery would be too inflexible, he said, to produce the desired results.

Offers Substitute Plan.

As a substitute for Miss Perkins' plan, Mr. Harriman suggested the establishment of trade associations within each industry which would promulgate rules for the industry and regulate hours, wages, and production. Each regulation of the trade associations would be subject to approval by the government, which would take an active part in determining the nature of the regulations.

"The parties best equipped to solve the problems of industry," said Mr. Harriman, "are the trade associations within each industry. If trade associations in conference with labor and with the government were permitted to promulgate fair rules for industry [which would include limitations upon the hours of operation according to the demand for labor in the industry, minimum pay, and possibly maximum prices] the most serious economic problems which confront the nation would quickly vanish."

MANUFACTURERS OFF TO FIGHT AGAINST 30 HOUR WEEK BILL

A delegation of members of the Illinois Manufacturers' association left Chicago yesterday on the Capitol Limited for Washington, where they will protest against the proposed national law setting up a thirty hour week in industry. Included in the delegation were James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the association; Ray Wantz, vice president; Burton Peek of Moline; Paul Schulze, Chicago baker; F. M. Bard, C. J. Lundberg, and A. P. Haake.

The delegation will join with Samuel H. Hastings, former president, in attending a meeting in the morning of the national industrial council, composed of state manufacturers' associations and a number of trade organizations. The members hope to see President Roosevelt in the afternoon.

It was said the manufacturers will point out that the establishment of the short week and minimum wages would put a heavy burden on them in their competition with foreign producers. Any immediate gains in putting more people to work would be lost, they assert, through loss of business arising from inability to meet foreign competition. The manufacturers announced that they would object to any plan for the appointment of any one who would dictate to them on matters of hours of work, wages, or production.

17 Defendants in Court on Loan Shark Charges

Seventeen officials and employés of eight Chicago loan companies, who are under indictment on charges of conspiracy to violate the small loans act, yesterday were given until Tuesday to post bond of $5,000 each. The defendants, who are alleged to have charged exorbitant rates of interest, first appeared in the Felony court on charges placed against them before the indictment was returned by the grand jury, and then went before Chief Justice John Prystalski in the Criminal court, who allowed them until Tuesday to post bonds on the charges contained in the indictment.

This much olive oil goes into every cake!

Faithfully shown by the size of this container is the abundant quantity of olive oil that goes into every cake of Palmolive. It is not surprising that over 20,000 beauty experts endorse Palmolive Soap—among them Julia Akergren, of The Fairmont Hotel Beauty Salon in San Francisco, who thinks that "no beauty ingredient can take the place of olive oil in keeping skin lovely."

Olive oil is nature's age-old beauty secret
—and it's olive oil that makes Palmolive green

How did Cleopatra wash her face? How did she bathe? In olive and palm oils. 3,000 years ago these were Nature's gentlest cleansers, just as they are today. Hers was a crude combination, but yours is the perfected blend.

Palmolive Soap, made from these same fine oils, will keep your complexion clear and fresh, will give the skin of your entire body the beauty care it deserves.

Palmolive is the utmost in a penetrating yet soothing cleanser. It goes below the surface, cleans down deep in the pores, yet leaves no irritation. Use it freely for the bath as well as the face. Let it give your entire body that youthful freshness which it gives to complexions, for it is now selling, you know, at the very lowest prices in history.

Now it costs less to keep that Schoolgirl Complexion

STATE WILL CUT MILK ½C A QUART IN MILWAUKEE

Producers Will Not Be Affected by Order.

Madison, Wis., April 27.—[Special.]—The price of home delivered milk in the Milwaukee area will be reduced a ½ cent per quart during May under an order to be issued Saturday by the state department of agriculture and markets.

The order will be issued, according to a statement today by the commission of agriculture and markets, in compliance with requests at a hearing in Milwaukee. Producers, dealers, and consumers testified that since the price was raised to 8½ cents per delivered quart the consumption of fluid milk has fallen considerably.

Assurance was given the order will stipulate that the ½ cent decrease to 8 cents a quart is not to be taken from payments to farmers for raw milk. Raw milk for fluid sales must be purchased for $1.76 per hundred weight during May, the order will specify.

Store Price Same.

There will be no decrease in retail prices for milk sold in stores, the commission said. The price will remain at 8 cents a quart, although the wholesale price charged by dealers will be reduced to 6½ cents. This will permit storekeepers to sell milk at a larger profit.

The commission said, however, that its order will include a warning to storekeepers that if they attempt to retail milk at less than 8 cents a quart, the wholesale price will be increased to 7 cents.

This arrangement has received approval of the Milwaukee Grocers' association as wholesalers who handle considerably more than half of the fluid milk in Milwaukee, the commission said. Agreement was reached at a price conference in Milwaukee.

Storekeepers Warned.

"The commissioners will amend the order in compliance with this request, but are notifying the storekeepers that violations of the retail sale price of 8 cents will be vigorously dealt with and, if it cannot be controlled, the sale price to the stores will be changed back in the next order to 7 cents," the statement reads.

"Representatives of the milk industry, including producers, dealers, and consumers, almost universally testified that the price of 8½ cents fixed by the department for fluid milk sales from wagons for April had resulted in a lower consumption of fluid milk.

"Several testified the result was probably as much due to sales of beer at restaurants and possibly in the home, as it was to resentment against the raise in the price of milk a ½ cent a quart.

"Several testified that because fluid milk sales dropped, the increase of a ½ cent a quart on fluid milk sales, the entire increase to go to the farmers, would not result in more than a very slight increase to the farmers for April, if any at all, because of the greater amount of surplus milk, figured at the lower price."

PASTOR SHOWS HIS HANDCLASP TO OMAHA JURY

Omaha, Neb., April 27.—(AP)—After demonstrating for a jury the platonic hand clasp he said he used in conversing with some of his women parishoners, the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly testified in District court today as a witness for Miss Gertrude Gruenig, defendant in a $50,000 alienation of affections suit filed by the pastor's divorced wife.

The former pastor of a large Omaha congregation described his home as "exceedingly unhappy." He was granted an Arkansas divorce in 1931 on grounds of desertion.

Earlier in the day the Rev. Mr. Baltzly stood before the jury and met Mrs. Doris Purcell, a former parishoner. In a dramatic pose, the pair stood for 30 seconds, her right hand in his and his left hand over her right.

"I always held his hand whenever I called on him—he does everybody's—it's just part of being a preacher," Mrs. Purcell testified. This testimony was intended to offset statements of Mrs. Baltzly's witnesses that Dr. Baltzly had been seen "holding hands" with Miss Gruenig, a member of his church.

"Of course, Dr. Baltzly never kissed you?" she was asked in cross-examination.

"No, sir!" was her emphatic reply.

CERTIFIED MILK PRICES TO DROP TO 14C QT. MAY 1

Milk distributors in the Chicago area will readjust the price of certified milk and certified-vitamin D milk, beginning May 1. The new price will be 14 cents a quart for each type of milk. Hitherto the certified has retailed at 18 cents and the vitamin D at 21 cents.

The new price level was agreed on after a series of conferences in which the Chicago Medical society's milk commission and retailers and producers participated.

Certified milks are produced on five large farms in Illinois and Wisconsin. They have special qualities which physicians regard as necessary for some infants and adults. They represent less than 2 per cent of the total milk consumption.

Dr. R. R. Ferguson, secretary of the medical society commission, said that the price reduction had been made so that certified and vitamin D milk would be available to all who need it.

K. P. Aldrich's 2 Favorite Pistols Taken by Burglar

K. P. Aldrich, who recently left Chicago to become chief postal inspector at Washington, will have to go about his new duties without two of his favorite pistol. Mrs. Aldrich yesterday reported to police that the weapons had been stolen by a burglar from a packed trunk in the Aldrich apartment at 6516 Kenwood avenue, while she was absent for a short time Wednesday night. Nothing else was taken. Mr. Aldrich was chief postal inspector here for six years.

SUES FOR DIVORCE

MRS. RUBY LESTER GILBERT.

Mrs. Ruby Lester Gilbert, 5224 Kinzie street, an actress, filed suit for divorce yesterday in the Circuit court against Earle Jay Gilbert, who is now a scenario writer for a motion picture company in Long Island, New York.

Mrs. Gilbert said they were married in 1912, when she was 13 years old, and that for some years they appeared together in stock companies and vaudeville acts. About seven years ago, she charges, Gilbert became interested in a Spanish actress, Rita Reyos, and Miss Reyos took her place in their act.

When she got a male partner and continued her vaudeville appearances, her husband became extremely jealous and threatened to "tear her eyes out," Mrs. Gilbert's bill said. The bill filed by Attorney Norman Becker charges desertion and cruelty. The couple separated on Oct. 15, 1929. They have a son, Earle Jr., 15 years old.

AUTOIST WITH INDIANA TAGS IS SENT TO JAIL

Ordered to Work Out $34 Fine and Costs.

Louis Malarski, 6804 Prairie avenue, was committed to the Bridewell in lieu of paying $34 fine and costs imposed yesterday by Judge Thomas Green in the Traffic court. While a resident of Chicago, the defendant was operating his automobile with Indiana license plates. The technical charge was displaying fictitious plates.

After policemen had testified against him, Malarski admitted that he had purchased 1932 as well as 1933 plates in Whiting, Ind., by giving a fictitious address in the Indiana city. The registration fee in Indiana is $5, as compared with a minimum of $8 in Illinois. Furthermore, the use of the Indiana plates evaded the Chicago wheel tax, which ranges from $10 upward.

Must Buy New Plates Also.

In addition to a fine of $25 plus $9 costs, Malarski will have to purchase his Chicago and Illinois licenses before he can operate his automobile. He said he was unable to pay the $34.

"If you were using a 1932 Illinois license and were unable to buy the 1933 plates you would have my sympathy," Judge Green said in entering the judgment. "But you have practiced deliberate fraud to evade your automobile taxes for two years.

"With so many visitors in the city it is difficult for the police to detect this license fraud, although they know it is practiced quite generally. Therefore when the police are able to prove such a case it behooves the court, as a deterrent to other motorists, to impose the maximum penalty. That's what you are getting."

Day's Arrests Drop to 1,940.

The police drive to compel motorists to buy city and state licenses ended its fourth day yesterday with the issuance of 1,940 court summonses, the least number distributed on any day since the drive began. The city hall offices of the secretary of state and of the city collector again were filled with motorists paying the fees that were due, under the law, on Jan. 1.

In the police courts cases are being dismissed where the defendants appear with evidence that they have paid their automobile taxes since the arrest. Other defendants are given two weeks' continuances to buy plates and stickers. Many motorists have failed to appear in response to summonses. Warrants are being issued in these cases and the municipal judges are threatening to impose fines and costs.

Bind and Gag Five; Flee with $27,000 in Jewelry

New York, April 27.—[Special]—Three young gunmen walked into the office of Hyman Sohn, manufacturing jeweler, on the fifth floor at 83 Canal street, today, bound and gagged Sohn and four other men, then escaped with jewelery valued at $27,000.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels, and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

UTILITIES AGREE ON CONFERENCE RATE CUT PLAN

State Proposes Parleys to Save Expenses.

Negotiations for the reduction of public utility rates were begun yesterday by the Illinois Commerce commission when representatives of seventeen electric companies appeared before the commission to show cause why the rates should not be reduced. Representatives of ten other electric companies are to appear before the commission in Springfield next Wednesday to answer similar citations.

Chairman B. F. Lindheimer opened the hearing. He said the citations were issued because the commission believed prevailing electric rates may be too high and that substantial reductions may be in order.

Seek to Avoid Hearing Costs.

He announced that the commission was prepared to begin actual rate hearings, but preferred to avoid such expensive and protracted procedure. As an alternative he suggested that informal conferences be held between the experts of the utility companies and the experts of the commission. He offered the choice between rate hearings and informal conferences. The representatives of the electric companies chose the conference method unanimously.

The conference method was recommended by the commission, Chairman Lindheimer said, because "if formal hearings are made necessary they will be a source of most burdensome expense to the state and to the utility companies in question, and the commission fully realizes that all of such expense will, as a matter of fact, be borne by the citizens of the state, who are the customers of the utilities."

He declared that the commission wished to make it plain that no utility company would be allowed to choose the conference method for purposes of delay, and that those companies deciding to proceed by the conference method would be assumed to have agreed that the objective sought on the part of the company representatives as well as the commission is a speedy and ultimate reduction in rates to the fullest extent which can be justified under the law.

Recall 5 Cent Fare Failure.

Public utility rate litigation has been an expensive and protracted procedure in the past, as exemplified in the cost of the litigation for lower fares on the elevated and surface lines under a former city administration, observers pointed out. Between 1919 and 1923 litigation for a 5 cent street car fare cost the city a total of $961,555 in special counsel fees, engineers' and other experts' reports, court reporting, and other items. Nothing was accomplished by that expenditure, although the court battle dragged for a period of more than six years.

The dates of the first series of conferences, which are to be held with each company separately, were set by Chairman Lindheimer. The conference with the Commonwealth Edison company was set for May 8 at 10 a. m. The conference with the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois was set for May 11 at 10 a. m. These two companies serve the Chicago area.

Harry J. Dunbaugh, counsel for the two companies, as well as representatives of the other companies, may file answers to the citations before the conferences. Mr. Dunbaugh asserted it has been the policy of the Commonwealth Edison and the Public Service companies to reduce rates whenever that could be done.

APPEAL IS MADE FOR VOLUNTEERS TO SELL POPPIES

An appeal for women volunteers to sell poppies on poppy day, May 25, was issued yesterday by C. F. Fauntz, president of the Veterans' Poppy Day association. Disabled veterans in hospitals need help more than ever this year, said Mr. Fauntz, in urging that the public contribute generously.

"Every cent of the money obtained by the sale of poppies is spent for the care of disabled and needy ex-service men and their dependents," Mr. Fauntz explained. "This year more workers will be needed to cover the territory to make sure that no one is missed. A postal card sent to the headquarters at 215 West Randolph street, or a telephone call to Andover 1399, will place workers who wish to help."

The association is composed of the G. A. R., United Spanish American War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Disabled American Veterans of the World War and the American Legion.

17 IN INSULL MAIL FRAUD CASE FACE COURT TUESDAY

Seventeen of the 19 defendants in the Insull mail fraud case were notified yesterday to appear Tuesday before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson for arraignment and setting of a trial date. The notices were placed in the mail by Nicholas Stolfo, chief clerk in the office of United States Attorney Green.

The case, which grew out of the collapse of the Insull utilities, is expected to go to trial early next fall. The intervening months, officials said, will be used to clear away all technical pleadings in behalf of the defendants.

Samuel Insull Sr., who is a fugitive in Greece, and Martin J. Insull, awaiting hearing on extradition proceedings in Canada, are the only defendants who have not surrendered and given bond.

Color and Flavor of Tea Determined by Treatment

BY DOROTHY MASTERS.

If you ordered tea, and your groceryman asked, "Gunpowder?" would you look up with a start and wonder if you'd wandered into a hardware store by mistake? Or are you up on your teas, and able to discuss intelligently the differences between green, brown, and black?

Fermentation tells the story. If the leaves have been covered with damp cloths for four or five hours before they are put through the firing process, they make the black tea. Green tea is unfermented, and brown tea has been given an intermediate treatment.

Leaves Are Fired.

For black tea, the leaves, after being carefully picked, are allowed to wither, then are rolled and curled. Fermentation is induced by the placing of damp cloths over the leaves for several hours, at the end of which time the leaves are put through a firing process, making them brittle. This fermentation gives the tea a sweeter and richer flavor, with more "body."

Some of the more popular black teas are "Orange Pekoe," "Java Black," and "English Breakfast."

Green tea, which is used more than black in the middle west, according to one of the large tea companies, is brought from the field and steamed to close the pores. Then it is dried by the sun or by hot air, and fired over charcoal fires in pans of iron or in bamboo baskets. Leaves are then rolled by machines, and fired again until thoroughly dry.

Green tea is distinctly different from the black in taste—tart and "herby." Scientists even claim it is rich in a supply of vitimin "C," for which spinach is noted. Although the black teas have some of this vitamin content, fermentation partly destroys it.

Some of the better known green teas from China and Japan are "Gunpowder," "Imperial," "Young Hyson," "Pan Fired," and "Basket Fired."

Brown tea is the mid way tea, and has intermediate characteristics, although the better grades have a distinctive flavor with a spicy touch. Probably best known in this class is "Formosa Oolong."

Grown at High Altitude.

Every tea leaf you've ever brewed came from India, Ceylon, Java, China, Japan, Formosa, or Sumatra, where soil and climatic conditions are favorable. The tea grows best in a light loam, at an altitude of about two miles above sea level, with a uniform moist temperature.

As for preparation after the tea gets to you—water should be piping hot to extract the full flavoring from the tea leaves, but the tea should never be boiled or an undesirable bitterness will be brought out. Four to six minutes is long enough for steeping of tea. Besides the usual accompaniments of cream and lemon, some people prefer to add a bit of orange peel or candied ginger to the tea, or perhaps a clove or two, for aroma and for flavor.

BREAK STALKS OF ASPARAGUS TO HAVE IT TENDER

To serve asparagus tips which are tender, yet whole, and with ends which are also appetizing, break rather than cut the asparagus stalk before cooking. The stalk is tender down to the point where it snaps off without tearing. The flavor of asparagus is best brought out by cooking it in boiling salted water just long enough for it to become tender.

When the tough skin is removed from the left-over ends they may be cut in pieces, cooked until tender, and then served as creamed or escalloped asparagus, in soups, and in the following way:

ASPARAGUS FRITTERS.

1½ cups flour
1 cup cooked asparagus, cut into small pieces
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup milk
1 egg

Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Add the milk gradually and then the well beaten egg. Stir the asparagus into the batter. Drop the mixture by spoonfuls into deep fat, 360 to 370 degrees. Cook until a delicate brown, remove and drain on paper. Serve with cheese sauce.

CUT AROUND EACH SEGMENT OF GRAPEFRUIT

And Keep Bitterness from the Juices.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a Saturday morning radio feature—will be presented tomorrow by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 11 o'clock for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

Have you a little grapefruit knife in your home? Then don't use it! And if that seems like heresy, here's the answer:

Almost as soon as these great golden globes of juiciness rolled onto the market about 45 years ago, somebody thought of a grapefruit knife. It seemed like a good stunt for the budding inventor out of an idea. And since then with one gadget or another we have been slashing through our morning grapefruits, butchering them around the edge and then cutting them into handy sections.

Which, if we are really lovers of grapefruit, is just what we shouldn't do. For while the modern grapefruits have got over much of their bitterness, that which does remain is entrenched in the skin and membranes. And an indiscriminate cutting turns all the bitterness loose into the juices—and no wonder some folks, especially children, think they don't like grapefruit.

The smart way to serve up your grapefruit, if you have only a scanty minute to prepare it, is simply to cut around each segment with a straight knife, not crashing through any of the membranes. But if you have just a few minutes extra—or are on the lookout for a delectable company breakfast fruit course—do the trick this way:

GRAPEFRUIT DE LUXE.
[On the Half Shell.]

First, cut the grapefruit in half, removing the seeds without breaking the membranes. Then cut carefully around each section, inside of the division walls. Lift out these sections and place them in a bowl. Now upturn you half grapefruit shells and squeeze the juice also into the bowl. This leaves you the shell plus the skeleton of the walls. Next, with a spoon, peel out the division walls and cut loose the stem at the bottom. This can be done in a hurry with just a little practice.

Now add from 3 to 4 level tablespoons of granulated sugar for each grapefruit, sprinkling it over the juice and sections. Or if your sweet tooth hungers for honey, drizzle on about an equal amount of the strained kind in place of the sugar. Place the sweetened fruit in a covered dish or a fruit jar and let stand in the refrigerator for several hours—preferably over night.

Or cut up an orange in the same way and add its seedless and membraneless sections to the grapefruit. Stack up the shells of the latter and keep them chilled in the refrigerator. Just before you are ready to serve, arrange the shells on little plates and fill them with the sweetened sections and juice. A sprig of mint, a red maraschino cherry, or a crême de menthe cherry will top off this boat of tantalizing coolness to perfection.

GRAPEFRUIT WITH PRUNE JUICE.

Or have you ever honored your grapefruit with prune juice? The next time it's to be prunes at your house, cook them with a little extra water. At the end of the cooking, sweeten them with brown sugar. When serving, save out a share of the juice and keep it chilled and ready for the next presentation of grapefruit. Add about two tablespoons of prune juice for each half grapefruit, mixing it with the sweetened sections the night before serving. When this is done, a little less sugar will be needed to sweeten the grapefruit.

Grape juice, cherry juice or canned plum juice added to grapefruit sections make still another chance for a new breakfast combination. Or add lime juice, the acid counteracted by a little additional sugar.

U. S. Vegetable Crop Invades the Realm of Big Business

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Vegetables as "big business" would have seemed absurd a decade ago, yet the value of the 1932 vegetable crop in the United States was exceeded only by that of dairying and livestock.

"King Cotton" has fallen from first to fourth place, and below that are the grain crops, and poultry and eggs. Much of the increase in the value of the vegetable crop has been due to the increase as year round products that once were purely seasonal. These include spinach, carrots, beets, green onions, radishes, peas and others that the average family can now afford practically every month of the year.

517,656 Carloads of Vegetables.

American railroads and boat lines delivering fresh vegetables and fresh fruits to 66 large city markets in 1932 reported hauling 517,656 carlots. The amount hauled by trucks is not reported, but estimates place the tonnage at a high figure, especially where cities are near large production areas.

Food shipped into Chicago in 1932 by rail and boat amounted to 117,083 carloads, according to W. T. Hall, in charge of the fruit and vegetable market news service of the United States department of agriculture at this point. He had no figures on the amount of produce brought here by truck.

For the nation and for Chicago as well the commodity having the greatest volume in 1932 was the potato. Fully one-fifth of the fruit and vegetable trade in Chicago consists of potatoes. They were from 32 states, including Illinois.

Represent Many Sections.

There is scarcely an agricultural section that is not represented by commodities carried home on the arm of the food shopper. Food markets of many large consuming centers rely upon supplies which are first shipped to Chicago and then reshipped to other points.

Here are some of the commodities which continue to gain in volume because of the increased demand. An even dozen serve to illustrate the trend:

Apricots and artichokes lead the list alphabetically. Blackberries, raspberries, plums, and strawberries are illustrations of the gain in popularity of fruit. Cauliflower, garlic, kale, green peas, and rhubarb show a gain. And peanuts comprise a new "high" for the last four years. Chicago, incidentally, is the peanut capital of the nation, principally because of the candy and nut processing factories here.

CHEESE SOUFFLE! AH! THERE'S DISH FIT FOR A KING

And You Can Make It by This Recipe.

BY BETTY BROWNING.

Its Gallic name should be a sufficient recommendation for cheese souffle, but if further introduction is required, it can conservatively be said that here is a dish which embodies epicurean and economical qualities as do few others, even of the French cuisine.

The whole souffle family has that about it which makes it the chef d' oeuvre of any repast it graces, and that is no less true of the cheese souffle than of its less serious minded cousins, the coffee, lemon or chestnut souffle, which can be counted on to culminate a meal in the royal manner.

Less serious minded, we say advisedly, since cheese souffle has an important destiny. For all its fluffy, airy nothingness, it is called upon to act as the pièce de résistance of the meal. That golden concoction, light as thistledown, offers substantial nourishment even to those who habitually make roast beef or mutton their nightly fare. Even prize fighters and road builders can enjoy the delicate tang of cheese souffle with minds at rest—the proteins are there.

Where she makes a cheese souffle or a chocolate or lemon cousin, the cook must bear in mind one thing. This is no dish to be trifled with. One minute too soon out of the oven, it is heavy; one minute too long in the oven, it falls. On the baking depends the eating.

CHEESE SOUFFLE.

3 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
¾ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup grated cheese
½ tsp. peppery table sauce
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
¼ tsp. baking powder

Make a thick white sauce of the butter, flour, milk and salt, cooking for 5 minutes. Add the cheese; let it just melt so that it may be evenly blended with the white sauce. Cool and add the sauce, well beaten egg yolks, and lastly the stiffly beaten egg whites and baking powder. Pour into a well oiled baking dish, bake in a slow oven [300 degrees F.] for 45 minutes. Serve immediately.

Yield: Four servings.

LEMON SOUFFLE.

4 egg yolks, whites
1 cup sugar
Juice, grated rind of 1 lemon

Beat yolks until thick, add sugar gradually, then add lemon. Beat whites of eggs till dry, fold in, turn into buttered dish, set in pan of hot water, bake half to ¾ hour.

Rib Roasts of Beef Are Economical Meat Buys

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers the committee on marketing information of the Meat Council of Chicago states: "Chuck and rib roasts of beef are recommended to the housewives of Chicago as unusually economical meat buys over the coming week-end. All cuts of fresh pork are also selling in retail meat stores at attractive prices."

Tea is Known where Tea is GROWN

So highly regarded is the product of Lipton's own tea gardens, that it has won gold medals for excellence at Expositions in Ceylon and in India.

This quality has not been changed—the worldwide reputation of Lipton's Tea is too valuable to permit any sacrifice to meet a price.

Here is real tea value—a famous quality, guaranteed unchanged—at the lowest cost in years!

Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

Maidens! As the ads inform you breathlessly, a new sheik has ridden into your lives!

". . . The magic spell of the desert moon . . . starlit skies . . . a love-warm night . . . And Novarro—singing the haunting 'Love Song of the Nile' . . ." chant the ads. Ah, yes, indeed . . .!

Now far be it from me to proclaim that here is a new Valentino. That were to bring down on by devoted head the wrath of all the Valentino clubs. Besides, I don't think Novarro IS another Valentino. [Which will make the Novarro clubs mad. Life is so difficult.] What I honestly DO believe—a belief which should, I think, make me at least tolerable to both factions, is that Ramon Novarro is MOST beguiling in—as the ads aver truly—"his most romantic rôle since 'The Pagan.'"

This "barbarian" is a fellow much on the order of the immortal sheik of the late Valentino's creation. Jamil is, in his own words, "the best dragoman in all Egypt!" [what does that statement make you think of?], and he is absolutely irresistible to the lady travelers he serves.

Seemingly, it is an honorable desert custom for papa sheiks to send their sons into the marts that they may grow smart. So—we find Jamil sharpening his wits on the idiosyncracies of feminine tourists and what accompany them. Each departing fair wears on her finger a ring from "my ancient forefather's tomb." A worthless thing for which she insists on exchanging—despite Jamil's fervent protestations—some gewgaw of value. And so, with one pocket overflowing with forefather tomb rings and the other bulging with valuables, Jamil lives, laughs and loots until—Diana appears! Then, to the son of a sheik comes a brand new sensation. For the first time in his carefree life—he loves!

Though Diana is well protected by father—or was he her uncle?—fiancé and chaperon; though she and her party at first impatiently spurn Jamil's persistent dragoman advances—it is useless. . . .

Jamil will not be lost. He will not be ignored. He will not be fired. He will not cease making love to this woman, who, he believes, is intended for him, and who, thinking she has finally escaped his spell, finds herself alone in the desert with and very much in the power of Jamil. . . .

I won't be mean and tell you THE REST. . . . But this I know—the exploits of Novarro in "The Barbarian" will set hearts pulsing that haven't pulsed a pulse since the day when Valentino astride his snorting Arabian steed, caused them to flop aud turn over with ecstasy.

Myrna Loy is utterly alluring as Diana. She IS the best looking thing! Louise Closser Hale contributes drollery as Chaperone Powers. Reginald Denny is, as always, capable and personable in the rôle of Fiancé Gerald—and all other rôles are splendidly handled.

Action is swift; situations are suspenseful; backgrounds are colorful and atmospheric, and there's no getting away from it, the piece has romantic glamour.

And so, ladies, I give you "The Barbarian." May he, in some slight degree, make up to you for your loss of "The Sheik."

"KAMERADSCHAFT."

[Comradeship.]
Produced by Nero Films.
Directed by G. W. Pabst.
Presented at the Punch and Judy theater.
THE CAST.

Wittkopp.....Ernst Busch
His wife.....Elisabeth Wendt
Kasper.....Alexander Granach
Wilderer.....Fritz Kampers
Kaplan.....Gustav Puettjer
Jean.....Daniel Mendaille
Emile.....George Chalia
Francoise.....Andree Ducret
An old French miner.....Alex Bernard
His grandson.....Pierre Louis

They couldn't stop the fire in the mines at Courrieres, France! Wall after wall they built—but still the persistent, hot little tongues of flame licked their way through. . . . And grew and grew until came the terrific mine disaster on which "Kameradschaft" is based.

This is a desperately honest, tremendously gripping photoplay. The German director, Pabst, succeeded in capturing a miasma of horror, a deadly, eroding suspense. He shows, so realistically that your blood runs cold, the tragedy of catastrophe underground. The bravery of miners and the pitiful gallantry of their wives and family are brought hame to you with poignancy.

The acting? Well, it's so good that you aren't aware it IS acting. The whole production—a mere recounting of facts, with little in the way of romance or humor, is, in its way, an epic.

The "comradeship" angle comes when German miners on the other side of the boundary line cross the border and go down the French shafts to rescue their ancient enemies.

In war men kill each other, but when common, natural danger—flood, fire, earthquake—strikes at them they band together. International boundaries and hatreds are forgotten in God's melting pots. . . .

See you tomorrow!

Three Hundred Applaud Plays at Arts Club

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Horace Bridges exchanged a preacher's shoes for a lawyer's for a brief hour last night while Artist Gerald Frank tried out the life of a barber. Each was a lead in one act plays presented by the Playwrights' theater before an audience of 300 at the Arts club.

The club itself stepped out of character. The large gallery was an auditorium set with collapsible chairs, the dinning room was a combination stage and dressing room and the kitchen a mysterious combination of grease paint, fudge cake, and hot chocolate.

During the congratulation seasoned supper that followed the performance there were not three more excited guests than Alice Gerstenberg, vivid in white with a short red jacket; Helen Walton wearing a gay flowered print and gardenias [she had removed her blue smock], and Henrietta Fetzer in a dark crêpe gown. They were the directors of the three productions and the center of showers of plaudits. Miss Gerstenberg enjoyed the added distinction of playwright, for she is the author of "Sentience" which headed the bill last night and means "being made aware of something." Even the three guests who remarked in the elevator on their way to the club that they couldn't decipher the meaning of the title after referring to old Noah Webster admitted after the superb performance of Kathleen Harvey [Mrs. Byron H. Jr.], Guy Whitney, and Ernst von Ammon that they had discovered its definition.

Mr. Harvey was the voice off stage for this play [a suggestion of the "advanced" theater]. And sitting right down in front watching every move were the senior Mrs. Harvey with Mrs. Winterbotham Buchanan, Victor Elting, Mrs. Parmalee J. McFadden, Miss Elizabeth McCormick and Robert Hall McCormick.

The whole Goehst family . . . Mrs. John Goehst, Margaret and John . . . was there to applaud Emily in her rôle of peasant woman in Pirandello's "La Giara." And Mrs. Clarence Hough as Drama league president critically reviewed her husband's portrayal of a grade school principal in the Japanese tragedy "Kamysori," the most popular proletarian play, by the way, now being done in Japan.

Mme. Kenji Nakauchi, wife of the Japanese vice consul, arrived early last night to do the "makeup" for this play. She had previously lent many of the costumes, all except the mitten socks, "tobi," which the players advertised for and then received by the dozens.

Sarah Butler Becomes Bride of London Broker

New York, April 27.—(AP)—Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, daughter of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and Capt. Neville Lawrence, London stockbroker, were married today in St. Paul's chapel at the university. The marriage was performed by the Rev. Endicott Peabody, head master at Groton school, Mass., who has officiated at the weddings of many prominent couples, including that of President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt twenty-eight years ago. It was a simple wedding. Miss Butler had no attendants. Music was furnished by the university chapel choir.

Lounging Can Be Well Done at Little Cost

Negligees Offer Luxury at Low Prices.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

It doesn't take a lot of money these days to lounge picturesquely, for some of the newest negligees, the kind that are practically heart-stopping, carry incredibly low price tags.

For instance, the crêpe silk knockouts that are fashioned with the most pictorial sleeves that have been seen in weeks. These negligees are long and wrap over double, the sleeves are short and made of circular ruffles, topped one over the other till they look like Chinese pagoda roofs. Even the colors are Chinese . . . you'll find a coolie blue, with ruffles lined with lacquer, red or vice versa, and the imperial yellow model has sleeve ruffles also lined wickedly with red. Unquestionably, they are the best looking negligees you can find in town, especially with such price tags.

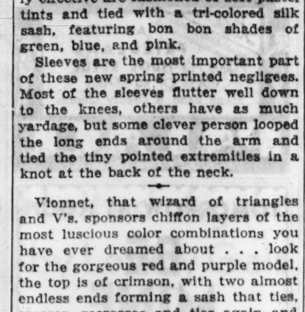
Incurably romantic loungers will instantly fall for the gay flowered silk negligees . . . there are some with black backgrounds splashed with scarlet, jade and royal blue. Others equally effective are fashioned of soft pastel tints and tied with a tri-colored silk sash, featuring bon bon shades of green, blue, and pink.

Sleeves are the most important part of these new spring printed negligees. Most of the sleeves flutter well down to the knees, others have as much yardage, but some clever person looped the long ends around the arm and tied the tiny pointed extremities in a knot at the back of the neck.

Vionnet, that wizard of triangles and V's, sponsors chiffon layers of the most luscious color combinations you have ever dreamed about . . . look for the gorgeous red and purple model, the top is of crimson, with two almost endless ends forming a sash that ties, crosses, recrosses and ties again and even then hangs way down to the floor. The long trailing skirt of purple is cut to fit smoothly around the hipline and then to swirl enchantingly in a lovely train. The entire creation is as perfect a tea or hostess gown as anything you will ever use your best adjectives for.

Until you have seen a delectable gold colored hostess gown of chiffon worn over a gleaming gold colored satin slip, you have seen nothing! It is a copy of the one Lynn Fontanne wears on the stage.

Attractive Quilt Carries the Name of Old Antique



Old Antique

BY NANCY CABOT.

Though this pattern is not quite so antique as the title and the general feeling of the design itself would lead you to believe, it has lived through several generations since its origin 90 years ago. The correct name—that is, the one bestowed on it by the designer—never has been ferreted out. So it simply has been labeled the "Old Antique" by its present owner, a nephew of the designer. The original quilt was made in brown, yellow, and natural unbleached muslin. The pieces were stitched together and then quilted with matchless needlework.

For a pattern of this quilt design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Engaged to Sheldon Dick

[Koshiba Photo.]

This is the attractive young woman who is to become Mrs. Sheldon Dick at some future date, not set yet. The engagement announcement was made Tuesday by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Burgess of New York. She is Miss Margaret Lee Burgess and up until a few years ago she and her family lived in Omaha. She is a graduate of St. Timothy's school and attended Bryn Mawr college. Mr. Dick, who is living in New York now, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blake Dick of Chicago and Lake Forest, and is a graduate of Cambridge university, England.

The Ten Hold Good Show of Water Colors

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

One of the most charming exhibitions the spring has yet brought us is that of water colors by The Ten in the Marshall Field gallery. The Ten suggests a secret society. In reality the name covers a group of earnest Chicago painters with strong modern inclinations. Their annual oil exhibit held in the Marshall Field gallery each fall is an abrupt, aggressive affair, rich with turbulent and rather sulky canvases. Their water colors are far different.

The present water color exhibit is a revelation of exquisite color harmonies and nuances. We meet Jean Crawford Adams, Charles Biesel, Frances Foy, Frances Strain, Emile J. Grumieaux, Gustaf Dalstrom, and Flora Schofield in the friendliest and simplest of gestures. V. M. S. Hannell is less cordial. His representation consists of five little scenes illustrative of the farmer and his work, but they are negligible in effect.

Fred Biesel, too, is disappointing. His pen drawings of nudes are badly done; the anatomy sets one's teeth on edge. For a delightful nude look to the drawing by Frances Foy, "Seated Nude," a magnificent piece of work. From her clever hands also are "The Portrait," "Bouquet," and "Leaves and Candles." An exquisite candour illumines her work.

Jean Crawford Adams offers a view over Grant park which has all the bite of an east wind. Her landscape with a blue colt is much gentler in vein and infinitely more amusing. Charles Biesel has two beautiful spring episodes, one in "Furnessville" and the other "In West Virginia." Both are a feast of color, atmosphere, and conscious craft.

Emil Armin is a trifle restless in two western arrangements, but his boating scene redeems the wriggles. The boating scene is thoroughly delightful; cheerful, amusing, and different.

Flora Schofield is a little heavier handed than her confrères. It is hard for her to withdraw from the grasp of Chirico, Derain, and the others, but in her several water colors she does succeed in producing several charming effects.

Frances Strain is most engaging in "The Coffee Pot" and "The Lagoon," a harmony of silver and green. Charles Biesel's "Gloucester" is a definite high spot in the show and Grumieaux's romantic landscapes are bits of sheer, pure beauty.

Mrs. Wilhelm Baum Re-elected as President of Fortnightly

Buffet Luncheon for Entire Membership Precedes Annual Meeting at Clubhouse.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MRS. WILHELM L. BAUM was reëlected president of the conservative and exclusive Fortnightly club yesterday at its annual meeting in its attractive clubhouse on Bellevue place, the former residence of Mrs. Bryan Lathrop. The business meeting followed a buffet luncheon given for the entire membership by the club. Mrs. Baum's and Mrs. Alfred E. Hamill's and Mrs. John L. Cochran's were the only reëlections of officers, for Mrs. Arthur Meeker is new as the first vice president, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn is a new second "vice," Mrs. Dallas Phemister is a new recording secretary, and Mrs. Eugene S. Talbot Jr. is making her debut as treasurer of the club.

Mrs. Hamill is the corresponding secretary and Mrs. Cochran the assistant treasurer. Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick and Mrs. Charles H. Swift were re-elected to the directorate and the new directors are Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley, Mrs. Harlan W. Cooley, Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. John Paul Welling, and Mrs. Walter O. Wilson.

The Contemporary club, another club which has a fashionable membership and meets regularly in the Fortnightly clubhouse, is to have its annual meeting on Monday, May 8, at the International house. Two members of the club who prefer to remain anonymous are entertaining their fellow members at luncheon before the meeting.

Miss Martha Sarver, who has been president of the organization for two years, is resigning so some one else will wield the gavel at next year's meetings.

The Friday club, which also meets at the Fortnightly, held its annual meeting last Friday and reëlected Mrs. William A. Nitze as president.

Mr. and Mrs. Nitze are leaving Chicago Monday and sailing within a week for Brussels, where they must be by the fifteenth for the meeting of the International Union of Learned society, to which Mr. Nitze is the delegate from the University of Chicago. Following this meeting the Nitzes will spend some weeks in the western part of England—Wales and Glastonbury—where they will examine the country and study the ruins of this land of the legendary King Arthur. Before returning to Chicago the end of September Mr. and Mrs. Nitze will go to France, Germany, and Austria.

Margaret Dawes Bride Tonight.

"Only the relatives of the two families and about twenty young friends of the bride and bridegroom," answered Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes when asked how many would be present at the wedding tonight of Miss Margaret Dawes and Beverly Jefferson, but that means quite a large number for an apartment wedding, for there are 45 relatives of the bride and 40 of the bridegroom, so Mrs. Dawes said later in the conversation.

The service is to be read at 8:30 o'clock in the living room of the Daweses' apartment on Fullerton parkway by the Rev. Paul Austin Wolfe of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston, the bride being given in marriage by her father. She will be attended by Miss Betty Brown of Indianapolis, a classmate at Pine Manor, as maid of honor, and by her sister, Miss Helen Dawes, who is a student at Vassar, and Mrs. Robert Sherman [Jean Dawes] as bridesmaids.

Frank W. McCulloch of Evanston will act as best man for Mr. Jefferson, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jefferson of Evanston, and ushering will be the bride's brother, Palmer Dawes, George Seward of New York, a classmate at Princeton of the bridegroom, and William and Carl Jefferson Jr.

Mr. Jefferson and his bride-to-be are not telling any one where they are to spend their honeymoon, but White Sulphur Springs is the guess of most of their friends and relatives. When they return they will live in Evanston in a hotel while they are finding an apartment.

The Dawes home is at 1800 Sheridan road, Evanston, and if it had not been that the family moved to the city last fall, so that Mr. Dawes could be nearer A Century of Progress—he is president of it—tonight's wedding undoubtedly would have been solemnized out there.

Elizabeth Shepler Wed for Year

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Bailey Jr. of 529 Forest avenue, Evanston, yesterday announced the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Binford Shepler, to William Telling, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Telling of Holland, Mich. Mrs. Bailey said that the couple had been married since last May, but had kept it a secret even from their parents. Mr. Telling is associated with his father in the shoe manufacturing business in Michigan.

The Changeling Bride

By Martha Ostenso

SYNOPSIS.

The Hendersons—Meryl and Margaret, sisters: Flint, their older brother, and Andrew, their father—have lived for twelve years in poverty in a fishing settlement on the shores of Lake Superior, after losing their fortune in Chicago. Great-Aunt Letitia, formerly dean of a girls' school in Ohio, is the liaison between the Hendersons and a cultured past. Flint and his friend, Ned Bremner, hope to build up a great export business. A forest fire brings Blake Lawrence, injured and lost, to the Henderson cottage. There were two great names in nearby Agate Bay and its environs—Lawrence and Greer. When Blake returns to Agate Bay he takes Meryl with him to be his bride. Meryl learns, after the wedding ceremony, through Lucia, a snobbish cousin of the Lawrences, that Blake married her as an escape from Christine, the wife of Julius Greer, with whom he had been in love. Meryl prepares to return home. Theresa, Blake's sister, persuades her to stay for six months, for Blake's sake, whom she still loves, and not to hurt her people. Theresa promises to teach her social service work. Greer at one time saved the Lawrence fortune and Blake feels honor bound not to interfere with the crooked schemes he knows Greer is engaged in. Meryl believes Blake won't fight Greer because of Christine. Greer causes the death of Ola Palka, an old friend and neighbor of the Hendersons. Theresa and Meryl go to New York to attend a charity conference. Blake's separation from Meryl makes him realize he is in love with her, though he thinks Meryl is now interested in his friend, Cy Granville, whom Meryl has met in New York. Meryl returns home with a determination to fight Greer herself, with the aid of Cy. Meryl learns, through one of her charity calls, that Blake's business partner, Fred Inglis, is allied with Greer. Blake and Cy are having a conference when Meryl calls on Blake with her discovery. Blake immediately goes into session with Inglis.

INSTALLMENT XLI.

DARK THREATS.

Blake ran his fingers hastily through the sheets and maps in the folder. Then he threw the thing on the desk and surveyed Inglis, who had crumpled into a chair, with inexpressible contempt. "I hope Greer made it worth your while to double cross me," he observed bitterly. "Well, the skunk needs an airing, and here's where he gets it."

Vaguely Blake realized that his own secretary was standing in the doorway, pale and trembling.

"Get me a couple of reporters," he ordered. Call up——"

"For God's sake, Blake!" Inglis chattered. "You aren't going to give this to the papers, are you? Greer will kill you!"

Blake appeared not to have heard. He picked up the folder from the desk and went out. "Never mind," he said to his secretary, as he brushed past her, "I'll call them myself. You might call my home and tell them I won't be in until very late."

And as he spoke the huge, bull necked form of Julius Greer loomed in the outer doorway.

"You'll probably regret if you do," Greer said softly.

"Come into my office for a minute," Blake said, and led the way.

When Greer had entered Blake took the precaution to lock the door before he turned to face his visitor.

"Plenty," Blake retorted. "I've just had a talk with Fred."

"Yes?"

Blake measured his man coolly. "I have always known you for a crook and a bully, Greer," he said suddenly, "but I've always given you credit for a little horse sense—until today."

Greer looked at him with mild astonishment, his small, somehow petulant mouth hanging open. "What's all this about?"

"I'll come to that in a minute," Blake replied. "There have been reasons why I have not come out into the clear with you, Julius. You know very well what they are."

"I do," Greer said flatly.

"When you helped my father out of a difficult spot you handcuffed me to a debt of honor which I never thought I'd be able to repay."

"Don't mention that, young fellow," Greer objected suavely.

"I mention it because I want you to know why I have always refused to fight you, Julius."

A crooked smile spread over Greer's face. "Was that the only reason?" he asked.

"There was another," Blake admitted, "but it wouldn't do either of us any good to discus it."

"I can't agree with you there," Greer protested. "When you go to the mat with Julius Greer, young fellow, you fight it out! You made a damn fool of yourself with Christine."

"You're right, Greer. But that's already a thing of the past. You probably know that, too."

"Sure! You got tired of the game—and she found another playfellow."

"That's none of my business. But when you step into my affairs and use my partner as a blind for your own dirty schemes, that's my business, Greer."

He waited for a moment and observed the crafty, sliding look of Greer's eyes—then his tolerant, deprecating smile and the fanning motion of the soft hand which held his cigar.

"Aren't you barking up the wrong tree, my boy?" he asked gently.

"You know damned well I'm not," Blake replied, and tapped the folder he held in his hands. "You and Fred—and Steve Pulaski. Would you like to know what I'm going to do?"

Julius drew idly on his cigar, but his eyes had become almost pin points in their welts of flesh, and the color of his vast face was unpleasant. "I couldn't guess," he purred.

"I'm going to give this to the public—and then I'm going north to give your pet senator the drubbing of his life."

"You will probably regret it if you do," Greer said softly.

"I have thought that out. I'll take my medicine if I have to."

Greer moved away. "I see. Well—your old man was a damn fool in his way, but his son has gone mad. I'll tell you this, young fellow. There have been a few others who have turned against Julius Greer. And I've given them fair warning, too. They took their medicine—and they didn't like it. Watch your step, my boy."

"I intend to," Blake retorted.

"Some of them aren't even alive today," Greer added almost dreamily.

"And I know that, too," Blake said. "But I'm not afraid of you or any of your pack of wolves Get the hell out of here before I forget myself."

Greer favored him with a wry smile. "You poor, damned fool!" he said and opened the door.

"So long, Julius," Blake said and smiled.

"You poor damned fool!" Greer repeated and went out.

It was fully an hour later that Meryl, seated in the library at home with Cy Granville and Theresa, was called to the telephone.

"That may be Blake now," Theresa said hopefully when Meryl had left the room. "I don't know what he has to do that will keep him downtown until all hours. He gets so excited——"

"Better let him do it in his own way," Cy remarked. "He's a stubborn cuss once he gets started."

But it was not Blake who had telephoned Meryl. When she came back to the library she confronted them with a white face. "It was from Flinty—at Singing Cove," she announced.

"What's wrong, dear," Theresa demanded getting up.

"He wants me to come home on the night train. Aunt Letty——"

"Meryl!"

"Aunt Letty has had a stroke. What can I do?"

Tess went to her and took her in her arms. "There's only one thing to do, darling," she said reassuringly. "You don't have to worry about us. The fight is on and there is nothing more for any of us to do for a few days. Run up home. It may not be so bad as it looks—and the change will do you good."

"I've go to find Blake," Meryl said, but Cy was on his feet instantly.

"Leave that to me," he said. "You'll have to hurry if you want to get out of here on the night train. It leaves in less than an hour."

While they rushed about getting Meryl ready Cy stayed at the telephone doing his best to get in touch with Blake. He had left his office, uncertain as to whether he would be back again before five. His secretary would telephone as soon as he came in. Cy called the newspaper office to which Blake had gone, but found that he had already left. The editor and he had gone off together. An inquiry at the office of Blake's attorney brought no results. When the time came for Meryl's departure Cy had to admit his failure.

"Well, I'll get on his trail as soon as I put you on the train," he assured Meryl, "And Theresa can telephone you in the morning."

Should Gifts Be Returned as Romance Ends?

BY DORIS BLAKE.

They became engaged after a year's courtship. Went along happily for six months, quarrelled, broke the engagement.

"He made me many gifts," the girl writes. "Is it proper for me to return them all? Must I return the ring?"

The question of returning gifts arises frequently in letters. These come from engaged ones and from others who never reached the proposal stage.

The inquirers are of different types. Most of the girls are sincere about wanting to know the right thing to do. Occasionally we run across one who wants to make the gift return a revenge, so to speak.

From time to time there has been open court argument about the question of whether the engaged one should return the ring. The judgments have varied.

We think it purely an ethical problem. The engagement ring stands for a partnership bargain agreed upon by two people. If the partnership is disbanded, we think the ring should be returned to its donor. We never could see how a young woman would want to keep a constant reminder of a broken pledge on her engagement finger. But then, we're sentimental.

Toward other gifts we do not hold the same sentiment. They were given out of generosity of mood. There was no bargain implied in their giving. Therefore, we think the kindest thing is to make no issue whatever of their return. Certainly, the young men do not want back a gift given in a tender moment.

for Washington, where he will be joined by Mrs. Niblack, who has been in Aiken for several months, and together they will be the guests of Congressman and Mrs. James Simpson for the week-end. The foursome will attend the famous Maryland Hunt Cup race tomorrow. The Niblacks will be back in Chicago on Monday and on Wednesday Mr. Niblack plans to ride with the Onwentsia Hunt on its first ride of the season.

Among other Chicagoans who will watch the exciting race in Baltimore tomorrow are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Behr and their son, Ben Jr., and Miss Edith Behr. Ralph Hines had hoped to go east for the event, but he has decided not to go. The Behrs will be at home early next week.

In yesterday's mail was a note from "Andy" Rebori inviting us to an impromptu showing of posters and drawings of Paris of A Century of Progress Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at "Bill" Welsh's studio on Pearson street, which gives promise of being a most interesting party.

Paris at the fair is to be as glamorous and fascinating as is the Parisian capital, judging from advance descriptions given by such enthusiasts as Mr. Rebori, its director, and John W. Root, the architect, and all the artists who are taking a hand in making it the colorful, picturesque place it will be with street scenes, famous cafés, peep shows, and shops all copied after the original ones in Paris.

Invitation committees are being formed in every state of the Union to invite guests to the Bal des Quat'z Arts that will be given from dusk to dawn on the night of May 29 to open Paris.

Gives Lectures On "Emperor Jones."

Some of the north shore women who are planning to hear "The Emperor Jones" next Tuesday or Friday night at the Auditorium have arranged to have Carleton Smith tell them about the opera so they can enjoy it to the utmost and this afternoon a group of Winnetka women are meeting at the residence of Mrs. Harry L. Street, 592 Sheridan road, to listen to the young music analyst.

Tomorrow morning Mr. Smith will talk to a group of Highland Park women at the residence of Mrs. Carleton M. Vail, 950 Lincoln avenue.

A delightful week-end is in store for two chaperones and six "chaperonees" when the Ray Healys (chaperones), Miss Nancy Traylor, Miss Isabel Gordon, Miss Barbara Graf, John R. Hurley, Edmond Sullivan, and Charles Connell drive out to the Hurley Wheaton home this afternoon to remain until Sunday night. However, the four couples will leave the country air and pastoral scenes long enough to take advantage of a reserved table at the Madonna Center ball tomorrow night.

This evening from 5:30 until 7 o'clock, in the John L. Cochrans' smart State parkway residence, Mr. and Mrs. Cochran and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Wolfe are entertaining for the Maurice Patrick Geraghtys at a very small cocktail party. Just the intimate friends of the former Helen Tieken have been invited.

Miss Peggy Glidden and her father, Henry Leonard Glidden, who sailed abroad last February, are sailing from England tomorrow on the Aquitania and will land in New York the following Friday. With the exception of a Mediterranean cruise and a week or so in Paris they have been in England. Before returning to Chicago Miss Glidden will probably visit the Henry Geer Rogerses in Ausable Forks, N. Y., and their son, John Roderick Rogers, who is her fiancé.

Tea Sunday for Col. Farrand

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Strotz will give a tea Sunday afternoon at the Ambassador East for Col. and Mrs. Roy Felton Farrand. Col. Farrand is the president of St. John's Military academy, of which Mr. Strotz is a graduate, class of 1915.

Mrs. Ronald Chinnock is successfully dividing her time these days between the Junior league's "Pater Pan" rehearsals and the Faulkner school benefit for Fellowship house tomorrow afternoon and evening. Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor" will be given by a student cast in the school gymnasium, 1376 East 48th street, at 2:30 and again at 8:15 o'clock.

Mrs. Henry Ericsson, 534 Surf street, will open her home at 2 o'clock today for a benefit bridge tea and fashion show sponsored by the Chicago committee of Arden Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield S. Brainerd of 612 Deming place are opening their home this evening for a reception for the Spanish speaking consuls in Chicago and the officers of the "Salon Espagnol."

"Russia in Transition—a Business Man's Appraisal," by Elisha M. Friedman. [Viking Press.]

BY SAMUEL N. HARPER.

[Head of the Department of Russian Language and Institutions, University of Chicago.]

IN these volumes a revolutionary pushed out of leadership turns historian and a business man trying to appraise a revolutionary process becomes a social scientist. This combining of rôles gives to the selection and interpertation of the material presented an added interest.

Trotzky's volumes conclude this detailed study, by one of the active participants, of the bolshevik preparation for the "October Revolution" of the autumn of 1917. It is the point of view of the victor, and the bolshevik as victor continues his uncompromising attitude toward all opponents. Therefore one need not expect to find here a full and fair account of the efforts of the liberals and moderate Socialists to solve Russia's crisis in 1917 by democratic methods and within the framework of the capitalist system.

These efforts had greater mass support than is brought out in this bolshevik account. But Trotzky's frank and keen analysis of the bolshevik technique of revolution is most useful to the student and may be of interest to the statesman and leaders of these messy days.

In an appendix the author gives his version of the dispute still going on among the leaders of the revolution as to who decided that the time to act had arrived in those October days. Other sections of the appendix discuss the more general disagreements between Trotzky and Stalin over the later course of the revolution, taking up the two themes around which this conflict has raged; the possibility of "building socialism in one country" for which Stalin stands and leads, and the theory of "permanent revolution," for which Trotzky fought and lost. Now in explaining this theory usually associated with his name, Trotzky brings out its two very interesting features.

The first is the peculiarly important political rôle of the Russian workmen, even in the face of Russia's meager industrial development.

The second feature of the theory is the importance of "subjective factors—traditions, initiatives, and preparedness for fighting." For the Russian bolshevik, produced by Russian conditions and supported by workmen whose attitudes were produced by the same conditions, did develop and show that "will for revolution" by which bolsheviks differentiate themselves from the Socialists.

The appendix is here emphasized because it brings out most clearly the fact that Trotzky's interpretation is not only partisan but distinctly personal.

While criticizing the present leadership Trotzky professes and in fact shows complete loyalty to the revolution.

His concluding paragraphs summarize his views of the October revolution; it "laid the foundations of a new culture, taking everybody into consideration," and in this fact he sees the "international significance" it acquired. The last sentences of the last volume read: "October has internationalized such words as bolshevism, soviet, and piatiletka [five year plan]. This alone justifies the proletarian revolution, if you imagine that it needs justification."

Mr. Friedman's topical treatment of his material is indicated by an analytical table of contents of almost twenty pages. The main emphasis is on the technical economic aspects of the five year plan, but preliminary chapters discuss "An Historical Analogy—the French Revolution," and "The Soviet Mind." And the concluding chapter is entitled "Wanted—An American Policy Toward Russia," and suggests concretely a "world conference on Russia."

The detailed reports on the actual working of the new economic structure—which form the body of the book—are taken from a wide variety of sources, soviet and non-soviet, supplemented by personal observations. It is therefore a very full and well balanced account. The general public as well as the business man has become interested in the question of whether the soviet system will "produce the goods." The constant recognition of the special political and social conditions under which soviet factories and other enterprises must function gives particular value to this "appraisal" by this "business man." His general conclusions may be indicated by two citations. He notes the "organized social will" on which the soviet contrast between high goals and incomplete procedure."

THE STAGE

The engagement of "Yoshe Kalb," the Yiddish drama with Maurice Schwartz as its star, at the Apollo theater, will not end with next Sunday night's performance as recently announced by the management. Plans were made yesterday to extend the Chicago performances until Sunday night, May 7, and possibly longer. This decision was accompanied by certain reductions in the box office scale.

Beauty Patch Hailed Again by Lovely Gals

"West Point Exercises," an illustrated booklet outlining the series of exercises recently presented in these columns through the courtesy of the United States Military academy, may be obtained by sending five cents in coin or stamps to Antoinette Donnelly, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Or call at The Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn Street.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Anything to be contrary, say we women—

Ultra-modernity in skyscraper and home furnishings notwithstanding, the girls are taking to roller skates, to bicycles, to veils, and now to that last little dab of pure feminine witchery, the beauty patch.

Yes'm, the beauty patch is being invoked in the scheme of clever individuality by one of New York's smartest beauticians and hairdressers. Beauty marks, they call them. And to revive an old refrain of a forgotten yesterday, "Every little patch has a meaning of its own." There's a language adapted to the tiny facial teasers. They may be amusing, devorative, sophisticated, or what you have.

For the ultra sophisticated, a "dimple" patch, which means a patch where a dimple ordinarily would grow, is supposed to reduce the opposite sex to a state of slavery. [I'm just telling you, you know. I'm not guaranteeing anything.]

The "caress" patch is a half moon laid on below the corner of the eye, said to make the woman irresistible. A beauty spot on the forehead is supposed to have a gentle appeal.

Ridiculous? Sure—but kinda fascinating, at that, on the right girl, don't you say? All dressed up for the party and dead set on capture, why not a bit of 100 per cent feminine nonsense?

But it is interesting to see how the sex is falling back on old charms and old practices.

Dr. Eugene L. Walsh Will Receive J. A. Capps Prize

Dr. Eugene L. Walsh, a graduate of Northwestern university medical school in 1931, will be awarded the Joseph A. Capps prize for 1932 for his studies in the etiology of gallstones tonight at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. The prize of $500, presented by the Institute of Medicine of Chicago, is awarded annually for the most meritorious investigation in medicine or the specialties of medicine completed within two years after graduation by a graduate of a Chicago medical school. Dr. Walsh is now holder of the George W. Belcher fellowship in urology at the Cleveland Clinic foundation.

In Need of Wheel Chair.

"Dear Madam: I wonder if one of your kind readers has a child's self-propelling wheel chair that is no longer in use? I know a young boy whose only means of getting around is by the use of such a chair. The one he now has is worn beyond repair, and as his parents are unable to purchase another, he cannot attend school. If necessary, I shall be happy to arrange to call for it personally. E. R."

Supplying a chair for this boy would certainly be an act of kindness. A physical handicap such as his is most difficult to bear, and being deprived of an education seems an unnecessary additional trial to the youngster.

Tight and Loose Lacing Is Back in Style Again

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS, [Special.]—The 1900 epoch breaks into 1933 styles in lots of different ways, one of which is in an epidemic of lacing. The belles of the turn of the century did their lacing invisibly. The beauties of 1933 do their lacing out in the open and for decoration only.

Chanel laces up the backs of some of her sheer white evening gowns. She also laces up the front seams of some of her daytime bodices.

Jean Patou shows sports coats, both long and short, that are laced together below childish collars, and they are laced with extra heavy white cord through perfectly huge silver eyelets. When she laces us up, Patou amusingly does it with wraps that make no pretense of fitting, but that are swaggerfiared from the shoulders, as shown on the figure second from the top.

Schiaparelli does a little lacing in her own original way. She laces up skirt plackets and wide elastic belts. Molyneux laces raglan sleeves to blouse bodies.

Leisure of the Teen Age Girl Needs Guiding

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

We know and hear a great deal about the adolescent boy—his need for physical activity, his need for guidance, and his need for the direction of his energy. And because we are conscious of that we have made special provisions for him.

And that is as it should be. As a result of these constructive plans it was reported in a recent speech that in one large city juvenile delinquency among boys was steadily decreasing.

But in the same city juvenile delinquency among girls was steadily increasing. Little provision has been made in many cities for her physical activity, her need for guidance, and for the direction of her energy in the appropriations for after-school activities.

We forget that if we do not provide the adolescent girl with things that interest and develop her, as we try to do with our boys, there is little entertaining left for her but to be in the streets or in the movies—if she can get hold of the price of admission. Among the poorer children in their overcrowded homes there is little opportunity for excitement or pleasure or the following of special interests.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FORDNEY'S YOUNG FRIEND SPOTS A CLEW!

"Let me tell you how my little friend, Irving Castenbaum, actually spotted an important clew before the police recognized its significance," Prof. Fordney told his laboratory assistant.

"Young Irving, with burning ambition to be a criminologist, sneaked behind the homicide squad into a Bronx flat. Peering around the bulk of Detective Sergeant McAllister he saw a man lying on a blood-stained bed. Beneath his outflung right hand a revolver lay on some feathers which strewed the floor.

"After the homicide routine Detective McAllister brought in Mrs. Finkel, the landlady—the only eyewitness to the tragedy.

"'About 9:10,' she said, 'a man asked for Mr. Lane, the dead boarder. His actions were somewhat suspicious, so after showing him to the room I listened outside the door. Hearing loud, angry voices I opened it a trifle just as Lane ran to the bed, grabbed a revolver from beneath the pillow and fired. He missed and before he could fire again the visitor shot him in the head. Lane dropped his gun and fell dead on the bed. Then the stranger frantically tore the feather pillows to pieces and flung them about as if searching for something. He even slit the mattress before he caught sight of me and ran down the fire escape off Lane's room. I'm sure he didn't find what he was looking for,' she concluded.

"McAllister apparently accepted the story when Irving piped up with, 'It couldn't have happened that way! See . . .'"

Cost 85 Cents to Put Rheumatic Cripple Back to Work Again

Now Joyously Happy

While all his family looked on in astonishment and all his friends were amazed, one man took the pain, swelling and agony from his tortured joints in 48 hours and did it with that famous rheumatic prescription known to pharmacists as Allenru.

This powerful yet safe remedy is wonderful—its action is almost magical where uric acid and other circulating poisons cause agony and pain—the excess uric acid poison starts to leave your body in 24 hours.

Tiny Daughter Steals the Show from Her Movie Star Parents

Ben Lyon and his wife, Bebe Daniels, both motion picture stars, found themselves in the background yesterday when they arrived on the Los Angeles limited of the Chicago and North Western. The reason was, they brought Barbara Bebe along. Barbara Bebe, twenty months old and all dressed up in a shell pink coat and beret, winked a pair of blue eyes at the camera men and reporters, and after that no one paid much attention to Mr. and Mrs. Lyon.

Barbara Bebe was on her way to Europe where both parents are going to appear in some English films, and where Mrs. Lyon, who is a mezzo-soprano, expects to look over the prospective locations for her concert debut one of these days. Barbara Bebe left on the Manhattan Limited of the Pennsylvania lines.

RELIEF BUDGET FOR MAY SHOWS $640,000 DROP

Loan of $3,355,100 to Be Asked of R. F. C.

A reduction of $640,000 in the relief needs of Illinois for next month below the commitments for April will be put into effect by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, it was announced yesterday by Wilfred S. Reynolds, the executive secretary. This saving appeared in estimates Mr. Reynolds prepared before departing for Washington, where he will confer with officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation today on a grant to the state for next month's needs.

The state will require about $6,710,200 for idle relief during May, Mr. Reynolds estimated. He estimated the commitments of this month at about $7,350,000.

Seeks $3,355,100 Loan.

Of the $6,710,200 required for next month, $5,503,567 will be needed in Cook county and $1,206,633 in downstate counties, he said. The funds spent on relief of the idle this month will amount to $6,210,000 in Cook county and $1,140,000 in downstate counties. A loan of $3,355,100, about one-half the total requirements, will be asked of the R. F. C., he said.

"Before the middle of next month we plan to apply for a second loan to cover the second half of the month, based upon what sales tax revenue appears to be available at that time," Mr. Reynolds added.

Little Hope of Sales Tax.

"There is little hope that sales tax funds will be available for use during May," he explained. "The law provides that collections are to be made on the 15th of each month and that distribution of collections to counties is to be on the 25th. If the Supreme court gives an early recess decision upholding the constitutionality of the law, and distribution to counties can be made promptly, it may be possible for relief to be financed during the last week of the month with the sales tax funds."

The Kane county board of supervisors yesterday voted to use its share of the state sales tax for unemployment relief. This action was the first of its kind taken by any downstate county. Such action is necessary in each county in order to divert the sales tax revenue for the county from the schools to relief of the idle.

YANKEE WOMAN ROBBED, THROWN INTO THE OCEAN

RANGOON, Burma, April 27.—(AP)—Mrs. M. T. Riach of San Diego, Cal., today told in police court how a sampan rower whom she had engaged to convey her from Rangoon to the steamship Karoa robbed her of her money and threw her into the water. Mrs. Riach was on her way from the Straits Settlements to America.

The sampan rower, she said, demanded a tip. She gave him one rupee. He demanded two more and she gave him all her silver, whereupon he seizer her purse, containing about 200 ruppes [$60] and threw her into the water.

She swam toward the sampan, she said, and attempted to get in, but the rower tried to push her back. She finally managed to scramble in after the man had disappeared into the water. She cried for help and another sampan took her to the steamer, where she was given dry clothing.

She accused Imayamat Ali, a Chittagonian. He said Mrs. Riach fell into the water accidentally. The case was postponed until May 11.

JAPANESE GREET LEAGUE ENVOY AS CONQUERING HERO

Emperor Presents Him with Gifts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, April 27.—Perhaps not since Napoleon returned from his debacle in Egypt to be greeted as a hero in Paris has any one been so glorified in failure as was Yosuke Matsuoka, chief Japanese delegate to the league of nations session on the Sino-Japanese conflict today. He returned to Tokio from what is considered here to have been a successful journey across the United States in the Japanese cause amid wild acclamation.

Hundreds of thousands cheered him in Yokohama and in the capital. High honors were bestowed on him by Emperor Hirohito and the empress. They presented him with gifts and invited him to luncheon tomorrow.

Japanese Thank Him.

His pleas that he had failed were drowned by shouts of "Banzai!" which means "May you live 10,000 years." Thus the people of Japan thanked him for "taking Japan out of the league of nations."

Had he been successful in his mission in keeping Japan in the league his welcome would have been far less ardent, for in causing Japan to withdraw he satisfied the army, nationalists and ultra-patriots who had clamored for the withdrawal.

Matsuoka's first act on returning to Tokio was to visit Yasukuni, shrine to the war dead. There a yearly celebration was being held and the assembled thousands cheered him.

CHILD'S CHANCES IN EYE SURGERY CALLED 1 IN 10

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—While two year old Helen Vasko was progressing today in recovery from the operation performed upon her on Tuesday at the Columbia-Presbyterian medical center, her chances of surviving long are only ten or fifteen in 100, it was learned on excellent medical authority. Whether she will live or not will certainly become apparent within six months.

The complaint from which she was suffering was a form of cancer, retinoblastoma, a disease of childhood, developing almost without exception in children less than two years old. It begins in an imperfectly developed retina. Extremely malignant, the cancer spreads along the optic nerve, which leads back to the brain.

The operation performed upon Helen was the usual one for this complaint, removal of the affected eye, and as much of the optic nerve from that eye as can be reached.

The chances that the operation will be shown to have been successful in removing all of the tainted tissue decrease materially with each month that passes after the condition is discovered. Helen's trouble was noticed first in January.

TWO GIFTS OF $50 BOOST FUND FOR HUNGRY PUPILS

Two $50 checks from two contributors who have been as generous several times before arrived yesterday to give the Hungry School Children's fund its most substantial encouragement in weeks. The donors were Samuel Howard and C. Newton, who seem to have a habit of watching the fund, and when its struggles become too difficult help it over the rough spot.

In all, $130 reached the fund yesterday. The officers and members of the Theodore Roosevelt post of the American Legion sent $5, and the Bookhouse for Children, another regular contributor, sent $6. A new contributor was A. Sipos, who enclosed $1, which he asked be used for charity.

HAUSNER PLANS AGAIN TO TRY WARSAW FLIGHT

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—Stanislaus Felix Hausner, the Jersey flyer who was rescued last June from the Atlantic after floating at the mercy of the waves for seven days off the coast of Europe, is planning another attempt to span the ocean and fly to Warsaw this summer, it was learned today.

Hausner, who took off from Floyd Bennett field on his first attempt, also expects to use the barren island airport in Brooklyn on his next hop, it was said.

Although some secrecy has marked the tests conducted with the new long distance craft built by Giuseppe Bellanca at Wilmington, it was said by persons who have been watching the progress of the preparations that the plane is for Hausner. The plane is said to have 1,000 gallons fuel capacity and 8,000 miles cruising radius.

CUBS BEAT PIRATES, 3-2; WHITE SOX WIN, 10-4

BRUINS BUNCH HITS IN 4TH, END LOSING STREAK

Bush Bests Swift in Pitching Duel.

The Cubs open a two games series with the Cincinnati Reds today at Wrigley field. It will be ladies' day.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 27.—The Chicago Cubs today could not exceed their conventional limit of three runs and they made only five hits off Bill Swift. But who cares? Guy Bush and an errorless crew of associates beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 2, in a peach of a ball game which ended with the Pirates' tying run on third base.

GUY BUSH.

The game lifted the Cubs out of the cellar and it knocked the Pirates out of first place. The triumph ended the Cubs' losing streak at four and it gave the Cubs a 2 to 1 edge in their season series with the Pittsburghers.

Guy Bush was returned the victor for the first time in three starts this year. He held the Pirates hitless for 4 1-3 innings. He allowed three hits and a run in the sixth and the other two in the ninth. One of the latter two, a triple by Vaughan with one on, narrowly missed being a homer, which would have tied the score.

Bunch Hits After a Walk.

The game was the first loss in three for Swift, who in his two previous efforts had held his foes to a grand total of six hits. He's allowed a total of only 11 hits in three games, but his trouble today was that he allowed the Cubs to make three of their five hits after a walk had started the fourth. Even these things didn't form his worst mistake. The young man got in his real jam because he took a full windup, letting Stephenson and Grimm work a double steal. The double theft developed the margin of victory.

The Cubs will not meet up with the Pirates again until they come here for two games on Memorial day. The Cubs having started upward in the league standings today, simultaneously with the decline of the Pirates from first place, did much to perk up the champs, who certainly would have been a sick bunch had Bush lost today.

Here's the detail of that big fourth inning which cheered the Cubs as much as it surprised the Pirates: Babe Herman drew the second pass off Swift and went to third when Stephenson lined to center for the first Cub hit. English fouled to Grace and the situation didn't look so good when Grimm took two strikes to no avail. The next pitch was all Charley needed, however, for he singled off Piet's glove, scoring Babe Herman and putting Stephenson on second.

Vaughan Gets First Hit.

Swift made the mistake of thinking at this point. Bill figured that he could wind up with a couple of slow gents on base. Stevie and Charlie crossed him up by putting on a double steal. Koenig filed to Lindstrom, Stevie scoring after the catch. Hartnett singled to center, scoring Grimm, but Gabby was out, Lindstrom to Grace to Vaughan, when he tried to reach second on the throw to the plate.

After Suhr had fanned to start the fifth, Vaughan made the first hit off Bush, a single to center. The safety caused no trouble, because Piet forced Vaughan and Grace popped to Koenig.

Babe Herman got as far as third in the Cubs' sixth inning. He was safe on Vaughan's second error, paused while Stephenson fouled to Suhr and English fanned, and then ran to third on Grimm's single to center. Koenig forced Grimm to quelch the threat.

In their half the Pirates proved a bit troublesome. Swift led off with a double, his first hit of the year, and stopped at third on L. Waner's single to right. Lindstrom popped to Grimm and P. Waner filed to Babe Herman. Swift scoring. Traynor singled to center, but Suhr fanned.

Herman Drives Out Double.

The fifth and last hit off Swift was a double by Babe Herman with one out in the eighth. Vaughan threw out Stephenson and English.

Up Again, Down Again Arthur Goes to Minors

St. Louis, Mo., April 27.—[Special.]—Arthur [The Great] Shires is on the move again. Shires, who seems about to pile up an all time record for trips between the minors and majors, recently came to the Cardinals from the Boston Braves. Shires and three other players were sent to Columbus, the St. Louis American association farm, in exchange for Burges Whitehead, a second baseman.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

IT'S DERBY TIME.

FRIEND ARCH: Well, Arch, I was wondering whether maybe you had forgotten that the Kentucky Derby is only a week from Saturday because I haven't heard anything from you about when you would like me to go down to Louisville. Of course, French Lane will be there for the opening of the meeting so we are protected on news happenings, but I ought to go fairly early if we want those "Feedbox" interviews with the horses.

I was reminded of it because I received a somewhat polite formal note from Ladysman, favorite, telling me where his quarters will be located at Churchill Downs. Kerry Patch, winner of the Futurity, who must be a sort of rough and ready chap, also sent a night letter to be sure to come around and hear what he intends to do to our "western muggs," as he termed them, and also to the eastern "dudes" for whom he professes contempt.

Also there was a cute little perfumed note from Swivel, winner of the Pimlico Futurity, saying she would like to hold a press reception like Mrs. Roosevelt does, only for men correspondents instead of women. She said she'd like to talk about her boy friends as competitors and also tell why a "lady" might win this race for the first time since Regret, a filly, earned the honor in 1915.

Of course, it's pretty hard work to get up every morning at sunrise, especially if French has kept one up late the night before, to go out to the track to talk to the horses, but that's the best time to meet them, and I don't mind hard work as you know because don't I take a hard trip way off down to Florida for you nearly every winter?

Without seeking to influence your judgment in the matter, I would say Monday would be about the right time to get there, but that's up to you. I'll be real careful about my expense account just as I always am. Drop me a note when you make up your mind.

Regards. Harvey T. Woodruff.

Kiss from Venice.

Come near, Gondolier, gently kiss my ears,
Linger on, let me dream along.
Night of love, precious 'til the dawn,
Drifting in gondola, guided by your song.
'Neath Venetian lunary lighted midnight blue
Where stars are jewels of iridescent hue,
Stars, dreamy stars, like fine-spun lace,
Grace the heavens, woven into space,
Weaving a magic dome, webbing us in enchantment,
As onward in romance we roam.
Sing again, Gondolier, echo Venice through,
Turning water streets, leading to the blue—
Out to winding Grand Canal;
San Marco where Campanelle stands sentinel.
O, Venice, kiss of unforgotten love,
Music, color, shadows, reflections beckon—
As they zig-zag across water's glassy floor,
Water lapping—so your love comes to me once more.
Gondolier, sing! Sing again!
What care I if it brings moistened eyes?
Love has always come through trickling tears,
Gently as they kiss my ears,
So too, from you, Gondolier.

TRENTON WINS CLASS C TITLE IN INDOOR POLO

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The 112th Field Artillery polo team of Trenton, N. J., is the new national indoor class C champion. Catching Maj. Hunter's 124th Field Artillery team flatfooted, the eastern players cantered to a 12½ to 5 victory last night in the 124th armory at 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

In an exhibition game which opened the program a team composed of Bill Nicholls, Herbert Lorber, and Stewart Iglehart crushed a team made up of Capt. Maxwell Corpening, Prentice Porter, and Lieut. Chris Schuh, 15 to 7, the losing trio making only two goals in addition to the five awarded them by handicap.

They Don't Need Handicap.

Although rated four goals better than the Trenton team, Maj. Hunter and his mates could do nothing toward wiping out the handicap under which they started the game. In fact, they could not even keep up to the pace set by their adversaries. With the exception of Barney Balding's playing in the second half, their hitting was inaccurate, their team work ragged, and their riding erratic.

The Trenton players functioned with much greater smoothness and were quick to take advantage of breaks; they seldom missed setups and in addition they did some accurate shooting on the run. The Chicago team repeatedly failed to score after bringing the ball right up to the goal.

Lieut. Jim Wilson led the scoring for the Trenton team with five points to his credit; Capt. McGowan made four and Capt. Art Moore one.

Give Sharpshooting Exhibition.

The first game consisted largely of an exhibition of sharpshooting on the part of the eastern stars. Bill Nicholls made eight goals, Lorber four, and Iglehart three. One of Iglehart's scoring shots was made from more than half the length of the field.

Capt. Corpening did nearly all the effective work for the losers, hitting well and playing all over the field both on attack and defense. He made the only two goals to his team's credit.

Bill Nicholls showed how to play good polo with the least expenditure of energy. Hanging on the fringe of every mêlée he cantered in a manner which seemed almost lackadaisical. But he was ever alert for an opening and whenever the breaks came his way he kicked his heels into his horse's ribs and charged for the goal.

Play for Title Tomorrow.

The tournament will come to a climax tomorrow night when Winston Guest's Optimists meet the United States Army Sixth Corps Area team for the open championship. Mike Phipps and Stewart Iglehart will complete the Optimists' lineup, while the Army trio will be composed of Maj. C. C. Smith, Capt. Stub Davis, and Capt. C. A. Wilkinson.

An exhibition game between a Chicago riding club team and the South Shore remounts is also on tomorrow night's program.

DERBY HORSES on Parade

BY FRENCH LANE.

THE eastern turf followers have made a lot of noise lately about the Kentucky Derby candidate Repaid. Their shouts were so raucous on one occasion a couple of weeks ago that Repaid replaced Ladysman momentarily as the betting favorite.

Then when Repaid was beaten in his first start this spring he lost the post of honor. But from out of the east there still comes a steady rumble about Repaid.

Owner May Clean Up $100,000.

James F. Johnson, who owns Repaid, is reported to have backed the colt for a king's ransom. Well posted racing men say Johnson stands to win more than $50,000 in wagers if Repaid comes galloping home in front. That, with the $50,000 Derby prize, would make it quite a profitable afternoon for Owner Johnson.

To many students of blood lines Repaid is an ideally bred colt. His sire is Kai-Sang, a son of The Finn. His mother is Granny, whose sire was Sweep. From his paternal side Repaid gets the best blood of England through Ogden, Star Shoot, Golden Maxim [grandson of Bend Or], and Watercress. On the maternal side he has crosses of the three best American families in Bonnie Scotland, Domino, and Hanover.

Scores Victory Over Ladysman.

Repaid was among the top 2 year olds last fall. He trimmed Kerry Patch in the Junior Championship stakes in New York after the latter had beaten Ladysman in the great Futurity at Belmont Park.

He was a bargain when Mr. Johnson bought him for $1,200 out of the Rancocas dispersal sale at Saratoga in August of 1931. Although both his sire and dam were brown this colt is a chestnut.

Distance should not stop Repaid and he should be benefited by his early efforts in Maryland.

YANKS EXPLAIN TO HARRIDGE WHO HIT WHOM, WHY

League Head to Question Senators Today.

Philadelphia, April 27.—[Special.]—Investigation of the fight between the Yankees and the Senators in Washington on Tuesday began here today.

William Harridge, president of the American league, interviewed the umpires, George Moriarty and Harry Geisel, who officiated in the series, and Ben Chapman, Fred Walker, and Manager Joseph V. McCarthy of the Yankees. After the hearing Harridge announced he would go to New York tonight to interview Buddy Myer, Earl Whitehill, Manager Joe Cronin and any other members of the Washington team.

Harridge arrived from Chicago early today and went at once to the hotel where Moriarty and Geisel make their headquarters. He remained with them until 1 o'clock, when he went to Shibe park.

Yankees Are Questioned.

There he was awaited by Chapman, Walker and McCarthy. Chapman was the first witness called to the umpire's dressing room. He told the same story of the fight he told in Washington and Harridge, interrupting with a question here and there, reserved comment when the player had finished.

Walker was summoned next. Harridge already had exonerated Walker of any part in the stirring up of the trouble, the umpires having made it clear that all he had done was to go to the rescue of the beleaguered Chapman in the Senators' dugout and hammer a group of Washington detectives off his roommate. After Walker told his story Harridge smiled and said:

"All right, my boy. I'm satisfied you did exactly as any one else would have done in the circumstances."

McCarthy Wants No Fines.

McCarthy was the next and final witness. His story upheld Chapman. Harridge had a few questions to ask him, since Joe wasn't personally involved in the fight. At the conclusion of his testimony McCarthy told Harridge it was his view no one should be fined or suspended but that the teams should be allowed to iron out their difficulties on the ball field.

Harridge then met newspaper men.

"How do you feel about it now?" he was asked.

"I don't know yet," he said. "Remember the testimony isn't all in."

"Are you in favor of aggressive baseball?"

"Yes," he said, "but we must be careful to draw the line somewhere or aggressive baseball soon might become rowdy baseball."

Chapman, Myer, and Whitehill were indefinitely suspended by Harridge yesterday, pending final decision in the matter. Chapman was in uniform today and worked out with the Yankees, but under the league rules he was obliged to view the game from the grand stand.

SO YOU THINK PLAYER ROWS IRK OWNERS?

Well, Listen: It's Worth Quarter of Million to Them.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—Swift and terrible punishment will be dealt the disorderly elements of the Yankees and the Senators who misjudged the meaning of the word moderation and fought with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm.

To Ben Chapman of the Yankees the recent general exhortation to the ball players to show the customers the old pepper this year was an invitation to cut another man's legs off with his spikes.

Buddy Myer of the Senators construed it to mean that he might kick an opponent who was down, and Vernon [Goofy] Gomez, the Yankees' left handed pitcher, making his own interpretation of the order, decided that he would not exceed the bounds of moderation if he took a few strikes at some random heads among the Washington customers, who include some of the most random heads in the United States.

In the case of Mr. Gomez the error was not very serious, as pitchers are notoriously poor batters, and it appears that he did not hit so much as a foul, although he was in there taking his cuts, as the ball players say, for 15 minutes. Still, a captious interpretation of the rule might call for a penalty against Gomez, too, because this is an especially bad time to be swinging ball bats at the customers, and even a pitcher might accidentally get hold of a random head in a quarter hour of free swinging.

Pull in Your Feet, Here Comes Benny!

The instructions to the ball players at the start of the season ordered them to play with great animation and spirit, sometimes known as the old fight, fight, fight, but warned them not to indulge in disorderly conduct. Thus each of the players was confronted with his individual problem. Required to fight in moderation, each young man had to decide what was moderate fighting in his particular case and trust that the high executives would agree.

As champion base runner, Chapman has been drawing a personal following of customers to the ball yards for three years by his dashing display on the paths. The magnates, one and all, have derived commercial benefits from his work. The customers learned to watch Chapman when he landed on first base and to yell "There he goes" as he galloped down to second, sliding into the bag with the blades gleaming on the soles of his shoes.

If a shortstop or second baseman happened to leave a foot or leg in the way that was unfortunate for the party of the second part, for Chapman was only putting forth his particular show of the old fight, fight, fight, as required by his contract and the instructions from headquarters.

Twice Myer left a leg in the way of Chapman's spikes and the second time this happened he turned on Chapman and kicked him as he lay on the ground. The question, of course, is whether he kicked him with restraint and moderation, within the meaning of the law, or with intent to inflict bodily harm. One of two things is true. He kicked in a restrained way or he is a very poor kicker, for Chapman got right up.

Chapman Boxes a Nose on Way Out.

Following their rough house at second base, which was one of the worst fights ever seen and which was stopped by other ball players to save the customers from unnecessary punishment, Chapman paused on his way to the locker room and punched Earl Whitehill of the Washington club on the nose. Whitehill is now wearing his nose in a sling and is bade a codefendant with the other immoderate fighters for using immoderate language.

All this animation and spirit will have the pleasant result of drawing large sums of money to the turnstiles of the New York and Washington parks. As matters stand, and without any further exploitation, it should yield at least $100,000 to the two magnates, Ruppert and Griffith, in extraordinary gate receipts. Neither Mr. Ruppert nor Mr. Griffith has ever been known to quit in the presence of extraordinary gate receipts,

APPLING LEADS 16 HIT ATTACK ON TIGER JINX

Shortstop Accounts for Five Runs.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox discovered yesterday that a simple remedy could throttle the jinx with which the Detroit Tigers have been taunting them in the current campaign. The remedy was an assortment of 16 base hits, which not only ruined the jinx, but also the Tigers, who were beaten in the final of the Comiskey park stay, 10 to 4. The count for the season now is two victories for the south siders and three for Detroit.

LUKE APPLING.

It was well for Ed Durham, the young fellow obtained by the trade route from Boston last winter, that the Sox came up with their most impressive attack of the year. The slim right hander started poorly, recovered his skill for a time, and then bogged down in the sixth when a real homer by Gerald Walker with one on created a 3 to 3 tie.

Appling Leads Attack.

There was immediate activity in the bull pen, but after the Sox had come forth with a cluster of four runs in the seventh the Tigers displayed less energy and Durham carried on to the end. He was additionally protected by three runs in the eighth.

Fred Marberry and Whitlow Wyatt, the only two Detroit pitchers involved in the disturbances kicked up by the Sox, can blame Luke Appling for their unpleasant labor. The young shortstop dusted off Marberry with three hits, the last of which forced him to quit the job in the seventh. When Luke faced Wyatt for the first time in the eighth he improved on previous performances by tripling.

This series of wallops accounted for three runs, not counting two Luke himself scored. The noted Mr. Al Simmons also drove in three, but two were on infield outs and one on a single. Mule Haas, who couldn't get a hit Wednesday, collected three yesterday, walked once, and sacrificed once.

25-Minute First Inning.

It required 25 minutes for the teams to go through the motions necessary for one run apiece in the first inning. Fox opened the day with a single and stole second. Owen fanned, but Webb singled past Dykes and Fox scored. Gehringer singled to center, sending Webb to third. Durham promptly put the brakes on Walker and Davis, both of whom popped out.

The Sox attack started with Hayes flying to Fox. Haas did some good for himself by singling to left, after which Swanson walked. Simmons was out on a high fly to right, but Appling took charge of the situation by spanking a line single over first, Haas scoring and Swanson pulling up at third. The spurt died on Kress' fly to center.

Tigers Threaten in Fifth.

After the first inning Durham led a life of ease until the fifth, when a pair of hits put the Tigers dangerously close to a run. Hayworth opened with a drive at Dykes and the ball took an unexpected hop for a single. Marberry tried to sacrifice, but popped foul to Kress. Fox also was set down without much trouble, but Owen lined a double into right center, sending Hayworth to third. Webb then popped to Berry in front of the plate and the flurry ceased.

Three Sox hits were mixed together for a two run lead in the fifth, but it didn't last long enough to be enjoyable. Haas' third successive single set this attack in motion after one was out. He ran to third on Swanson's single to right. Haas hiked home while Swanson was being forced on Simmons' tap. Then Appling doubled over short and Simmons

AURORA TRACK TO ADMIT FANS FREE OF CHARGE

Clubhouse Price Cut to $1 at 18 Day Meeting.

Free admission to the Aurora race course during the entire 18 day meeting, which opens the Illinois Turf association season on May 1, was announced yesterday by Joseph Cattarinich and Robert S. Eddy Jr., who last week took over control of the Exposition Park Jockey club.

The racing public will be tendered the accommodation of lawn and stands without charge of any kind. For those desiring other facilities reserved grandstand box seats will be available at 50 cents and clubhouse admission at $1. Both prices include all taxes.

Higher Purses Attract Horsemen.

The decision to abolish admission charges was arrived at after a series of conferences, and after Cattarinich and Eddy had made a thorough study both of the local conditions which obtained last season and those which reasonably may be expected during 1933.

The issuance of the condition book, with purses running higher than had been expected by most horsemen, has given an impetus to shipments. One of the major stables heard from is that of the Nash brothers of Chicago, who will race a division of their Shandon Farm stable at Aurora. Trainer J. J. Greeley may have a sprinter ready for the $1,200 Inaugural handicap on Monday.

O'Byrne String Arrives.

Arrivals from New Orleans were heaviest yesterday, with the 11 head raced by Bill Kane the largest string arriving. Henry Herendeen vanned ten from Hawthorne and J. O'Byrne likewise arrived with his string. O'Byrne believes that he has an Aurora Derby candidate in the good 3 year old Chrysostom. Mikel & Drilton, successful at Aurora in other seasons, have wired that they are shipping 24 horses from Tanforan.

TOO MANY ENTRIES

Indications are that numerous horsemen will be disappointed when entries for the Inaugural Handicap at Sportsman's Park are released by Secretary R. S. Shelley. So far, 18 nominations have been received, but track regulations permit only 10 starters in any race.

The Inaugural Handicap is the $1,000 feature for Monday, opening day of spring racing in the Chicago district. The race will be at seven furlongs. Among those already named for assignment of weights are Hoops, Brown Wisdom, Barashkova, Sun Memory, Elsenberg, Sobieha, Sun Collins, Uncommon Gold, Durva, No More, Very Well, Karl Eitel, Essare, Smash, Miss Marr, Figuriste, Miss Melody, and Meloy.

They're from Big Time.

A majority of these thoroughbreds are well known to Chicago fans, having raced on the big time tracks in Illinois. The fact that they are going to sport silks at the National Jockey club plant promises keen competition in the feature as well as other races to be decided at Cicero this spring.

Miss Melody and Meloy belong to Stuyvesant Peabody. Very Well and Karl Eitel are the property of Ald. J. J. Coughlin, while Emil Denemark pays the feed bills on Miss Marr.

Baby Race Is Second Feature.

The Berwyn purse, an allowance affair, is the secondary feature on Monday's card. This race is for 2 year olds. The youngsters will be asked to go four and one-half furlongs for the first time this year. General Pulaski and Farmer Bob, the latter owned by Stuyvesant Peabody, are expected to be the leading contenders.

AND THEN HE GOT AWAY!

Hawes Talks to Delegates as Convention Opens.

BY BOB BECKER.

Although the wishes of 6,000,00 men who take out hunting licenses and 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 fishermen must be subordinated for the present to the financial and economical emergency which now faces this country, eventually conservation will receive adequate attention from the United States government.

This was predicted by former Senator Harry B. Hawes of Missouri, when he opened the Izaak Walton league national convention yesterday in the Hotel Sherman. Walton delegates from eleven states heard Mr. Hawes discuss the question of national legislation to conserve America's wild life resources and provide more opportunities for outdoor recreation.

Suggests Use of Idle.

"For the few years immediately ahead," said Mr. Hawes, "we must be controlled in our ambitions by the unusual conditions prevailing in our nation. But now is the time to use the idle in big outdoor conservation projects as well as in reforestation. It will increase the number of jobs and enhance the health, the pleasure and the food supply of our people."

The sport of wild fowl hunting and especially the enforcement of laws to protect American waterfowl received attention from some of the Walton delegates when a special informal conference was held at noon with a representative group of Illinois duck hunters. The conference stressed the need for better game warden service in Illinois and expressed itself in favor of zoning the state in two waterfowl shooting zones.

Annual Election Tonight.

The convention will hold two sessions today which will be addressed by authorities on fish distribution, stream improvement and questions concerning water areas for waterfowl. Following these discussions the league will hold its annual election of officers, and then close the convention with a banquet at 7 p. m.

So You Think Player Rows Irk Owners?

although Mr. Grimith has not been put to the test as often as he would have liked.

The customers are very fond of man's inhumanity to man, as viewed from noncombatant positions, and they might contribute as much as a quarter of a million dollars above and beyond the normal receipts for the season if they are properly steamed up on the eve of each series between the Yankees and the Senators.

I do not know what can have come over the athletes. Not only have the Yankees and Senators come to blows, plainly beyond the line of their duty to their employers, but in Chicago there have been threats, or promises, of something similar between the Messrs. Hartnett and Grimm of the Cubs and Hornsby of the Cardinals, who used to be their manager and did not leave them laughing when he said good-by.

Now Cubs and Their Old Pal, Rogers, Pant.

The Cubs have not been winning many ball games up to now and their gate receipts have been off in proportion to their artistic success. In view of this interesting fact it is pertinent to note that the feeling between Hartnett and Grimm on one side and Hornsby on the other was not allayed by a casual suggestion in print from Mr. Bill Veeck, the Cubs' president. Mr. Veeck thought it would be a good thing for civilization if some one should pop Hornsby on the nose, although he dissuaded Messrs. Grimm and Hartnett from undertaking so rash a venture.

The players are very foolish, of course, to exert themselves beyond their contractual obligations. They will not share in any of the extra gate receipts contributed by the patrons in the expectation of carnage and they can never tell when they will be traded away from the club for which they have been fighting so spiritedly into the company of their late enemies.

Well, people generally seem not to have much sense nowadays, so too much should not be expected of the athletes or the league executives. The magnates alone stand to profit. The magnates are not dumb.

WATSON, MILLER TO RESUME PIN MATCH TONIGHT

Chicagoan 573 Behind as Last Block Starts.

Stewart Watson of Chicago tonight will start his fight to overtake Joe Miller of Buffalo in their eighty game bowling match for the national championship. They will bowl at the Ashland auditorium, starting at 8:30 o'clock. In the first forty games rolled in Buffalo, New York, and Syracuse last week Miller assumed a lead of 573 pins.

The task of reducing Miller's margin is a tremendous one, but Watson feels that the next forty games will turn the tide. Four blocks of ten games each will be bowled tonight, tomorrow, Sunday, and Monday nights.

Two new alleys have been installed in the auditorium. They are placed so that 1,500 can obtain a clear view of the activity.

Wrestlers Open National A. A. U. Tourney Tonight

Approximately 100 boys are eligible to compete tonight in the preliminaries of the National A. A. U. wrestling tournament at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. They earned their chance at the national championships by winning district, school, or state titles. Eight divisions, from the bantamweight to the heavyweight, will be represented. Finals will be decided tomorrow night.

Most of the out of town entrants arrived yesterday. Among them were teams from Southwestern State Teachers' college of Weatherford, Okla.; Iowa State college, Ohio university, and several individuals from Springfield, Mass., and Denver, Colo. Late in the afternoon the New York Athletic club team arrived by airplane.

The Indiana university national collegiate championship team and three representatives from Kansas State college are scheduled to arrive this morning. Kenneth Brown, northern Wisconsin farmer, who is hitch-hiking his way here, also is expected this morning. Ralph Teague, national collegiate heavyweight champion, was unable to make the trip with his teammates from Southwestern State Teachers' college because of two broken ribs.

Northwestern university and the University of Chicago have entered full teams. Chicago playgrounds and Y. M. C. A.'s also are represented.

The entrants will weigh in this morning at the Central Y. M. C. A. Each bout has been limited to 10 minutes, after which time a decision must be rendered.

Bob Jones of Indiana, Big Ten heavyweight champion, is a favorite. John Barga, Lennox Hill Athletic club, New York; Ralph Silverstein, Jewish People's institute, Chicago; A. Peters, Ohio university, and Chief Osley Sannoakle, Lincoln Park club, are other outstanding heavyweights.

HOPPE TAKES FOURTH BLOCK OF CAROM PLAY

Willie Hoppe of New York took the fourth block in the world's championship cushion carom billiard match with Jake Schaefer Jr. of San Francisco, 250 to 168, in 43 innings, at the Morrison hotel last night. It was Hoppe's third victory in the four days of play and he now leads, 1,000 to 810, in 155 innings.

Hoppe, who set a new high run record of 53 on Wednesday evening, was unable to count more than 30 last night. Schaefer's best cluster was 18.

NORTHWESTERN BEATS WISCONSIN AT GOLF, 16½-1½

Northwestern university's golf team defeated Wisconsin, 16½ to 1½, at the Kildeer Country club yesterday. Bob Brown, Northwestern, turned in the best score of the day, a 76. Capt. Sam Ruskin shot a 78 to lead Wisconsin's players. The results:

SINGLES—Reid, Northwestern, beat Ruskin, Wisconsin, 3 to 0; Flynn, Northwestern, beat Studholme, Wisconsin, 3 to 0; McDonald, Northwestern, beat Michael, Wisconsin, 3 to 0; Brown, Northwestern, beat Reid, Wisconsin, 3 to 0.

FOURSOMES—McDonald and Flynn, Northwestern, beat Reid and Michael, Wisconsin, 3 to 0; Reid and Brown, Northwestern, tied Ruskin and Studholme, Wisconsin, 1½ to 1½.

Western Amateur Is Awarded to Memphis, July 24

The western amateur golf championship is to be decided at Memphis, Tenn., in a tournament which will run from July 24 to 29. Once before—in 1920—Memphis was the site of this event, Chick Evans being the winner on that occasion. The present western amateur champion is Gus Moreland, a Texan.

CHARLEY O. DOES MILE AND EIGHTH TEST IN 1:53 3-5

Louisville, Ky., April 27.—(AP)—Charley O., winner of the Florida Derby, who has steadily gained support for the Kentucky Derby May 6, turned in a mile and an eighth workout today in the fast tinme of 1:53 3-5.

He worked at Douglas Park since the Churchill Downs track still had some damp spots at one turn. Charley O. was clocked at the quarter in :24 2-5, half in :48 3-5, five-eighth in 1:01 1-5, three quarters in 1:13 4-5, and the mile in 1:40 flat. After doing the mile and an eighth in 1:53 3-5 he galloped out a mile and three-sixteenths in 2:00 2-5.

Red Whisk, C. C. Van Meter's chestnut gelding, was worked over a mile at the Downs, covering it in 1:45. His fractional time was: Quarter :24, half :49, three-quarters 1:15. Jockey Willie Garner, who was up, lost a stirrup in the last eighth and had to ease him up a bit.

What do you mean NOW $4.44 ALL ONE PRICE

We mean that Ten Million Men gladly paid Six-Sixty for Regal Custom Reproductions—and you can now buy the same identical Regal Quality for $4.44—$2 less than two years ago.

We mean that every shoe shown in a Regal window and sold in a Regal store, from New York to San Francisco, measures up to the Nationally-recognized Regal Standard of Quality—and is now All One Price—$4.44.

We mean that there is no "COME-ON" price bait in a Regal window and there is no "TRADE UP" sales talk in a Regal store. We don't "Size You Up" when you come in and "Shake you down" before you go out. We don't brag about our Lowest Price and bribe our men to sell our Highest Price. We have One Price—$4.44.

We mean that when you go into a Regal store there is a feeling of confidence and comfort in knowing that you can take your choice from 100 different new Spring Styles in any Leather, Pattern and Design, for Street, Dress or Sport—and they are All One Price—$4.44.

We mean that you can FORGET THE PRICE when you buy a Regal Shoe, because you can get everything from a Full-Brogue, designed by the King's Own Bootmaker, to Nihleen's Famous Featherweight, designed for New York's "400"—and you can't pay more than $4.44.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

A host of track and field athletes from the central states will start the preliminaries of the twenty-fourth annual Drake university relays this afternoon at Des Moines, Ia. This year's invaders, however, will face a most difficult task to carry on the record breaking which has marked preceding relays.

Gradually the college stars have brought the individual marks and the relay records to a point where only a super performance can change them. Last year, under favorable weather conditions, seven meet records were established and one was tied.

Metcalfe Faces Job.

Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette's phenomenal sprinter, tied the Drake record last year for the 100 yard dash. His time was 9 5-10 seconds, equaling the winning mark made by Roland Locke in 1926. Metcalfe will compete again today and tomorrow in the 100 yard event, but to smash the record he now must equal the world mark of 9 4-10 seconds held by Frank Wykoff.

Many believe that Metcalfe will run 100 yards in 9 4-10 seconds before he finishes competition. However, this is his first appearance of the season outdoors and he certainly can't be expected to be in top form so early.

Henry Brocksmith, who was graduated from Indiana last year, is another who has helped to shove the Drake marks almost beyond reach. Brocksmith ran two miles in 9 minutes 13 6-10 seconds, which established a Drake record and also broke the 20 year old American collegiate mark. The late George Saling, competing for Iowa last spring, reduced the high hurdle mark to 14 4-10 seconds. John Brooks of Chicago broad jumped 24 feet 8⅝ inches for a record.

The 880 yard college relay record was established last year by the runners from Kansas State Teachers' college, Pittsburg, Kas. Three university relay marks were broken. They were: Two miles, by Notre Dame; distance medley by Indiana, and the 440 yard shuttle hurdle relay by Iowa.

Fleet Minnesota Quartet.

Iowa's record of 1 minute 1 6-10 seconds in the shuttle hurdles is the particular objective of Minnesota tomorrow afternoon. The Gophers quartet, composed of Capt. Charles Scheifley, Fred LaRoque, Henry Knobleuch, and Graydon Kilborn, won the same event in the Kansas relays last week. The time, however, was 7-10 of a second slower than Iowa's mark last year. Capt. Scheifley also won the 120 yard hurdle event at Kansas and is one of the favorites in this event tomorrow.

Ten years ago a quartet of quarter milers from Iowa set the Drake one mile relay record at 3 minutes 16 9-10 seconds. Despite assault of star teams since, the mark has remained, the next to oldest on the list. More than a score of mile relay teams will attack this record tomorrow afternoon.

The University of Iowa runners also will have a score to settle in this event if they meet Michigan's Big Ten indoor champions. Michigan won the title at Chicago with a mark of 3:20.6 with Iowa a close second.

PENN MEET OPENS TODAY

Philadelphia, Pa., April 27.—(AP)—The 39th annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival—the oldest meet of its kind in the United States—opens tomorrow with 3,000 athletes from 500 colleges and schools competing.

Seven defending titleholders and eight members of the United States Olympic team are on the program to perform in both relay races and individual events of the two-day meet. There are 86 events—30 tomorrow and 56 on Saturday.

Starting with the 400 meters hurdles at 2 p. m. tomorrow, the carnival speeds through to the hop, step and jump event with 120 yard high hurdles, quarter mile college relay, distance and sprint medley relays and the 3,000 meters steeplechase sandwiched in between.

On Saturday the hammer throw takes up most of the morning and the remainder of the scholastic and collegiate championship contests are spread over a five hour program.

Only the decathlon has been discarded. Lack of interest, officials announced, caused the dropping of the 10 event grind.

From the sidelines, looking on, will be the greatest middle distance runner of his time, Bill Carr, world's record holding Olympic 400 meter champion, whose injury in an automobile accident jolted Penn's hopes of retaining its mile relay title.

Maroon Tennis Team Defeats Elmhurst, 6-0

The University of Chicago tennis team defeated Elmhurst college yesterday at Elmhurst, 6 to 0. Elmhurst won only one set. Results:

SINGLES—Patterson beat Umbeck, 7-5, 6-4; Weiss beat Gerfen, 6-1, 6-1; Holbrook beat Sanders, 6-3, 6-2; Tyroller beat Haag, 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.

DOUBLES—Patterson and Weiss beat Umbeck and Gerfen, 6-2, 6-3; Holbrook and Tyroller beat Sanders and Haag, 6-3, 6-4.

GIANTS WHIP PHILS, 5-2.

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—Three runs in the eighth inning today enabled the Giants to defeat the Phillies, 5 to 2. The victory, along with the Cubs' defeat of Pittsburgh, gave the Giants the National league lead. Hubbell got credit for his third triumph of the season when he relieved Starr in the seventh inning. He also participated in the winning attack on Rhem, driving in the final run with a double after Moore had singled. Mancuso tripled, and Ryan doubled.

PRINTERS NAME DETROIT AS SITE OF BALL SERIES

The annual tournament of the Union Printers' International Baseball league will be held at Detroit, Mich., Aug. 5 to 11. The winner of the championship will be awarded the Garry Herrman trophy. The meet was held last year in St. Paul, Minn., and was won by Washington.

Chicago has won the title four times since the organization of the league in 1908. Its last victory was achieved in 1930 at Pittsburgh. A golf tournament will be held in connection with the baseball games.

LOU GEHRIG.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 27.—[Special.]—The Yankees could collect only six hits off Merritt Cain of the Athletics today, but three of them were home runs and the Yanks won, 5 to 2. Babe Ruth achieved his third homer of the season, Lou Gehrig his fifth, and Earl Combs his first.

Charley Ruffing, New York's pitcher slugger, held the Macks to four hits and struck out eight.

Ruth's home run came with Sewell, who had walked, on base in the fifth. The bases were empty when Gehrig and Combs connected. Ruffing walked Cramer and Cochrane in the sixth and then Foxx and Johnson came through with singles to count both of Philadelphia's runs. Score:

The Tiger sixth opened with Gehringer singling to center. Walker then hit his homer. There was nothing phoney about it. The ball sailed on a line into the seats in the distant left field corner, tying the score at 3-3. A double by Rogell also appeared in this inning, but Durham managed to keep it from doing any damage.

The removal of Marberry in the seventh began with a pass to Haas. Swanson bunted and Davis tried to flag Haas going to second, but the throw was late. Simmons singled to right, Haas scoring. Appling punched a single through short, scoring Swanson and putting Simmons on third. Appling went to second on the throw in. That was all for Marberry. Kress welcomed Wyatt with a fly to Walker on which Simmons scored. Appling dashed home on Dykes' double to right center. Then the fun stopped with the Sox in front, 7 to 3.

These Three Are Easy.

The Tigers put on a bargain sale in the eighth and the Sox picked up three more runs. It started with Schuble making a two-base wild throw on Hayes' grounder. Haas sacrificed and Swanson singled to move Hayes over the plate. A balk and wild pitch by Wyatt sent Swanson to third, and he went home while Simmons was being thrown out. Appling then tripled to center. Kress' single scored him. Dykes also singled, but nothing came of it.

Pinch Hitter Stone doubled in the ninth and worked around to the plate because the Sox didn't pay any attention to him.

NO. CENTRAL IN QUADRANGULAR MEET TOMORROW

The North Central college track team will compete in its only home meet of the 1933 season tomorrow, a qusdrangular meet with De Kalb, Elmhurst, and Wheaton.

North Central won the Little Nineteen indoor meet. De Kalb has defeated Wheaton, 72 to 40, in a triangular meet in which Crane was third with 21 points. Trakas, Beals, Eustace, and McGlashan are De Kalb's chief point getters. Wheaton relies on Olander, Ogan, Lawrence, and Phillips.

Washburn, Munn Paired for Mat Bout Thursday

Gaston Pitches Sox Opener at Cleveland Today

The Sox pulled out last night for their first venture of the season in Cleveland's new stadium. Milt Gaston will handle the pitching today in the opener of a four game series, and the Indians probably will come up with Willis Hudlin. The same pair met here last Saturday and Gaston triumphed 3 to 1, allowing only three hits.

Yesterday was a tough afternoon for men around second base. When Owen was forced there in the seventh he got in the way of Appling's right elbow as Luke was making the throw to first for a possible double play. The elbow cracked Owen's head and the head cracked Luke's elbow. Both dropped to the ground, but arose as soon as they were convinced nothing serious had happened. Haas also encountered a mishap at the bag. His left ankle was twisted in sliding, but he was able to continue.

The new Sox trainer, Ad Schacht, from the Seattle club, took over his duties. It marked the end of 25 years of rubbing service by William Buckner, who had been on the job steadily except for one year during the war period.

Jim Dykes made use of an opportunity to say a few choice words to Umpire Van Grafian in the fourth. The third baseman apparently beat out a roller to Marberry, but Van Grafian didn't see it that way. Van Grafian probably was merely evening up for calling Dykes safe on a close play at first in the second inning.

Armour Tennis Team Defeats Loyola, 7-2

Loyola university lost its first tennis match of the year to Armour Tech yesterday by a score of 7 to 2. O'Connor and Frisch were the only winners for Loyola, each scoring in the singles. Armour won the other four singles and the three doubles matches. The teams will meet in a return match on the Midway next Monday. Summaries:

U. S. Davis Cup Team Arrives in Mexico City

[Copyright: 1933 By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, April 27.—Wilmer Allison, Clifford Sutter, John Van Ryn and George W. Lott Jr., the United States Davis cup team, arrived in Mexico City this morning to prepare for their elimination matches with the Mexican team, starting May 5.

DELMONT FIGHTS DUBLINSKY AT CICERO TONIGHT

The Card

Harry Dublinsky vs. Danny Delmont [8].
Ray Tramblie vs. Freddy Eiller [8].
Lou Vine vs. Clarence Ballard [5].
Davey Day vs. Joey Haines [4].
Bill Reardon vs. Jack O'Connell [4].
George White vs. Benny Barrish [4].
Walter Madey vs. Biff Bennett [4].

Two bouts at eight rounds will head the card tonight at the Cicero Stadium, 19th street and 52d avenue. Harry Dublinsky and Danny Delmont, Chicago junior welterweights, will clash in one, and the other will bring together Ray Tramblie, Rockford, Ill., middleweight, and Freddy Eiller of Louisville, Ky.

Delmont will seek to avenge a defeat by Dublinsky at the Coliseum three years ago. He punches considerably harder than Harry, who is a fast boxer. Both boys will be making their first starts here in several months.

Tramblie is returning to the arena where he scored one of his most spectacular knockouts. Before winning a decision over Bud Saltis a month ago Ray knocked out Young Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., in a round. In his most recent match he knocked out Bill Thomas at Louisville, Ky.

In a four round preliminary Joey Haines will meet Davey Day. Four other supporting matches are on the card.

A bout at 10 rounds, two at eight, two at six, and one at four rounds will comprise the bill at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night. They are:

King Levinsky vs. Charley Retzlaff, Art Lasley vs. Tiger Jack Fox, Izzy Gastanaga vs. Salvatore Ruggirello, Eddie Houghton vs. Jack Robinson, Tony Cancelo vs. George Panka, and Solly Dukelsky vs. Young Walker.

Retzlaff has won two matches in as many engagements this year and Levinsky has scored two victories and lost two bouts. In his latest appearance here Charley knocked out Walter Cobb in a round on March 22. He whipped Tom Heeney at St. Paul March 7. Levinsky hasn't boxed in Chicago since he met Primo Carnera at the Stadium last winter.

Dave Shade, New York middleweight, yesterday accepted a bout with Henry Firpo at Louisville, Ky., next Friday. . . . Dick Daniels, Minneapolis, Minn., heavyweight, is training here for a pending bout with Art Laskey at Minneapolis on May 12. The Daniels-Johnny Risko bout at Cleveland, O., has been postponed from May 29 to the first week in June. . . . Eddie Shea is to face Tommy Paul or Jackie Wilson at Pittsburgh on May 8. . . . Pete Wistort, south side heavyweight, is scheduled to leave tonight for Atlantic City, where he will serve as sparring partner for Max Baer.

Eddie Stiegel vs. George Shrosbree [5]. Johnny Fitzpatrick vs. Sammy Morales [5]. Johnny Terry vs. Art Donovan [4]. Guy Schriver vs. Kid Pancho [4]. Chuck Reed vs. Rooscvelt Haines [4]. Eddie Chinski vs Mennen Kumis [4].

Northwestern university boxers will face Loyola at Patten gymnasium tomorrow night. Last week each school won four bouts in a tournament at Loyola gymnasium.

DISCUSS LEASING 2 GOLF COURSES IN WEST PARKS

Public discussion was permitted yesterday at a meeting of the west park board where a proposal to lease the two nine hole golf courses to private concessionaire was under consideration. Last year the courses were operated at a loss to the park of $20,000. President Harry Joseph said, although a charge of 20 cents was made for each player. The same charge would prevail. President Joseph declared, if the courses were rented to a citizen and the park system would thereby be assured of a profit instead of a loss.

Several persons spoke against the proposal. It was argued that under efficient park management the parks could make a profit the same as a concessionaire could. The commissioners are to decide next Tuesday.

Chicago Takes Slugging Match from Lake Forest

University of Chicago defeated Lake Forest's baseball team yesterday at Lake Forest, 21 to 15. Home runs were made by Cole of Chicago and Katzenmaier and Parsons of Lake Forest. Score:

J. J. BADENOCH, BOARD OF TRADE VETERAN, IS DEAD

Served as Chief of Police Under Mayor Swift.

John J. Badenoch, former chief of police and oldest member of the Chicago Board of Trade, died yesterday at his home, 501 Washington boulevard, Oak Park. He was 82 years old, and although his health had not been good for several months, he was able to go to his office until last Friday.

J. J. BADENOCH.

Mr. Badenoch was born in Scotland and came to this country with his parents in 1857. At the age of 16 he came to Chicago and engaged in the wholesale jewelry business. In 1874 he married Miss Clemence Ward, who died recently and who was the daughter of a family of Chicago's early settlers.

Mr. Badenoch was elected an alderman of the old 11th ward, serving one term. He was chief of police under Mayor Swift in 1895 and 1896. His public service included three years as president of the board of election commissioners and three years as a member of the board of education. He also served as foreman of the grand jury which indicted the anarchists responsible for the killing of several policemen during the Haymarket riots of May 4, 1886. At one time he was chairman of the Cook county Republican organization.

He was a 32d degree Mason and the founder and first president of the Illinois Masonic Orphan's home. He was president of the St. Andrews society and attended the Second Baptist church of Chicago since 1882. He is survived by four sons, Joseph W., Edward C., David A., and Ernest W. Badenoch, and a daughter, Mrs. Annie Badenoch Stevens, all of Chicago.

FILM DIRECTOR WHO SUED AIMEE DIES SUDDENLY

Hollywood, Cal., April 27.—[Special.]—Roy Stewart, 51, film actor, writer and director, died suddenly of a heart attack yesterday, leaving uncompleted long litigation with the Rev. Aimee McPherson-Hutton over an agreement made in 1929 to star Mrs. McPherson in a motion picture.

Stewart, born in San Diego, Cal., was a famous cowboy star on the screen a decade ago. He played in "Old Arizona," "Sparrows," "Riders of the Dawn," "Stormy Waters," and other films.

His litigation with Mrs. McPherson prefaced her departure on a tour around the world, and he entered into a compromise by which he was granted a judgment reported as "between $50,000 and $100,000," in place of the $240,000 contract alleged.

Stewart's agents today said the judgment was still unsettled.

John Strauss, Who Fought with Grant, Dies, Aged 93

ARCH O. BURDICK, 55, INSURANCE BROKER, IS DEAD

Arch O. Burdick, vice president of the Rollins Burdick Hunter company, insurance brokers, died yesterday of heart disease in his home at 2305 Commonwealth avenue. He would have been 55 years old Sunday.

Mr. Burdick was born in Chicago and entered the insurance business the year after the 1893 World's Fair when he was 16 years old. When he was 21 he became a member in the insurance partnership of Rollins & Burdick and became vice president of the present company in 1912.

His widow, Mrs. Frank McCourtie Burdick, survives. Funeral services are to be arranged later.

C. P. PRIDE, 79, PAPER COMPANY OFFICIAL, DEAD

Tomahawk, Wis., April 27.—(AP)—C. B. Pride, 79, paper mill executive and philanthropist, died today in the Illinois Masonic hospital, Chicago, according to word received here.

He was president of the Tomahawk Pulp and Paper company, which was forced into receivership in 1929. Since that time Pride was said to have paid the wages and salaries of all employés from his own fortune, which virtually has been exhausted in an attempt to resume operation of the mill.

Pride, an engineer, built a number of paper mills in the United States and Canada. In 1920 he built a $3,500,000 plant here which later was acquired by the Tomahawk Kraft Paper company.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at Appleton, Wis., friends here were advised.

Everybody has days when every waking hour is packed with zest of living. Why not make every day like this?

A frequent drawback to fitness is constipation. It may dull your energy, steal your appetite, lower your vitality. Yet it is so easy to overcome.

Try eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Science shows this delicious cereal supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to promote appetite, and tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than taking patent medicines—so often harmful.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN has iron for the blood. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

STOCKS WEAKEN; MONEY DOUBTS SLACKEN TRADE

Inflation Problems Restrict Market.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 27.—Uncertainties over the monetary problem continued to depress speculative sentiment today. Stock prices moved narrowly throughout the session, with a tendency toward lower levels. Traders of both camps seemed disposed to suspend activities pending further developments at Washington.

Volume of trading was the lowest since the inflation boom struck the market, amounting to only about 2,000,000 shares.

Beyond a handful of first quarter earnings reports, which made pretty flat reading, and the reduction in the Consolidated Gas dividend, which had been expected, the business field provided little news worthy of notice.

Capital Events Watched.

All eyes are glued on Washington and nothing that happens in any other quarter seems to matter greatly. The concern of the moment is, of course, what the dollar is going to be worth tomorrow, a month, or a year from now. It was a little stronger on the foreign exchanges today and this may have had some effect in restraining bullish speculation, which has been based for the last two weeks largely on the prospects of dollar depreciation.

Reports were about that sizable blocks of stocks had begun to appear for sale at levels slightly under the prevailing range. The inference was drawn that insurance companies and other institutional holders had begun to lighten up in anticipation of some sort of reaction such as many observers have been anticipating since the sharp runup attained its peak about a week ago.

Allied Chemical Drops.

Weakness in Allied Chemical was a depressing influence in the early dealings of today's session. Traders didn't particularly relish the threat of the stock exchange to remove the issue from trading privileges unless more informative reports are forthcoming for the benefit of the company's shareholders, and "precautionary" selling broke the price about six points at the opening.

Public utilities were weak and so were the rails. Consolidated Gas registered a small fractional gain in the face of its dividend cut, but elsewhere the group was inclined to sag. Motor stocks were mixed, Auburn dropping about 2 points, and General Motors and one or two others managing some slight progress.

CHEAPER AUTOS EXPORTED BY U. S. SHOW BIG GAIN

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—The increasing importance of the low priced car in the overseas market and the popularity of the American product were evidenced by the fact that United States exports during the first quarter of the year of passenger cars in the class "not over $850" totaled 16,828 units valued at $7,072,762, representing gains of 202 per cent in number and 168 per cent in value over the last quarter of 1932 and an improvement of 31 per cent in number and 22 per cent in value compared with the first quarter of 1932.

Shipments abroad of passenger cars for the first three months of this year amounted to 18,103 units valued at $8,565,718, compared with 13,781 units valued at $3,209,652 for the first quarter of 1932, and 6,988 units valued at $3,271,785 for the last quarter of 1932.

STOREY SILENT ON RETIRING AS ATCHISON HEAD

Topeka, Kas., April 27.—(AP)—At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway today W. B. Storey of Chicago, president, said he did not desire to make a statement concerning published reports that he would resign at the meeting of the board of directors in New York next Tuesday and that Samuel T. Bledsoe, chairman of the executive committee and general counsel for the line, would succeed him.

Freight car loadings increased 1,000 this week over last week, the seventh consecutive week of traffic gains. Yesterday's business was the heaviest since Nov. 16.

New York City Planning 50 Million 1 Year Issue

New York, April 27.—New short term financing in the probable amount of $50,000,000 is expected to be done by New York state next week. On Tuesday an issue of $75,000,000 of the state's 2¾ per cent one year notes will mature. The notes to be issued will not form part of a refunding program, but will be drawn to run for one year against 1934 taxes, which will become payable on April 4, 1934.

Bethlehem Reports Loss; Orders Rise

A deficit of $5,769,451 for the quarter ended March 31, 1933, was reported yesterday by the Bethlehem Steel corporation. This compares with a deficit of $3,685,769 for the like period in 1932 and of $5,621,672 for the last quarter of 1932. The losses were after all charges, including interest, depreciation and depletion.

Operation of the company and its subsidiaries, after ordinary costs of manufacture, resulted in a loss for the March quarter of $866,144 compared with a loss of $566,937 in the preceding quarter and an income of $1,431,657 for the like period in 1932.

Orders Up Eight Millions.

The corporation reported that orders on hand as of March 31, 1933, totaled $38,360,601 compared with $30,568,937 as of Dec. 31, 1932, and with $35,372,318 on March 31, 1932.

Operations were at 15.8 per cent of capacity during the March, 1933, quarter compared with 23.4 per cent in the like period of 1932, and of 13 per cent in the December, 1932, quarter. Present operations are reported as being at about 23 per cent of capacity.

When asked what rate of operations the corporation needed to show a net profit, President Eugene G. Grace said that depended upon the price structure, and that as a guess, he would say that operations at 40 per cent of capacity would "turn the tide," although he emphasized that such a figure was merely a guess. He said the company had made substantial economies, but now needed a higher price structure.

Rise Not All Seasonal.

The steel executive said he did not want to make any prediction about the future, but added, "I do not think that all of the improvement we have had in business recently is merely a seasonal rise."

Asked if the thirty hour week bill would increase employment in the industry, he said a recent survey of the industry showed that the men today are working only about twenty-eight hours per week.

Mr. Grace said it was too early to predict that the decline in the dollar would increase exports, but acknowledged in response to a question that it might curtail imports.

HOARDERS DEFY ROOSEVELT CALL TO RETURN GOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—With only four more days left before the deadline for returning hoarded gold, the administration's anti-hoarding campaign still has failed to round up 45 per cent of the gold outstanding, the federal board revealed today.

Of 1 billion 385 million dollars in gold and gold certificates which were outstanding just before the banking holiday, only between 700 and 750 million dollars have been returned from hoards, the reserve board's figures show. More than 600 million dollars worth of gold is still in safety deposit boxes or in circulation.

The government is prepared to fight for the return of this gold under the terms of President Roosevelt's anti-hoarding orders, it was indicated today at the treasury and justice departments. A few conspicuous prosecutions of hoarders will do much to accelerate the return of the precious metal, officials predicted.

What line of attack will be followed in rounding up the laggard gold was not indicated by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings but he again assured prompt action. Treasury officials declared that further gold returns would be slow but could and would be speeded up.

REINSURING PLAN FOR ILLINOIS LIFE IN JUDGE'S HANDS

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson took under advisement at the close of court yesterday the question of approving or rejecting the reinsurance contract offered to the 70,000 policyholders of the Illinois Life Insurance company by James S. Kemper & Co., insurance engineers.

Thus ended two weeks of hearings during which attorneys for a half dozen groups of dissenting policyholders and agents attacked the contract from various angles, principally on the claim that it would allow the Kemper interests a profit disproportionate to the risk on the $1,250,000 of new money they promise to provide. The new company would be known as the Mutual Protective Insurance company.

Several weeks are expected to elapse before a decision is announced. The court has already indicated that if the Kemper contract is disapproved, he will order the Illinois Life assets liquidated for whatever cash they may bring in a lump sum to the policyholders. In such a liquidation, the policyholders would be obliged to seek new insurance policies elsewhere, except the older policyholders, who could get no insurance at all, except at prohibitive premiums.

Deadline on Middle West Claims Extended to July 1

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday extended until July 1 the deadline for filing claims against the Middle West Securities company. After that date all claims were to be barred, it was stated. The extension was made at the request of the receivers.

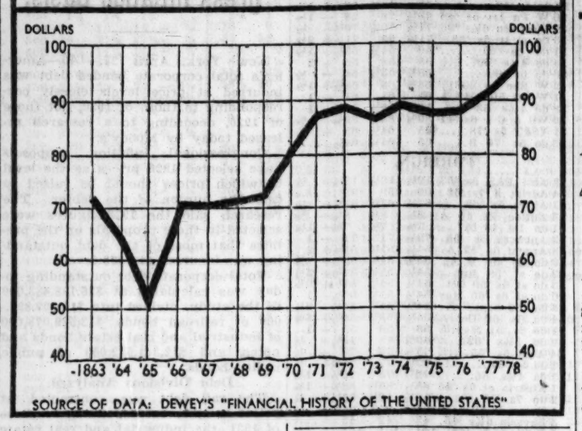
St. Louis Custom House Job Awarded to Chicago Firm

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—The treasury today awarded to the N. P. Severin company, Chicago, the contract for constructing the new courthouse and customs house at St. Louis, Mo. The company, which bid $2,623,277, has 640 calendar days to complete the work.

Pennsy Names New York Train for Chicago's Fair

The Pennsylvania railroad announced yesterday that it has renamed one of its New York-Chicago trains in honor of A Century of Progress. Beginning with Sunday, the Mercantile Express will be known as the Progress Limited.

Average Annual Value in Gold of $100 in Greenbacks During and Following the Civil War



SOURCE OF DATA: DEWEY'S "FINANCIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES"

INFLATION DURING CIVIL WAR MADE CURRENCY VARY

Greenbacks' Gold Price Followed War Tide.

BY REUBEN CAHN.

One plank in the national administration's inflation scheme provides for an issue of three billion dollars worth of United States notes. Popularly called greenbacks, this variety of money was first issued during the civil war. Originally the notes were legal tender for all obligations except customs of the United States government, an exception that was made to enable the federal treasury to acquire gold to meet the requirements in its bonds that interest be paid in gold.

The government in the civil war emergency made no move, such as is currently being made to induce folks with gold to turn it in and receive paper money in exchange. Gold holders could hoard their metal without fear.

The paper money varied constantly in relation to gold and an exchange was set up for trading in gold. The chart above shows the average annual value in gold of $100 of these greenbacks. The daily variation covered, of course, a wider range. At one time a dollar in paper was worth only 35 cents in gold.

Factors which affected these fluctuations were as follows:

1. The size of the outstanding issue of greenbacks. All of the 400 million dollars outstanding at the end of the war was not put out at once.

2. The fortunes of war. A victory for the north made the currency worth more—a defeat made it worth less.

3. The changing provision for exchange into bonds. The withdrawal of this privilege provided originally depreciated the value of the greenbacks.

4. The condition of the treasury.

5. Personnel of the treasury department.

6. Popular response to an offering of bonds. If the response was good, evidencing confidence in the government, the value of greenbacks went up.

A total of $346,681,016 of the original issue of greenbacks is still outstanding. Since 1879, when redemption was begun, there has been no reason for greenbacks being worth any less than any other kind of American money.

ILLINOIS TRADE GROUP OPPOSED TO LABOR BILL

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce, through C. G. Ferris, executive vice president, yesterday outlined to Kent E. Keller and Walter Nesbitt, Illinois members of the house labor committee, its reasons for opposing the present labor bill.

"Our feeling is that we are confronting no crisis which demands that hours of labor, minimum wages, and production be regulated by legislative enactment," the statement reads. "Over the last fifty years employers and employés have voluntarily by negotiation adjusted matters in which they have had a mutual interest.

"We are opposed to this type of legislation on principle and are convinced that if the proposal should become a law industry in Illinois would be severely injured and labor itself in the long run would not benefit. Business organizations in this state are practically unanimously opposed to this type of legislation.

"None of us is opposed to shortening the hours of labor and voluntarily attempting to adjust wages and other matters of mutual interest to employer and employé. Practically all manufacturers and business men today are very broad minded."

Chicago Home Sold by Wife of Martin Insull

BY AL CHASE.

Mrs. Martin J. Insull, now in seclusion in Canada with her husband, brother of Samuel Insull, yesterday sold her residence at 428 North Sheridan road, in Highland Park, to M. Ralph Cleary, La Salle street investment broker, at an undisclosed price.

The house was built by Mrs. Insull about twelve years ago and title has always been in her name. Until last summer, Mr. and Mrs. Insull and their daughter, Virginia, now Mrs. W. A. Rafferty, lived there.

Plan of House.

The Insull house is of colonial design, of frame construction, with shingled sides. It has three master bedrooms and three baths, three maids' rooms and bath, a living room, dining room, and service rooms. There are three fireplaces in the house, one in the living room, one in the dining room, and a third in the basement recreation room.

In addition to the main residence, there is a guest house designed along the same architectural lines. This colonial cottage has five rooms. There are two bedrooms, a bath, a living room, kitchen, and dining room.

Lot Is 175 by 300 Feet.

In addition, the property, which fronts 175 feet on North Sheridan road and is 300 feet deep, has a greenhouse and a two car garage. Fred R. McZeity of Murray & Terry was broker in yesterday's transaction.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleary, who are now living at 369 Hazel avenue, will move into the former Insull home in two or three weeks. Mr. Cleary is a member of the Chicago Stock exchange and is head of Cleary & Co., 120 South La Salle street.

LOGAN & BRYAN, BROKERS, RETIRE; TRANSFER TRADE

New York, April 27.—(AP)—Logan & Bryan, security and produce brokers with branches throughout the United States and Canada, announced today its retirement from business, effective as soon as the accounts of its customers are transferred to other brokers.

E. F. Hutton & Co. will take over accounts of the Logan & Bryan offices in Coronado, San Diego, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Pasadena, Hollywood, and Beverly Hills, Cal. Accounts in Vancouver and Victoria, B. C., will be taken over by Jenks, Gwynne & Co.; those in Grand Rapids, Mich., Chicago, San Francisco, and Seattle by E. A. Pierce & Co.; in Oil City, Pa., by J. S. Bache & Co.; in Duluth, Minn., by Paine, Weber & Co., and in Omaha, Neb., by Jackson Brothers, Boesel & Co.

TIRE PRICE INCREASE OF 5–10% FORECAST WITHIN A FEW DAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 27.—It is expected in the tire trade that Akron manufacturers will announce an increase in the price of tires on or about May 1. The prospective increase will range from 5 to 10 per cent, according to this report.

The advance will be based on the rise in the price of crude rubber and to a less extent on the higher cost of cotton. Since the inflation movement started a few weeks ago the price of crude rubber has risen nearly 1 cent a pound, or from 3 13-16 cents to 4¼ cents. That is equivalent to an increase of 25 per cent in cost of the principal raw material entering into the manufacture of tires.

The last change in tire prices was a reduction made in March. At that time three of the largest tire manufacturers adopted a new price policy when they reduced the differential between their prices and those of mail order houses and at the same time dropped production of low grade tires entirely, leaving them only two lines. On the latter prices were reduced in the readjustment to the extent of about 20 per cent.

Increased demand for tires is reported in the trade. It is believed to reflect a real pickup in business, not merely replacement demand, although the latter is large. The improved demand has led to increased production which in turn has caused larger consumption of crude rubber.

TOURISTS WIPE OUT FAVORABLE TRADE BALANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—The world reaped more from American tourists last year than the United States made on all its mercantile dealings with all other countries, the department of commerce announced today.

Foreign trade in merchandise left the United States with a favorable balance of 289 million dollars, but tourist business here and abroad resulted in an unfavorable balance of 375 millions, according to the department.

American tourists spent 446 million dollars abroad last year while foreign visitors spent only 71 millions here. American tourists' expenses abroad were about four and a half times larger than the war debt payments which foreign nations made to this country last year.

Immigrants Export 138 Millions.

Immigrants living in this country sent more money to their relatives back home than debtor governments paid to the United States. Their remittances to folks back home were estimated at 138 million dollars last year. War debt payments aggregated only 99 millions.

If America were not a large financial creditor, her current dealings with the world last year would have left her with an unfavorable balance of payments. Interest, dividend and commission payments to the United States last year, however, brought in a sizable net balance of 393 million dollars, the largest net credit on Uncle Sam's international ledger.

U. S. Balance Favorable.

The result of all current transactions last year was to leave the United States with a favorable balance of payments amounting to 131 million dollars. Favorable balances in trade, war debt payments, and interest payments more than covered unfavorable balances of freight charges, tourist trade, immigrant remittances, charitable contributions and government transactions other than war debts.

Meanwhile, long term capital moved toward the United States, and short term capital drifted away. The department estimates American money markets suffered a net loss of 371 million dollars in short term capital. A net balance of 217 millions in long term capital accrued to this country, however, leaving a total net loss of 154 millions on capital movements.

Foreign Financing Drops.

Foreign financing in this country, however, dropped to a new low level after congressional exposure of foreign securities. Foreign capital obtained in this country amounted to 88 million dollars last year, the department revealed. Of this amount, 59 million dollars was refinancing, leaving only 29 millions of new capital.

This is the lowest level for new foreign capital issues in this country since 1918, when there was a practical embargo on foreign private loans here, the department announces.

CLEVELAND BANK REGAINS DEPOSITS AS RUMORS DIE

Cleveland, O., April 27.—(AP)—Cleveland Trust company depositors who were anxious to get their money out of the city's largest bank yesterday seemed just as anxious to get it back in again today.

Deposits at the bank's main downtown office during the day told the story of victory over a "whispering campaign" which federal secret service men are investigating. In the morning, deposits were equal to withdrawals, bank officials said. At noon they crept ahead.

By the end of the day, deposits were strongly exceeding withdrawals, which officials said had declined to those of normal business or less.

BANK CLEARINGS UP HALF BILLION FOR THIS WEEK

New York, April 27.—(AP)—Bank clearings in the United States during the week ended April 26 rose $550,275,000 from the previous week to a total of $3,839,956,000, says the report of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The decline from a year ago was 9.4 per cent.

The improvement represented largely a more favorable showing at New York, the agency said, as activity in the metropolitan financial markets increased bank settlements considerably. A year ago clearings dropped $549,134,000 from the previous week.

Steel Production Reported Highest in 14 Months

New York, April 27.—(AP)—Production of steel is at 27 per cent of capacity, the highest in fourteen months, the Daily Metal Trade said today.

Inflation's Boon to Booksellers; Lawyers Fall for a New Racket

With the headlines featuring news of money and inflation, an unusual interest has been aroused in books dealing with the subjects, according to leading Chicago booksellers and libraries.

Many volumes which have been dozing under a coat of dust on some obscure shelf for months are now finding a ready market. Books dealing with the history of money and inflation have been in great demand the last few days.

There has been a steady demand for books on general economic questions for months, but the interest has centered recently on money matters.

Two classes of persons are interested in the subject, according to A. Kroch, head of the store bearing his name. One group, he states, consists of those who have little conception of what "inflation" means. The others are those who have some background on the subject but want more exact information on the history of inflation in those countries which have experimented with it.

The demand has been so great that two new books are being rushed through printing, by leading publishers.

The public library experienced its greatest demand during the banking holiday, when it was impossible to fill the requests for books dealing with United States banks and banking. J. M. Youngman of Brentano's states that there has been an unusual demand for books on all financial, economic, and business subjects.

Several La Salle street lawyers sheepishly admit they've fallen for a brand new racket—worked by an attractive woman. The feminine racketeer, not only good looking but well dressed, asks the attorney if he handles divorce suits. Whether he does or not, she speeds on to say that it's her sister who wants the knot untied and that she'll pay a good stiff fee—in fact, she's willing to pay as high as $2,000.

Then she's surprised to find she hasn't any change in her purse and, as she plans doing some shopping, would the lawyer lend her $5. Strange to say, some of our hardest boiled barristers promptly hand over a bill.

The lawyer who told the story said his suspicions were roused by the size of the fee. "If you'd offered to pay $200 I might have taken on the case—and loaned you the five—but $2,000 is too much," he told her. She merely smiled and later this lawyer, who happens to be one of Chicago's best known attorneys, learned that she garnered in an imposing array of $5 fees along La Salle street.

Statistics—stale or fresh—are the fetish of most economists. The production of statistics in the United States is prodigious. The federal reserve board and various member banks issue literally millions of digits weekly on some phase of the economic situation. Before many of these studies are made public the facts are old. Yesterday the Chicago reserve bank made public its reports on wholesale trade and auto sales for the month ended March 15, which included the bank holiday. It's not exactly hot news.

For the first time in several weeks the lights failed to blaze in the offices of La Salle street brokerage houses last night. Trade in stocks and commodities yesterday was lighter. Heads of leading houses, however, were inclined to regard the letup in business as a lull before a storm.

Bankers familiar with the market for United States government bonds express the belief that the treasury will not allow the soon-to-be-issued $500,000,000 three year notes to sell below par, even if the federal reserve banks have to be called into to manipulate the price, which is considered unlikely. Four banks are reported to have subscribed for half the issue.

* *

Holders of United States government bonds have been curious concerning what the administration may do in an inflation market to prevent a decline in the price of "governments." One authority says he thinks that, if it's found necessary, the bonds may be made transferable into cash at the federal reserve. That would peg them effectively.

British Loan to France Lifts Dollar

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 27.—The price of the British pound in foreign exchange markets fell suddenly 7 cents early today. This means that the price of the American dollar, as related to the pound, rose correspondingly. The pound fell to $3.73 and then rallied to $3.73¾.

The new deal by which the British and French treasuries coöperate in efforts to strengthen British control of the pound and to save France from having to use her great store of gold is understood to have been put into operation late yesterday or early today.

France Uses British Fund.

Under this plan francs either already held by the British treasury or acquired by it through sales of sterling against francs are loaned to the French treasury, which gives its notes to the British. Thereby the French obtain the use of a sizeable part of the huge British "equalization fund" to finance the needs of their treasury.

Whether the French or the British were selling sterling and acquiring francs was a matter of opinion here. One well informed dealer reported the French were the active party, partly to support the franc but chiefly to obtain some of the British equalization funds for use of their treasury in meeting its domestic requirements.

Supports Dollar Indirectly.

It was also asserted that the British treasury was forcing upward the price of the dollar, as it did before the embargo was put on gold exports by President Roosevelt; but the object is being attained, not through direct selling of sterling against the dollar but through sales of the pound and purchases of French francs and then lending the francs back to the French treasury.

This saves the Bank of France from having to send gold to England when the franc rises to the gold export point against the pound. As a result of this arrangement, the French franc fell 4¼ points to $0.431½, its lowest point of yesterday, compared with the dollar. Later the franc rallied to $0.0433. This leaves the dollar at a discount of 11 per cent in relation to the gold franc.

Four More State Banks Given Permits to Reopen

State Auditor Barrett announced last night that four more state banks have been given authority to reopen this morning. They are:

SUBLETTE—Farmers State Bank of Sublette.

ATLANTA—People's Bank of Atlanta.

ST. LIBORY—State Bank of St. Libory.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 27.—Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin tonight closed the subscription books on the current half billion dollar offering of three year 2¾ per cent treasury notes to all classes of subscribers.

At the same time, the secretary announced a new 60 million dollar bill issue, to be dated May 3, and to add still more money to the treasury's cash. The current note offering will bring in 260 millions in excess of refinancing requirements.

Most of the additional money is going to cover the treasury's deficit. Much of it is being used through the Reconstruction Finance corporation in rebuilding banks.

Woodin previously had closed the subscription books on the notes, which will be issued May 2, to all subscribers except those asking for $10,000 or less. The effect of tonight's closing was to end popular, as well as large, subscriptions for the issue.

Tenders for the new bills will be received by the federal reserve banks up to 2 p. m. eastern standard time, on May 1, the secretary said. The bills will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 27.—The Anaconda Copper Mining company reports for 1932 a consolidated net loss of $16,893,240 after expenses, interest, depreciation and obsolescence, and expense pertaining to nonoperating units, but before depletion of copper lands and an inventory writedown of $9,914,440, which was charged to surplus. This compares with a net loss of $3,168,523 in 1932 before an inventory adjustment of $7,449,460, also charged against surplus.

Notes payable as of Dec. 31, 1932, amounted to $70,500,000. Current assets totaled $92,016,361, and current liabilities $79,731,792. Bonds of subsidiary companies, amounted to $35,315,000, surplus account was reduced to $42,061,546 at the close of 1932. Total assets were $694,080,703.

Cornelius F. Kelley, president, in his statement to stockholders, says that the gross sales and earnings upon a consolidated basis amounted to $52,295,610 and that the cost of sales, including all operating expenses, current development, maintenance charges, repairs, selling and general expenses and taxes totaled $57,240,906, resulting in an operating loss of $4,945,295.

JUGGLING OF WORLD'S MONEY THREAT TO U. S.

Other Nations Want Costly Dollar.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The dollar yesterday bobbed up still higher in foreign exchange transactions, thereby demonstrating that it takes more than abandonment of the gold standard to keep down the value of a nation's currency.

This strong tendency of the dollar may have an important effect this summer when the world economic conference is held in London. The word from Washington is that the dollar, being unhooked from gold, is merely to be allowed to "find its own level," the inference being that British and other currencies off the gold standard have found their proper levels by natural means.

Recent utterances in Washington have led the public to believe that when the time comes for the various nations, by agreement, to revalue their respective currencies, the going values of those currencies in foreign exchange will have much bearing on the level at which they go back on a gold basis.

Bears of World Trade.

What these new relationships between the dollar, the pound, the franc, and other currencies will be nobody can predict at this stage, but whatever the relationships are they will be extremely important, for the nation with a relatively lower currency will be better equipped to compete for foreign trade in the markets of the world.

When the dollar was officially removed from the gold standard two weeks ago it dropped sharply in foreign exchange transactions. The pound sterling, which previously had been selling at approximately $3.45 for some time, immediately shot up to above $3.80 and later sold above $3.90.

This was exactly what the British didn't want to happen, for it partially destroyed the foreign trade advantage they had gained in cheapening their currency in the fall of 1931 when they abandoned the gold standard.

British Drive Dollar Up.

The British distinctly want a cheap pound and a dear dollar. They have even set aside the tremendous sum of three-quarters of a billion dollars to manipulate foreign exchange to that end. Before the United States abandoned the gold standard the British government, through this equalization fund, regularly bought dollars and sold pounds just to keep pounds cheap.

Now that the first shock of America's abandonment of the gold standard is over, the British seem to be returning to the old game. And this time they are seemingly doing it in coöperation with the French.

The scheme seems to be to keep the pound cheap and the dollar dear until the readjustment of world currencies is taken up, the idea possibly being that this relationship favorable to the British but unfavorable to the United States could then be frozen into the new fixed relationships between the currencies.

Under the Anglo-French coöperative plan, supposedly placed in operation yesterday or late Wednesday, the British are forcing down the price of the pound by buying francs and selling sterling.

Leagued Against U. S.

Then the French government, which has been spending more money than it can collect from its taxpayers, borrows the francs back from the British to plug up the holes in the French deficit.

If the United States is going to benefit from the coming revaluations of world currencies, therefore, it will have to do one of two things, either do some manipulating of foreign exchange on its own or refuse to be taken in later on by the suave suggestion that the going rate of exchange represents the "natural" ratio between the pound and the dollar and should be preserved in the currency revaluing program.

CLAIMS DOHERTY MADE 17 MILLION PROFIT IN STOCK

U. S. Expert Cites Deal in Cities Service.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—(AP)—The federal trade commission was told today that Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate, in March, 1929, realized a $17,748,032 profit by sale of 200,000 shares of Cities Service company common stock, while almost simultaneously increasing his control in the company by one million votes.

This testimony was given by Thomas W. Mitchell, examiner-economist, in presenting a detailed study of the operations of Cities Service Securities company, a wholly owned subsidiary of Cities Service company. The sale, he said, was shown by the income tax return of Henry L. Doherty and company, of which Doherty was "sole proprietor," to have brought $20,500,000 for the shares whose cost was listed at $2,751,967.

Subsidiary Bought Stock.

The sale, however, was not on the market but directly to Cities Service Securities company, which held the shares. The transfer was on March 31. Next day, Mitchell said, the stock was quoted at 120¾.

He said company representatives assigned as reason for the sale that Doherty had been seriously ill since some time in 1926 and that he needed the proceeds of the sale to pay off "a large accumulation of personal debts and to provide ready cash with which to pay inheritance taxes" in event of his death so as to safeguard the estate from forced sale shrinkage.

Ten days prior to the sale of the stock, Mitchell said, the Doherty management took steps toward increasing his voting power in Cities Service to one million votes. The shares sold represented 40,000 votes.

Recalls Split Up of Stock.

The steps toward greater voting strength involved reclassification of Cities Service common from par value to non-par with substitution of four shares for one, and the creation of a new class of non cumulative $1 par stock of one million shares to be sold to Henry L. Doherty & Co. at par. The board of directors, Mitchell said, recommended this to the stockholders of Cities Service and the stockholders approved.

Great Atlantic and Pacific.

Please furnish me with such data as you have on Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company.—S. W. W.

Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company of America, largest grocery chain in the world, operates about 15,500 outlets. More than 90 per cent of the company's leases are for one year, with optional renewals.

Decline in prices of food products and reduced purchasing power in 1932 brought net sales below the billion dollar mark for the first time since the Feb. 28, 1929, year. Sales for the Feb. 28, 1933, year aggregated $864,048,000. Although tonnage volume decreased only 4 per cent from the preceding year, dollar volume dropped 14.3 per cent. Sales for the fiscal year ended Feb. 25, 1932, totaled one billion eight million dollars.

Reflecting a 4.82 per cent decline in tonnage sales, dollar sales for the five weeks to April 1, 1933, amounted to $74,981,000, 15.68 per cent under sales of $88,923,000 for the corresponding 1932 period.

In the year ended Feb. 25, 1933, the company earned $22,733,000, equal to $10.02 per common share. Net for the Feb. 29, 1932, year was $29,793,000, or $13.40 per common share. Per share earnings for the preceding years were $13.86, $11.77, and $11.02.

The company has minimized inventory losses by rapid inventory turnover. In 1932 turnover was 17 times, against 19 times in 1931 and 15.2 times in 1929.

On Feb. 28, 1933, current assets were $156,729,000 and current liabilities were $30,982,000.

There is no funded debt. Capital consists of 260,362 shares of preferred and 2,086,748 shares of no par common. The common pays regular dividends of $1.25 a quarter. Extras total 25 cents a quarter.

Both the preferred and the common are high grade.

Silver for Dollars.

Does the United States government stand ready to redeem a one dollar certificate with one dollar's worth of silver at market quotations as it formerly did with gold in the case of a gold certificate?—G. J.

No, the United States government does not stand ready to redeem a one dollar certificate for silver on the basis of present market quotations.

Each silver certificate is secured dollar for dollar by standard silver dollars held in the treasury for its redemption on demand. The standard silver dollar has a weight of 412.5 grains and a fineness of 900/1,000ths. Its ratio to gold is 15.988 to 1. This is much less than the current market price.

If your purpose is to exchange your currency for silver metal (as contrasted to silver currency) it would be more advantageous to buy the silver on the open market than to exchange your currency at the treasury.

The silver dollar is legal tender.

GRAINS DECLINE WHEN TRADERS RESUME SELLING

Public Buying Cushions Sag in Wheat.

WHEAT IN U. S. FUNDS

Wheat prices in leading markets reduced to United States funds at rates of exchange when they closed:

	Thursday.	Week ago.
Chicago, May	67½c	68⅜c
Winnipeg, May	49⅛c	50⅛c
Do No. 2 Man	47⅝c	48⅜c
Liverpool, May	53⅛c	53⅞c
Do Argentine	55⅜c	56⅜c
Buenos Aires, May	40½c	40¾c
Rotterdam, May	3.47¾c	47⅝c

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Commission houses again supported the wheat marnet yesterday on the minor declines, while profit-taking and local pressure appeared on the bulges. The result was extremely erratic price changes with a range of around 1½ cents, but the bears had a moderate advantage at the close, as net losses for the day were ⅝ to 1 cent, with the distant futures showing the most less.

So far this week, July wheat has held within a range of 3⅝ cents despite radical developments favorable to either side of the market and an active speculative trade. There were signs yesterday that both sides were inclined to await further developments. Trading was on a smaller scale than has been witnessed for several weeks.

Wheat Closes Near Bottom.

Final trades were about at the bottom, with May finishing at 67⅝ to 67⅞ cents, while July was 67⅝ to 67⅞-68 cents, September 63⅝ to 63⅞ cents, and December 71 to 71⅛ cents.

That there has been a marked enlargement in public participation in the wheat market lately was indicated by the increase of 3,972,000 bushels in the open interest on Wednesday, the total being swelled to 150,616,000 bushels for all deliveries. This is the largest aggregate since the middle of November.

Inflation talk was regarded as the dominating influence in bringing in public buying of wheat futures, while the professional element were said to have been considerably impressed with the improvement indicated in the winter wheat crop in the west and southwest, due to the recent heavy rains.

Eastern Longs Sell Corn.

Liquidation of a liberal line of long corn, which was attributed to the east, started in the last half hour yesterday and disclosed a lack of aggressive support. Net losses were ⅞ @ 1⅛ cents, with May at 34⅜ to 34½ cents, July 38⅞ cents, September 38⅝ cents, and December 40⅛ cents.

Oats and other grains were affected by the action of wheat and corn, and prices were on the downgrade toward the last. Scattered longs went out of their holdings of oats, which closed ½ to ⅝ cent lower. May finished at 23¾ to 23⅞ cents and July at 23½ cents. Rye declined 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents, with some liquidation by longs in evidence. May closed at 45 cents and July at 45⅝ to 45¾ cents.

Demand for barley was less active and an effort on the part of holders to sell futures disclosed a lack of support. Prices declined 1⅞ to 2¼ cents, with May closing at 34 cents; July, 36 cents; and September, 37⅜ cents.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Fresh eggs continue in active demand with prices ¼c higher. Receipts, 42,106 cases. Butter was ½@¾c lower with receipts 10,907 tubs. Potatoes weaker for western and dull on northern, while new potatoes were steady. Live hens were off ½c and geese 1c lower. Receipts, 1 car and 45 trucks.

BUTTER FUTURES LOWER

Heavy selling caused a sharp break in butter futures on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, November closing with a net loss of ¾c. Egg futures were unchanged to ¼c lower. November butter fell back ½c at the opening, recovered slightly on new buying but toward the close started declining again with new selling and profit taking along the recession. News was mixed. The centralizers reported production 2 per cent less than last year, but the inward movement of storage stocks was greater than last year. Eggs were higher near the opening, but at the close pressure gained headway and the market reacted. The four markets reported 10,000 cases more in than last year. Sales: Butter, 71 cars; eggs, 120 cars. Deliveries: Eggs, 3 cars. Prices follow:

LESS TRADE IN COTTON; PRICES AVERAGE LOWER

Trading in cotton is more professional and the range of prices is confined to a comparatively narrow range due to the uncertainty regarding action in Washington. There was moderate strength at times and every little upturn brought moderate selling. Advices from abroad suggested that foreign and domestic trade interests were apparently absorbing cotton on all breaks.

At the close futures in Chicago were 4 to 10 points lower, and in other markets 3 to 7 points lower. Spots in New York were unchanged at 7:60 cents, New Orleans 5 points lower at 7.40 cents, Houston at 7.35 cents, and Galveston 7.30 cents; Liverpool was up 15 to 16 points at the close. HOG PRICES HOLD DESPITE HEAVIER RUN OF RECEIPTS

Cattle Supply Also Large, but Still Higher.

An easier undertone developed in hogs after a steady to strong opening yesterday, with prices in some classes giving ground slowly during the afternoon. The trade was more or less unsettled, but a saving was made in lighter weights at the close. the finish in top kinds being as much as 5 to 10 cents under the high point of Wednesday.

Medium and weighty stock, particularly the lard type hogs, maintained a steady basis most of the day. A range of $3.80 to $4.00 embraced the bulk of offerings weighing 175 to 350 pounds, while selected 190 to 235 pound averages topped the list at $4.05, 20 cents above the closing top last week.

Supplies Run Heavier.

Following Monday's unusually small receipts there was a substantial increase in the movement. Receipts have been running largest in more than two months. Yesterday's run at Chicago at 28,000 was the largest for a Thursday since the middle of January. Until this week supplies had been light.

The cattle market advanced to the highest price levels of the week against comparatively liberal offerings yesterday. The run at 7,500 was largest for a Thursday since Oct. 27 and was almost 40 per cent above the average for the last six Thrusdays.

Yet, the bulk of sales show gains of 15 to 25 cents compared with the close of last week, with top prices equal to the highest point since middle of last month. Swift boaght a load of 1,057 pound Illinois yearling steers at $7.10 yesterday, the week's top, for the United Dressed Beef trade in New York. The next highest sale of the day was $6.25, with the bulk of beef steers at $4.50 to $5.75, against $4.25 to $5.50 on Thursday of last week. Cows and heifers were steady to strong. Other cattle sold steady.

Lamb Trade Erratic.

Lamb prices advanced to the highest point since March 22 during midsession yesterday, but reacted and part of the 10 to 15 cents gains were erased at the close. Sellers balked at the extreme bearishness on the part of some buyers and refused to release their offerings at less than Wednesday's average prices. Some of the largest bands on the market were locked up on lower bids at the close.

Several loads on the midday bulge reached $6.10 and $6.15, showing 65 cents gain over the low point of last week. Fall shorn stock carrying an inch of wool sold to city butchers at $5.90, while freshly shorn lambs brought $5.65. A small lot of 65 pound native spring lambs sold to Swift at $7.50.

The Moler System of Colleges

One hundred women wanted at once to learn and be ready for jobs by June 1. Our short private lesson course—requiring but 6 weeks—is the only school that can qualify you in time. But you must start at once. Mr. Moler attained his success during the World's Fair of 1893. You can attain yours during the Century of Progress of 1933 by mailing the coupon, or if convenient call or phone.
